Let One of Your New Year's Resolves Be, "I Will Be Independent, Not at the Mercy of Any Man's Pocketbook."

The people of this district, and of the entire South, have got to learn the habit of saving and economy before they can ever become independent like their neighbors of the New England states and other sections where the savings bank is considered next to the church and school house in importance.

The Citizens Saving Bank was organized and is being conducted for the purpose of inculcating among the people the importance of thrift and saving, and is ready and anxious at all times to help you so far as we can along these lines.

The Citizens Saving Bank is the only important bank in the State which confines its banking business strictly and exclusively to Savings Accounts, and in this connection we ask you to read the Alabama law bearing on Savings Accounts, which we publish at the bottom of this page. We also print below an excerpt from the laws enacted for the protection of the vast number of savings depositors in the great savings bank State of Massachusetts. Read both of them. Each is a positive argument in favor of a strictly savings bank for savings deposits.

THE ALABAMA BANKING LAW.

Section 250 of the last Constitution provides that depositors in banks who have not stipulated for interest, shall, for their deposits, be entitled, in case of insolvency, to preference of pay over all other creditors, and this law applies to all banks, whether incorporated or not.

In other words, if a bank does both a savings business and a regular banking business, and should become insolvent, then the depositors who did not get interest on their deposits would have a preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings.

The Citizens Savings Bank accepts only savings accounts, hence every depositor stands on the same footing here.

THE MASSACHUSETTS BANKING LAW.

Extract from Section 3, Chapter 169, Acts of 1902, Massachusetts Statutes, reads:

"No savings bank .....shall occupy the same office or suite of offices with a national bank, trust company or other bank of discount, nor any office directly connected by means of doors or other openings in partitions with the office or suite of offices occupied by any such national bank, trust company or other bank of discount." The penalty for the violation of this section being not more than $500. Section 4 provides that "No president, vice president or treasurer of a savings bank shall hold the office or perform the duties of president, vice president, treasurer or cashier of a national bank, trust company or other bank of discount." The penalty for the violation of this section is also not more than $500.

DOINGS of CONGRESS

NO MORE FREE SEED GRAFT.

House Committee Eliminates Big Item From Agricultural Appropriation.

Washington, D. C.—Eight members of the House Committee on Agriculture struck from the Agriculture Appropriation bill an item of $242,000 designed to continue for another year the "free seed graft" which has grown to such enormous proportions during the administration of Secretary Wilson. Seven members voted against this reform. It is expected that the Agricultural Department's influence will be exerted to get this item back into the bill when it reaches the floor.

Appropriations carried by the bill aggregate between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. The estimates of the department would have been cut more if it had been possible to get satisfactory information as to expenditures from the department officials.

When the paragraph providing $242,000 for the free distribution of seeds was reached Representative Cocks, of New York, moved that it be stricken out. He was supported by Messrs. Wadsworth, of New York; Henry, of Connecticut; Haugen, of Iowa; Brooks, of Colorado; Adams, of Wisconsin; Lorimer, of Illinois, and Haskins, of Vermont. Against the reform were Messrs. Davis, of Minnesota; Bowie, of Alabama; Lamb, of Virginia; Iver, of South Carolina; Trimble, of Kentucky; Field, of Texas, and Candler, of Mississippi.

The Secretary of Agriculture buys seeds by contract wherever he desires to do so, without competition. The requisition of any Senator or member of Congress is quite enough to have the department send to any of his constituents large or small quantities of vegetable or flower seeds.

Originally the practice was designed simply to introduce into the United States vegetables and flower products heretofore not grown here with success. But as time went on the scope of the seed stock was widened until it included seeds for almost every variety of flowers and vegetables, shoots for apple, peach and orange trees and rare bulbs. In fact, a fine assortment of nursery supplies raised in the United States and purchasable at any nursery could be obtained free from a member of Congress.

ARMY APPROPRIATION PASSED.

Also Bill For Marking Northern Graves of Confederates.

Washington, D. C.—The House passed the Army Appropriation bill and also, amid applause from both sides, the Foraker bill, providing for the marking of the graves of Confederates buried in the North.

Points of order made to the provisions for a cable ship for the Atlantic Coast and to a ship for mine planting on the Pacific Coast eliminated these provisions from the Army Appropriation bill. The alleged powder trust came in for sharp criticism in debate and Democratic endeavor to have the Government begin the manufacture of its own powder met defeat both on points of order and finally by direct vote.

The Army bill, as passed, carries something more than $69,000,000.

OPENS CORPORATION FIGHT.

La Follette Seeks to Bar Railroads From Getting Coal Lands.

Washington, D. C.—Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin, fired the first gun in the battle he is expected to wage against the corporations. It was aimed at railroad ownership of coal lands.

The bill to wind up the affairs of the Five Civilized Tribes of Indians was under consideration. It contains a provision for the sale of a large quantity of coal and asphalt lands in Indian Territory. Senator La Follette submitted an amendment providing that no railroad which is a common carrier should, directly or through its officers or stockholders, be permitted to purchase any of these coal or asphalt lands.

BILL INCREASING SALARIES.

Makes President's $75,000 and Vice-President's $15,000.

Washington, D. C.—A bill readjusting official salaries was introduced by Senator Gallinger, of New Hampshire. The readjustments are to become effective on March 4, 1909. The salaries proposed by the bill are as follows: President, $75,000; Vice-President, $15,000; members of the Cabinet, $15,000; Speaker of the House of Representatives, $12,000; Senators and Representatives in Congress, $7500.

BEATEN PUGILIST DIES

Harry Tenny Expires in San Francisco Bath House After Fight.

NEIL'S BLOWS PROVE FATAL

Unfortunate Boxer Was Counted Out, But Referee Roche Failed to Hear the Timekeeper and Allowed the Fight to Continue—Mayor Schmitz to Investigate.

San Francisco, Cal.—Harry Tenny, who was knocked out by Frankie Neil, the bantam champion pugilist, in the fourteenth round of a prize fight at Mechanics' Pavilion, died the next day.

Helpless and without strength to strike a blow, Tenny had been literally beaten to the floor and was carried senseless to his dressing room. He was revived an hour later and complained of pains in his head and stomach. He steadily grew worse until death ended his sufferings.

Neil has been arrested, together with James Caffrath, "Eddie" Graney, Willis Britt, Morris Levy and Mark Shaughnessy, who officiated at the ring side. All are charged with manslaughter. They were later released in $500 bail.

After making an autopsy Coroner Surgeon Cussack announced that the pugilist's death was due to cerebral hemorrhage, caused probably by a blow.

Mayor Schmitz declares he will investigate Tenny's death and, if negligence concerning the condition of the pugilist is shown, he will recommend to the Supervisors that no more permits be issued for prize fights in San Francisco.

Some uneasiness was felt by promoters, seconds and others connected with the contest when the condition of Tenny after the knockout was noted. He went down before Neil's hard left hand blows, falling near the centre of the ring. The timekeeper counted him out, but in the noise of the shouting Referee Roche did not hear the completion of the count, and when Tenny staggered to his feet allowed the fight to proceed.

A howl of derision greeted the referee's ruling, but it was soon ended, for Neil went at his opponent like a madman and hammered him against the ropes. Tenny's head sank on his chest and his arms dropped to his sides. In this position Tenny was literally beaten to the floor by Neil and was counted out by the referee. He was carried to his dressing room and later to a bath house. Mark Shaughnessy attended Tenny at the bath. The beaten pugilist complained of terrible pains in his stomach and head. At 4 o'clock in the morning he fell asleep and the physician left, saying all danger was over. At 7.30 o'clock Shaughnessy was awakened by a cry from Tenny. The pugilist's body was doubled up in agony, and a hurry call was sent in for the Central Emergency ambulance. Before it arrived Tenny was dead.

TORNADO AT MERIDIAN.

Business Section of Mississippi City Swept Into Ruin.

Meridian, Miss.—At 6.30 o'clock in the evening a tornado from the south struck Meridian, sweeping directly through the business centre of the town, and during the twenty minutes it spent in passing destroyed approximately $5,000,000 in property.

It took the lives of perhaps thirteen white persons and twenty negroes.

At midnight the town was in darkness, the telegraph wires were all down, and the only communication with the outside world was over the long-distance telephone to New Orleans and Mobile.

Several fires started in the ruins, but the rain and the fire company together succeeded in quelling the flames.

The dead are: Mackey Slaughter, wife and daughter; Mrs. Singleton, Claude Williams, A. T. McInnis, a Mobile and Ohio conductor; William R. Nelson, City Marshal, and William Johnston.

Among the wounded are: Captain Charles Elmira, W. J. Woodside, T. H. Brown, Ernest Bennett, Frank Woodruff, Will Yarborough and A. C. Morrison.

"AL" M'PHAIL GOES BLIND.

Stricken in Theatre He Causes Surprise by Lighting a Match.

Pittsburg, Pa.—While attending a local theatre, "Al" McPhail, of New York, one of the best known circus men in the country, suddenly became blind.

Thinking it was a freak of his imagination, he lighted a match and held the flame before his eyes. His act attracted the attention of the audience and the players, and an usher hurried to him. He was found in a state of collapse.

A physician said that McPhail had been stricken with apoplexy.

KILLS SISTER'S HUSBAND

Tragedy in Brooklyn, N. Y., House Caused by a Death.

Funeral of the Murderer's Sister Set For 10 O'clock, He Shoots His Brother-in-Law at 8.

New York City.—A man ran out of the flat house at 156 West Ninth street, Brooklyn, at 8.30 o'clock in the morning. Around the corner of Court street he went, into S. Chess' drug store, and behind him he left a red trail on the pavement. The man was Fritz Fennen, a bartender. He had been shot by his brother-in-law, Thomas Beetman, a plumber.

Fennen fell dead as he entered the drug store. Back in 156 Beetman put a bullet through his head and killed himself instantly. Mrs. Fennen, who had died of blood poisoning, lay in her coffin in the front room of the flat awaiting burial. The funeral had been set for 10 o'clock.

Fennen married Beetman's sister only three months ago. She had been sick a month before her death. One story had it that Beetman blamed the husband for not giving proper care to the wife, and that this lay at the bottom of the crime. But Beetman's brother told the police that the plumber was angry because Mr. and Mrs. Fennen had taken his furniture and had not paid him. The police think that brooding over his troubles led Beetman to the shooting.

Beetman and Fennen ate breakfast together. The dead woman's brother had come to the house on her account, and addressed few remarks to his brother-in-law. There was no quarrel. When Fennen rose from the table Beetman quietly pulled a .44-calibre revolver and fired at him four times. Two shots took effect.

The wounded man made a dash for the door, bound for his pharmacist friend, Chess, to seek aid. As he went Beetman turned the pistol on himself. The first shot went wild and shattered a mirror hanging on the wall. The second went through his head and killed him instantly.

Mrs. Louise Lower, sister of Mrs. Fennen, and Mrs. Annie Larsen, a nurse, were sitting in the front room with the coffin. Hearing the first shots they ran into the dining room and narrowly escaped being hit by the flying bullets.

Policeman Mehaffy, of the Hamilton avenue station, was standing in Court street when Fennen ran out of the house. Hearing the man's cries and seeing the blood, Mehaffy ran toward him, but before he reached him Fennen was dead in the arms of the druggist. The floor of the little shop was soaked with blood.

In three minutes an ambulance had come, and the surgeon had pronounced the bartender dead. Mehaffy telephoned to his station, and the Sergeant sent four men to the scene of the tragedy. Leaving the telephone, Mehaffy followed the trail of blood into 156 West Ninth street, and there found Beetman dead, and the two women in hysterics.

A year ago Beetman was employed by the India Wharf Brewery, near the foot of Hamilton avenue. He got to drinking and was discharged. Shortly afterward his wife died. Up to that time his sister had lived with him in a flat in Sixteenth street, Brooklyn, and after the death of Mrs. Beetman acted as housekeeper. Then Fennen married her and took her away. Beetman went to live in a furnished room at 25 Atlantic avenue.

The druggist, Chess, said that Mrs. Fennen had had plenty of medical assistance, and was in the care of a good nurse.

The bodies of the dead men were given over to an undertaker. Mrs. Fennen's burial was postponed.

FATAL RIOT AT CHURCH.

French Gendarmes Fire on Mob at Le Puy—Fifteen Wounded.

Le Puy, France.—Serious disturbances occurred at the taking of an inventory of a village church near Saugues, Department of Haute-Loire. A large crowd armed with sticks and stones surrounded the gendarmes, many of whom were beaten or pelted with heavy stones. The gendarmes, in order to extricate themselves, fired their revolvers, wounding fifteen men, two of whom were mortally hurt. The officer commanding the gendarmes and the Government commissioner were badly injured by the rioters. The gendarmes retired with difficulty.

DEFENDS THE RATE BILL

Senator Dolliver Predicts a Public Ownership Movement.

CROWDED SENATE HEARS SPEECH

Iowa Senator Declares That the People Are Asking Why Some Men Make Hundreds of Millions, Even Overshadowing the Government—Upholds President Roosevelt's Policy.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, the chief champion of the Hepburn Rate bill, spoke in defense and explanation of that measure for two hours and ten minutes. It had been announced that he would reply to Senator Foraker, who opposed Government rate making in any form, but he did not go far in that direction.

Mr. Dolliver avoided court opinions and legal points. He spoke entirely from memory and did not employ technical phrases. He talked as a representative of the people, not as a constitutional lawyer, holding that it would be wise to pass the Hepburn bill so that the courts may pass on the validity of the principle involved. A decision either way as to the powers of Congress to delegate rate-making authority would be valuable to the people, he said.

Mr. Dolliver was greeted by even a greater audience than that which honored Senator Foraker. A large delegation of Representatives from the House side listened to the speech. Senator Foraker was not present. Senator Lodge was also absent. He is ill.

Mr. Dolliver referred to the fact that he had been charged with a tendency toward socialism, only to contradict it, saying that he did not desire to have the Government take charge of the business interests of the country. Yet, he asserted that "there is a storm brewing, and that the time is approaching when the citizens of the United States are going to make an inquiry into the right by which some men in a few years make hundreds of millions of dollars, rendering them capable of even overshadowing the National Government," and he predicted that if Congress did not agree upon a bill for the regulation of the railroads the country would be called upon to face the problem of Government ownership.

The Senator referred to the fact that Messrs. Foraker and Elkins had formerly introduced bills giving to the Interstate Commerce Commission the same powers conferred in the pending bill.

"Instead of undermining the law the bill fortifies it," he said, and he declared that if the present law had been treated with the reverence and sanctity it deserved, the American people would have approached it in a different frame of mind than that which prevails. He recognized the fact that it had become fashionable to speak slightingly of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and he defended that body against such attacks. He expressed the opinion that if the lawyers had dealt as fairly with the commission as with the courts the result would have been better.

Mr. Dolliver declared that he did not expect a protracted vendetta between the railroads and the business community, believing that when the law was enacted it would be observed by carrier and shipper alike. He predicted that within five years there would be boards of arbitration in every traffic centre of the country, so that appeals to the commission would be the rule rather than the exception.

Taking up the rebate question, Mr. Dolliver said that he did not agree with either Mr. Foraker or Mr. Bacon that the secret practices have been abandoned. He did not believe the Elkins bill adequate for protection against these practices.

"The difficulty about rebates is not in punishing violations of the law," he said, "but in discovering them, and we have undertaken to amend the law so as to cover that defect.

"Whether anyone believes anything I say here," said Mr. Dolliver, "I would like my friends to acquit me of that most grievous offense of exploiting my prejudices, or those of anyone else, against the great property interests of the country. Not a line in this bill has been drawn in hostility to the American railway system, but it is the furtherance of a better understanding between the American people and that great system.

"There never was until yesterday, when Mr. Foraker spoke, a shadow upon our right to regulate interstate commerce," he went on. He spoke in praise of the President, "the most superb moral leader of the generation." As for himself he was prepared for sneers, "but," he said, "I stand in a position I did not seek, but, consulting my conscience as a citizen and my honor as a Senator, I can take no other."

Commenting upon Mr. Foraker's criticism that the Hepburn bill is unconstitutional, Mr. Dolliver entered upon a line of argument to show that Mr. Foraker was mistaken, and that Congress has the power to regulate rates.

Mr. Dolliver replied to the criticism that he was manifesting a disposition toward democracy by denying it, and closed with another tribute to President Roosevelt, expressing the conviction that "the people would ever treasure in grateful hearts his blunt platform of a square deal for every man."

ALABAMA BRIEFS.

MAY FORM COMBINATION.

Administration Said to Be Against Certain Officeseekers.

Montgomery, Ala.—The latest sensational rumor in Alabama politics is that there may be a combination among certain of the candidates for state office to fight the present administration. This action, so it is rumored, has been forced on certain candidates because of the position taken by the present administration, it is alleged, in espousing the cause of certain other candidates.

It is said that Governor Jelks is bitterly opposed to two or three or even more of the candidates for office. It is even alleged that the governor has been instrumental in getting men to run for office to oppose those candidates who are known to be hostile to the administration as conducted by the present chief executive. Now, whether these candidates will get together and make the fight as a combination against the administration as now conducted, it is not known, but it is known that several of these candidates who oppose Governor Jelks are making it known throughout the state and do not seem to fear that it will in any way interfere with their success. It is thought that should these candidates get together and make the fight in a body on the administration then there will be some of the warmest politics the state has ever known.

Weakley to Be Busy.

Huntsville, Ala.—Judge Samuel D. Weakley, chief justice of the Alabama supreme court, who has been visiting in Huntsville, says he is entirely indifferent as to the method the democratic executive committee may adopt for nominating his successor. Either the primary or convention plan will be satisfactory to him, he says. Judge Weakley expects to be too busy from now on to devote any time to his campaign for the nomination, and this matter will be confided to a committee of the Birmingham bar, who will be associated with supporters of Judge Weakley throughout the state. Judge Weakley has the records of sixty cases on which he must write opinions.

New Surgical Operation.

Florence, Ala.—Dr. P. S. Boyd has just returned to his home in this city from Birmingham, where he successfully performed a most remarkable surgical operation.

Dr. Boyd was called to Birmingham several weeks ago to attend his little granddaughter, Catherine Boyd, who had been terribly burned, requiring the grafting of 120 inches of skin. In the place of human skin the membrane of egg shells was used with entire success. The eggs were broken and the membrane cut into the shape required. The discovery is a recent one, which has not been generally adopted by physicians, and this is the first time such an operation has been successfully performed in the state of Alabama.

Prominent Citizen of Abbeville Dead.

Montgomery, Ala.—James G. Cowan, who practiced law at Abbeville, in Henry county, many years, died at Tuscaloosa a few days ago. He was over 60 years old and served in the Confederate army. Among lawyers he ranked high, but was of such shrinking modesty that he never made the reputation a man of his intellect could have easily made by any sort of energy. He was a nephew of Senator Pugh and had many relatives in the state. He never married.

Found Dead in Bed.

Anniston, Ala.—Mr. William R. Griswold, a painter, was found dead in bed at his home, 1524 Cooper avenue, about midnight on Friday, the cause of death being given as heart disease.

Killed by Train.

Centreville, Ala.—Fannie Bishop, a negro woman, was instantly killed by a train on the Mobile and Ohio railroad at Brent, about a mile from Centreville. She attempted to cross the railroad track in front of a through freight train and was cut to pieces.

Politics in Henry.

Abbeville, Ala.—Several political questions of local importance, besides state issues, are before the people in the campaign now on. It is generally understood that the town of Headland will make an attempt to obtain a branch court. Abbeville and the northern portion of the county will oppose this on account of the extra expense involved. The contest will no doubt be an exciting one. The dispensary question will also be an issue that will play a conspicuous part in the campaign. There are a great many who are opposed to having a dispensary anywhere in the county.

The Rights of the Child Asleep

By Dr. Grace P. Murray.

IT is difficult to break mothers and nurses from the old custom of rocking children to sleep, but children and mothers alike should be emancipated from such bondage. When the time for sleeping has arrived the child should be put in its cradle or crib and left to woo sleep on his own account. Sceptics, who have never trained the child after this manner, may say that it is easier said than done. Not if you will begin with the child from the very first. The child is so much happier, and sleeps better. The child should not be tempted to sleep by means of his bottle. He should be kept awake to finish his meal comfortably, and the bottle should be then removed. The artificial nipple or "pacifier," which is often used to put the child to sleep, should not be put in the child's mouth for any reason whatever. Besides its uncleanliness, it may make the mouth sore and distort it; and it causes an excess flow of saliva. Children sleep better if the room is darkened to some extent. It is a good plan to have a dim light burning at night, so one can see to move about without having to make a light, for that disturbs a child in its sleep. Children should be often visited during their sleeping hours to make sure there is nothing the matter with them. Of course, children rest better if all is tranquil and quiet about them, but they should not become accustomed to too much quiet in the household so that they awaken at the slightest disturbance. Do not permit the baby to be educated into habits and ways in regard to his sleeping and nap-taking which will make him a little tyrant in the family.—The Delineator.

The Danger of Milk Preservatives

By Mary Hinman Abel.

WHATEVER difference of opinion there may be as to the use of small quantities of preservatives in other foods, physicians and hygienists are agreed in condemning their addition to milk because it is the food of infants, and the young of different species have been shown to be very susceptible to their effect. Not only is the preservative itself probably harmful, but by its use the poorest quality of milk can be palmed off on the consumer. Dirty milk is still dirty and dangerous, even though its souring point has been artificially changed. We may be certain that neither farmer nor dealer is going to use one extra precaution or an ounce of ice more than is needed to get his milk to market in good condition, and if he knows that he can fall back on the chemical to conceal that fatal sign of souring, and thus this double burden of bad milk and the action of the preservative is laid on the digestion of the little ones, who, if we may judge from the vital statistics, have a hard enough time at best to get through their first five years of life. All of the large cities insist that very little preservative is now added to milk, yet prosperous-looking agents continue to solicit, and well-informed people insist that immense quantities are used. Are the cities, with their small force of analysts unable to make thorough examinations, or are preservatives now in use that are less easily detected? Certain it is that vigilant inspection diminishes the evil, and where fines do not deter, imprisonment will. Still more important in reducing the use of preservatives is the enforcement of sanitary regulations at the farm and the use of ice in transportation.—Delineator.

A NEW MORSEL FOR EPICURES.

Mexico Has Produced It in Cactus Cheese--Other Uses Discovered For the Prickly Plant of the Southwestern Desert--Fodder For Dairy Animals--Developing Spineless Plants.....

NEW YORK epicures who yearn for more gastronomic worlds to conquer may find interest in a new confection which has been evolved in Mexico, and can be produced with equal ease on the barren wastes of the great Southwest. It is not customary for high livers to look to desert lands for their choice morsels, but in this case it must be admitted that Dame Nature has held in store for them a surprise which has been uncovered only through the industrious researches of the inquisitive agricultural scientists of to-day. The new confection is called by the Mexicans "queso de tuna," which means literally cactus cheese.

To give this announcement even the merest appearance of being founded upon fact, it must be explained that the cactus as it is generally known is nothing less than a wild plant, covered with prickly spines. These spines are intended by nature as deterrents to wild animals which would otherwise get into the habit of making the cactus their principal food supply. Were the spines lacking, the plant would quickly be exterminated through this demand for food. A great portion of the southwestern corner of the United States is absolutely unsuited to the growing of general crops, so that plants of any sort, however worthless they may appear to the casual traveler, have some value to the people who live there. It is not surprising then that such plants assume great value in the eyes of scientific experimenters whenever there is the slightest trace of qualities capable of development and adaptation to human needs. To this end investigations have been in progress for a year or two past to determine what useful results could be attained through the scientific development of the cactus plant, and all that has been discovered would fill a book.

The discovery of greatest interest is the production of this cactus cheese, which looks for all the world like a fine grade of chocolate, and which is made up in packages about the size of a pound of butter. It is wrapped in tinfoil to preserve it from deterioration. The Mexicans say it is a nutritious food, which is eaten with as much delight by the connoisseur as that individual shows in devouring some kinds of cheese which call for an acquired taste to permit of their thorough enjoyment. Personal corroboration of this can be given by the Evening Post's correspondent, who has tasted a duly authenticated, scientifically tested and officially approved sample of pure cactus cheese. One may be sure his future enjoyment of good things to eat will not be interfered with if he will never see another piece of cactus cheese in all his life. But then, as the scientific expert inquiries whether his visitor really liked Roquefort the first time he tasted it, and follows this up with a few other similar questions, the man who has had his first experience with cactus cheese nods his head and says, almost involuntarily, "Perhaps so." Those who are best acquainted with the products, however, declare that when the taste is once acquired, the cheese is an appetizing addition to the well-garnished table. Then there is the additional fact of the adaptability of the cactus plant stock, for, through other methods of preparation, there can be manufactured a syrup, and a sort of jelly which may be eaten with bread or cracker like the finest Scotch marmalade, or American apple jelly.

The addition to the list of eatables of a food susceptible of so many preparations as this is expected to prove of wide general interest. Now that the first secret of its value has been discovered, there is sure to be an evolution of the uses to which it may be put, and then undoubtedly there will spring up a new infant industry to be put upon the protected tariff list. It is not to be supposed that a plant which has been developed through scientific experiment to produce a new source of food supply for human consumption would not be investigated from the last inch of its lowest root to the pinnacle of its growth above ground. An inquiry made at the Department of Agriculture shows that this has in fact been done, and that as interesting results have been achieved regarding the value of the plant proper as of the food stock it produces.

The experiments were carried on with the idea of finding out whether the common prickly pear cactus from which the cheese is made could not be developed in such a way as to provide fodder for dairy animals. The first obstacle to overcome was to dispose of the spines which nature had given the plant for its own defense. The experimenters were aware that cattle will not eat the cactus in its natural state because of these spiny prickles, which are sure to lacerate their mouths and injure the animals in various other ways. Soon after the experiments were undertaken in the Southwest, it was found that if the plants were cut up and allowed to soak in their own juice for twelve or fourteen hours, the spiny prickles become harmless. After this treatment, the plants are greatly relished by the stock, especially the dairy animals. It has been demonstrated also that a ration of these soaked cacti combined with a little grain will keep a dairy animal in good flesh and milk as readily as the best corn ensilage.

Having found the good uses of this cactus plant for stock feeding when the spines are made harmless, the scientific experts have been working to obtain what is known as spineless forms, or "smooth types." Asked about the chances of cultivating and reproducing a plant bereft of nature's protecting spines, Dr. Calloway, chief of the bureau, said:

"These smooth cacti are occasionally found among the wild plants, but do not survive very long, from the fact that animals readily find them, and that they are particularly liked by jack rabbits. The fact that efforts have been made to secure spineless forms has probably not brought to the minds of some the difficulties that such types would have in holding their own in a region where they could not or would not be well protected by man. In other words, spineless cacti would soon be exterminated by many types of animals, as the spines are the real protective agencies."

This fact, therefore, will lead to the development of a more tender species, which will need protection just as garden vegetables do from predatory animals which feed upon them. Rabbits do great harm to crops in all parts of the country, but this has resulted in protection by fencing and systematic "drives" to keep down the number of rabbits and such other animals as would exterminate the crops if artificial protection were not given. The danger to the plant in its wild state will not prevent the development along these lines, and a valuable new crop is expected. This is not the sum total of the cactus plants' many uses. Another interesting feature is described by Dr. Galloway, as follows:

"Cacti and some of the other Southwestern plants which grow in a region of meagre rainfall are often used by the natives and travelers when water cannot be obtained. Many of these Southwestern plants have a special provision for storing water in underground stems. These stems grow to an enormous size, sometimes as large as a barrel, and when found may be dug up, and will give considerable quantities of water. These provisions are all the result of long adaptations, or, in other words, a combat between the plant itself and its natural surroundings. The result has been the development of these particular contrivances which enable the plant to take care of itself in times of stress."

From the standpoint of the human consumer, with the cactus cheese as a new delicacy, and of the stock raiser, who will have a new and cheap ration for feeding his stock, the cactus experiments promise valuable results along the lines here indicated.—Washington Correspondence New York Evening Post.

Printers' Humor.

"T. P." has collected some amusing instances of printers' errors, contributed by well-known authors. An English woman novelist, he says, tells of the mistake of a printer who made one of her characters say that "she stuffed papa into the grate, and soon there was a merry blaze." What she wrote was "paper."

Mr. E. Murray Gilchrist tells of a passage in an uncorrected proof which read as follows: "With the intent of improving her grandchildren's moral character, the pious old lady would recite every evening terse passages from the masterpieces of Boccaccio." The author has referred to Bogatsky, author of an old-fashioned religious manual on conduct.

W. W. Jacobs writes:

"The most amusing error in my case was made by a typist. I was describing the emotions of a man in a country lane coming in the dawn upon another man walking about tied to a chair. I wrote that ' . . . he was undecided whether it was a monstrosity on an apparition;' the typist rendered it ' . . . he was undecided whether it was a monstrosity or a battle-ship.' "

To these recollections may be added the experience of a writer who, in describing the "Norse Sonata" of a certain composer was made to refer to the work in print as a "horse sonata."—Harper's Weekly.

Gypsy Moths Ride in Autos.

News comes from Boston, Mass., which says that a total of 2224 square miles of territory in Massachusetts is occupied by the gypsy moth, according to the first annual report of A. H. Kirkland, superintendent for suppressing the gypsy and brown tail moths. In 1900 the moths infested only 359 square miles. Of the spread of the moths and the causes Superintendent Kirkland says: "That the automobile has been an important factor in the distribution of the gypsy moth within the last three years does not admit of dispute. It is of great significance that the places where the automobilists are accustomed to stop for meals or supplies are most generally affected by the gypsy moth."—Weekly Witness.

Reasonable Assumption.

The investigating committee had found that the life preservers were stuffed with breakfast food instead of cork.

"How do you explain this?" the manufacturer was asked.

"Why," he added, "it's just as good as cork until it gets soaked, and we—er—figure that some sort of relief ought to arrive by that time."—Chicago Tribune.

Creeks' Medicine Man.

The medicine man of the Creeks will not eat anything scorched in cooking; in treating a gun or arrow wound he as well as the patient will fast four days, only drinking a little gruel.

He will not allow a woman to look at his patient until he is well or dead. If his patient dies the medicine man takes a lot of medicine himself in order to cleanse himself from the fumes or odor of the dead. The pallbearers, as we might call those assisting in the burial, also take the same cleansing process.

And again when an Indian committed murder, even in self-defense, he went to the medicine man and took the cleansing remedy, claiming the remedy appeased the crime and the trouble to his mind. The medicine man has a horror of women, keeping out of their company as much as possible. At the full of each moon it was the custom of the bucks to drink medicine made by the medicine man to cleanse their system. In camp the Indian killed nothing which was not eatable.—Indian Journal.

Sailor's Brave Act Saved Lives

A daring and heroic act was performed by an unknown sailor during a fire in Liverpool, Eng., a few days ago. The outbreak occurred at a sheep-dip factory, in which a large quantity of sulphur was stored. A number of workmen were engaged in one of the top rooms of the building and were overcome by the burning chemicals. A sailor who was passing along the street and heard of the danger of the men, at once climbed to the roof of the burning building by way of a top story window in the next premises. He tore off some of the slates, and knocked a hole in the ceiling of the room in which the overpowered men lay, thus giving an outlet for the escape of the fumes. Meanwhile the fire brigade had arrived and promptly placing the escape against the window, rescued the men, five in all, from the room.

Work Demanded of Architects

When a new cathedral or a new college is to be built it is well that architects should compete for it, for other things being equal, the best man gets the job and the best possible kind of building is assured.

Few persons, though, realize what it costs an architect to enter a competition. They do not understand the time and labor that must be devoted to the design, the estimates, etc.

There is one firm of architects in New York that spent $2,500 last year on a single competition. This firm entered ten competitions altogether, winning four of them, and the total cost to do it was $7,000.

REASONING POWER OF ANIMALS.

Authenticated Instances Prove Possession of Brains.

The president of a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals is collecting instances of animal reasoning. The following are instances he has authenticated:

A banker had a jackdaw that was interested in croquet. As soon as the bird heard the click of the balls he would swoop down and watch the game attentively from a hedge. And when the players stopped the jackdaw would begin to play himself. He would take a ball and push it with beak and claws toward the "cage," or middle wicket, and he could not be content with merely putting the ball through—he would work away till he had succeeded in ringing the bell that hung from the cage's top.

A Philadelphia elephant is fond of cakes. Often when a cake is thrown to him it will lodge under the bar of his house in such a way that neither he nor the thrower can reach it. In this dilemma the elephant always puts his trunk down near the cake and blows it out upon the floor, whence the thrower may again heave it.

An old bay mare had a field to herself. One day a lot of calves intruded upon her privacy. The mare looked at the calves in amazement. Then she went slowly around the field until she found the gap in the fence through which they had come in. Now she steered the intruders one by one to the gap and taking each by the back of the neck shoved it forth into the road again.

DRANK WITH GENERAL BUTLER.

Hotel Bellboy Was Thoroughly "On to His Job."

Sam Groves, who was for many years an attache of the Wilson house in North Adams, was well known to the traveling public. Back in the seventies Gen. B. F. Butler often stopped at the Wilson, and was well known to Sam. One evening he arrived, and, after going to his room, rang for some liquid refreshment. Sam soon appeared with a tray bearing two bottles and two glasses. Gen. Butler remonstrated rather strongly and asked Sam why he brought two. Sam replied: "I di-di-didn't th-th-think you wanted to dr-dr-drink alone, general." Sam had his drink.—Boston Herald.

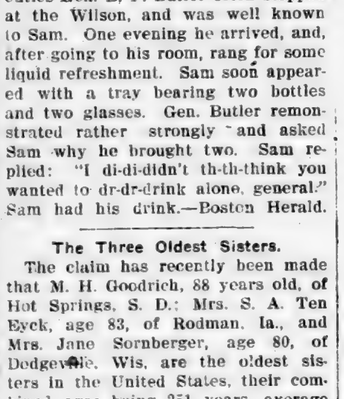
The Three Oldest Sisters.

The claim has recently been made that M. H. Goodrich, 88 years old, of Hot Springs, S. D.; Mrs. S. A. Ten Eyck, age 83, of Rodman, Ia., and Mrs. Jane Sornberger, age 80, of Dodgeville, Wis, are the oldest sisters in the United States, their combined ages being 251 years, average 83.66. This vicinity, however, has three sisters who can beat that. Mrs. Abbie M. Atridge of Rome is 82, a sister, Mrs. Caroline H. Foster, formerly of Hartford, Conn., is 84, and Mrs. Harriet H. Giles, formerly of Troy, age 89. The last two now live on the old homestead at Houseville, Lewis county. Their combined ages is 255, average 85 each. In addition to this their aged brother, Mosely L. House, aged 86, lives on the old homestead at Houseville.—Utica, N. Y., Dispatch.

Skillful Work of Surgeon.

Losing control of her bicycle, a lady was recently thrown through a shop window in London and the tip of her nose was cut off by the broken glass. Twenty minutes afterwards, the missing part was taken to a local doctor and after placing it in warm water, he stitched it into its proper position. There is now nothing abnormal to be seen about the nose, except a slight mark near the right nostril.

Tree on Castle Roof.



The Castle in Colchester, Essex county, England, beside its historic interest, has a good sized oak tree that has been growing for years on the roof. Colchester has been one of the principal garrison towns in England for centuries and is to-day the largest recruiting station between London and York.

WHERE ASTRONOMER WON FAME.

Maria Mitchell's Observatory Still Standing at Lynn, Mass.

With the recent announcement that a niche had been reserved in the Hall of Fame for Miss Maria Mitchell, formerly of Lynn, Mass., and one of the foremost astronomers in the country, came a returning interest in the place where she prosecuted her studies, and where for many years she was to be found almost every pleasant night.

With the removal of an old dwelling near the corner of Broad and Green streets, there came into view from the street an old wooden building much resembling a mammoth beehive, with a conical roof. This is the observatory where this candidate for fame pursued her "heavenly" studies and each night scanned the sky for some new discovery.

The building is about a story and a half in hight, with a flight of stairs leading up to the entrance which is situated on the main floor some distance from the ground.

Above the door is the conical roof. This is ball bearing, revolving on several cannon balls. A slit in the roof admits of the use of the telescope. The instrument long since was removed and the place is now used as a storehouse.

The building is in a good state of repair, the shingles being all close fitting and in place, while the stairs leading to the door are as good as ever.

Paris Hat.

One of the millinery eccentricities fashionable in Paris has a sweeping brim surmounted by a high waving plume. The French satin model sketched above shows various shades of mouse brown and gold.

Violet Always in Bloom.

It was a violet tree—a tree two feet high, thick with foliage and covered with some thirty or forty purple flowers.

"The violet tree is new," the florist said. "The idea comes from France. The tree blooms all the year.

"The ordinary violet is an annual. But with careful nursing it is possible in two years to turn it into a small and ever-blooming tree such as you see.

"I have a dozen violet trees. They cost $5 apiece. In the spring and early summer they are covered with 250 or 300 flowers. They are never without twenty-five or more blooms."

London and New York.

In spite of the fact that London exceeds New York in size by some 2,500,000, the latter city is said to be the greatest purchasing municipality on the face of the earth. Wages are some three times higher in New York than in London, but the cost and standard of living are also higher.

Must Have Purchased Venison.

A Stowe, Vermont, man who sweltered and puffed for two hours during the recent open season only to find the animal he was pursuing was a pig, gave a venison supper the other evening, and by mutual understanding nothing was said about the porker.

POISONS NOT ALWAYS DEADLY.

In the Hands of Physicians Some Make Valuable Remedies.

"The venom of the rattlesnake has been known to cure locomotor ataxia and scarlet fever," said a chemist. "Homeopathic physicians often prescribe it.

"You know the curara, the deadly poison that the South American Indians smear on their arrow tips? Well curara is very helpful in hydrophobia.

"There is a seaweed called 'bladder-wrack.' They make of this an antifat, a marvelous antifat. By the use of this antifat I know a man who reduced his weight forty pounds in three months.

"There is a deadly fungus, the fly agaric, which unfortunate people sometimes eat in mistake for mushrooms. They make a medicine of the fly argaric, a medicine called muscarine nitrate, which, injected under the skin, causes a copious flow of tears. French actresses in weeping scenes such as 'La Dame aux Camelias' sometimes use this drug.

"Cocaine causes wakefulness. I once worked forty-eight hours at a stretch, thanks to cocaine.

"Coca stimulates, exhilarates and removes all desire for food or drink. An Alpine guide will chew fifty or sixty grains of it before commencing a difficult ascent."

DIFFICULTY EASILY GET OVER.

Sixteen Feet of Snow No Great Moment for Winnipegers.

The men in the fur cap let it be known that he was from Winnipeg, and he was presently asked:

"You have pretty hard winters there, don't you?"

"Yes, pretty hard."

"And great falls of snow?"

"Yes, a good deal of snow."

Everybody Made Use of Stilts Eighteen Feet High.

"How deep did you ever see it?"

"Well, two years ago it was 16 feet deep on the level, and stood that way for a month."

"Why, all the houses must have been snowed in to the second-story windows and the streets rendered impassable?"

"Yes, but we had an easy way of getting around," said the Canadian. "Everybody made use of stilts 18 feet high, you see, and sawed them off as the snow settled down."

Parisian Jeweler's Work of Art.

A wonderful work of art entitled the "Way of life," is the masterpiece of a Parisian jeweler was exhibited in London recently. It is a monument some nine feet wide at the base, and as many feet high. It is made of onyx and unpolished marble, to which are added much gold, stones, diamonds and rubies, and other precious stones, besides 150 figures cut in ivory and gold. As the legend runs, it is an attempt to depict artistically, and with the help of precious stones and metals, the notions mankind may have of God and His nature, of created beings and of their nature, of the connection of created beings with each other, and of their connection with God our Maker." The exhibit took thirty years to complete.—Montreal Herald.

False Teeth for Sailors.

A dentist held up a set of false teeth.

"See this stay here," he said, "this brace and this reinforcement? The set is for a sailor, and sailors' false teeth are always made extra strong, on account of the unconquerable salt beef and the granite ship biscuit that are eaten at sea.

"On his beef and biscuit a sailor would crush ordinary false teeth in no time. He would chew them up and swallow them in mistake for ordinary food.

"Hence false teeth for sea use are always reinforced with all manner of braces and backstays."

Big Eagle Killed in Florida.

MAN IS A CRIMINAL RAT.

DENMARK STARTS CAMPAIGN TO EXTERMINATE THESE VERMIN.

Partly as a Precaution Against Plague and Partly to Protect Butter Tubs —Their Depredations Growing Serious in England.

The Danes, who spare no trouble to protect their important butter industry, have lately undertaken a national campaign against rats. This has been done partly as a precaution against plague breaking out in their seaports, and partly because butter tubs are particularly attractive to rats; for there is nothing more disgusting than the thought that these filthy animals may have been in contact with so absorbent and easily tainted an article of food.

In England, on the other hand, no concerted effort is made to check the rat plague. The animals are increasing everywhere, to the detriment of agriculturists, poultry owners, game farmers, and not less so of our British wild birds of many kinds.

The percentage of linnets, bullfinches, warblers, and other nests of our smaller birds, the eggs of which are eaten by rats, is very large, as any one may prove who seeks for them, and watches the fate of the nests. They also act as a serious check on the increase of wild fowl, which began after the protection acts were passed.

Rats prefer the eggs of wild ducks and marsh birds to any other food, and a case was lately mentioned in which the owner of a wild duck farm found thirteen ducks' eggs in the hole of one doe rat. In the month of October there is a great movement of these animals from the east coast inland.

On a shooting estate lately visited by the writer, where incessant trapping keeps them at bay, an October invasion is always expected; and as the whole property is kept carefully under observation, the direction from which they cross the frontier is well known.

It is very probable that this march of the mischievous is partly due to the closure of the main herring fishery on the coasts of Norfolk and Suffolk about the time, and that the increase of the rats is not unconnected with the exceptionally large catches of herring made during the past few seasons.

The shoals of herrings have passed all previous records, and some six hundred Scotch women have been engaged in "cleaning" the fish. 'Sometimes the refuse is very properly saved for fish manure. But the garbage of countless numbers of herrings is thrown away, and this attracts and keeps fat the rats in the late summer and early autumn.

When the source of supply grows less, the creatures move inland. In Norfolk this was aggravated a few years ago by a severe flood in parts of the fen. This drove out tens of thousands of rats from the low land to the higher ground. The plague was such that on one seate the keepers were afraid to go to one wood at night, so numerous and bold were the creatures. It was not until after weeks of wholesole poisoning and trapping that their numbers were reduced.

But they had come to stay and several circumstances aided them in their resolution. Not the least important item in the rats' favor was the almost universal spread of pheasant preserving and pheasant rearing. On preserves the pheasants are supplied, often overlavishly, with artificial food all the year round. The quantity of meal scattered for the young pheasants, and of Indian corn thrown out to "keep the brids at home," in the autumn and winter, is such that it makes a considerable item in the profits of local corn dealers.

It is given with the greatest regularity every day, and the rats will always have their share, coming out in the most impudent way and feeding among the pheasants. If the keepers are slack in their duty, every pheasant preserve becomes a rat preserve. On the partridge manors it is so impossible to allow the rat to increase, and to exercise its egg-stealing power in spring, that, as a rule, the vermin are kept at bay.

Another factor in the dispersion and harboring of these pests is the modern plan of building the cornstalks in the field from which the wheat has been reaped, instead of bringing it all home to the rickyard. It saves the loss of time and the expense of carting the loads to the homestead. There is also less risk of the whole harvest being destroyed by fire. But every one of these isolated stacks scattered over the face of the country makes a comfortable dwelling for rats.—London Exchange.

ERYSIPELAS.

What the Disease Actually Is and Its Treatment.

Erysipelas is an acute contagious disease caused by a specific germ called the streptococcus of Fehleisen, after the man who first described its nature.

The chief symptom of this disease is a peculiar spreading inflammation of the skin, which is accompanied by fever, headache, and general ill feeling. The fever is preceded by a chill, sometimes slight, but often very severe. In ordinary simple cases the inflammation attacks only the surface of the skin, but in severe cases the deeper structures are attacked.

Although erysipelas is one of the contagious diseases, it is not one to be much feared by persons in robust health; but anything that tends to weaken the resisting forces of the constitution will help to bring on an attack of erysipelas in those who are susceptible to it. This susceptibility is seen in certain families or individuals, and these persons may suffer an attack on the least exposure to it.

Great care should be taken to shield from this contagion all those who have recently undergone surgical operations, as they are pecuniarly susceptible to its poison, and it is one of the most usual causes of blood-poisoning and wound-infection.

Erysipelas is not often found in the very young, and in old age it is still more rare.

An erysipelas patient should be strictly isolated, and all dressings or articles which have come in contact with him should be disinfected or burned. The sick-room should be disinfected and fumigated before it is occupied by others. Any one nursing such a case should be scrupulously careful not to go near a person who has undergone an operation or who has an open wound of any kind. In the treatment everything must be done to maintain perfect hygienic conditions round the patient. There must be an abundance of fresh air and sunshine, pure water and scrupulous cleanliness in every direction. Much relief is afforded locally by compresses dipped in some cooling lotion and applied to the inflamed surface, and there are many other alleviations which can be indicated only by the physician in charge of the individual case, as the symptoms call for them.

After a prolonged attack of erysipelas convalescence is apt to be slow, and an enfeebled condition may persist for a long time. The treatment at this stage should be tonic and supporting, and great care should be taken to avoid undue fatigue.—Youth's Companion.

THE DARWIN THEORY.

A Disgusted Pilot Who Talked To a Monkey by Mistake.

Miss Agnes Mahony, a missionary to Liberia, was visiting Philadelphia with two African slave girls that she had bought for $15 apiece.

Miss Mahony's pictures of Liberia were sombre. They were pictures of savage physicians operating on savage patients with pieces of broken glass, of men content and happy if their wives provided them with enough rice to support life on, of a climate so humid that a few months' residence there impaired the white man's health.

She relieved the gloom of her narrative with a description of a pilot. This man was a character—a shellback like those whom W. W. Jacobs described in his sea stories.

"The pilot," said Miss Mahony, "was once bringing a ship northward. The captain, toward sunset, bade him go below and help himself to a glass of cold tea.

"After taking the tea the pilot proceeded to munch a biscuit.

"Now the captain owned a large monkey, and this creature sat drowsing in a corner. The pilot said:

"'A gusty day, sir,' and the monkey shrugged its shoulders.

"The pilot, with affable gruffness, went on:

"'The south light is away on the port bow now, sir.'

"There was no answer.

"But the pilot was persistent. He continued:

"'We'll be over the bar, sir, in an hour.'

"Failing to get a reply even to this pleasant information the pilot went up on deck again and, taking his place beside the captain on the bridge, said:

"'What a quiet coap your father is.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

How Long Should Man Live?

Against cold, heat, and famine the white corpuscles are powerless, but they intervene for the protection of the organism in the case alike of a razor scratch or a stroke of apoplexy. They also struggle against the microbes of putrefaction. When the human body is invaded by such lethal microbes, the phagocytes rush to its defence, and, in as far as lies in their capacity, they not only kill but swallow and digest the hostile germs. This warfare is taking place incessantly in the pores of the skin and of the digestive tube, in the spongy walls of the mouth and nostrils and throat and lungs—wherever, indeed, the attacking microbes seek to find an entrance. For once that we are protected by spoon-administered medicine we are protected a thousand times by the power of an innumerable army of miscroscopic bodyguards. Professor Metchnikoff's latest researches have shown that it should be possible so to avail ourselves of our knowledge of the struggle between microbes and phagocytes as to be able to arm the body for a great length of time against old age itself. He believes that man does not now live the natural span of life, but that the score of years now allotted to the stage of "middle age" should and will be at no distant day extended to three or four score years.—Harper's Weekly.

UNION NOTES.

The Farmers' Union has taken possession of Clanton, and the city "is their'n." Beginning on the first day of this week, the officers and delegates have been pouring in, and every prospect pleases (except the weather). Among the numbers here are National Organizer Newt. Gresham, of Texas (the father of the union). State officers present are: President I. A. Worley, Secretary-Treasurer E. J. Cook, Organizer W. A. Morris, Lecturer T. E. Pinegar, Business Agent P. F. Parker, Executive committee: H. T. Nations, J. A. Fanning, W. E. Hughes, I. M. Bishop and J. W. Sorrells. The talented editor and proprietor of the Union Educator and Diversified Farmer, Mr. J. A. Vanden Burg, of Anniston, is here also, and his subscription book is open to all comers. In response to the welcome of Clanton's mayor, Bro. R. F. Duckworth, secretary-treasurer of the State Union of Georgia, will speak. Bro. T. E. Pinegar will respond to Judge Reynolds' welcome on behalf of Chilton county; and Bro. H. T Nations, chairman state executive committee, will answer on behalf of the delegates to County President J. H. Thomas' welcoming words for Chilton county union. Altogether it promises to be a great time for the farmers' organization, and will no doubt add to its already phenomenal growth All the brethren that can get here are expected to attend Thursday or Friday sure.

DELAYED CORRESPONDENCE.

A number of letters that did not arrive until Wednesday are necessarily left out. Be more prompt, brethren. Tuesday should be the latest your letters should reach us.

IGNORANCE.

"The voters of Chilton were required to vote for a tax of 'ten mills on each DOLLAR'S worth of taxable property,' instead, as the law provides, of a tax of 'ten mills on each ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS' worth of taxable property,' or in other words, ten times more than the law provides." The above is a literal copy of a portion of the banner man's screed on the school tax election and shows HIS "competency" in its true light. While Mr. Honeycutt's mistake in getting up the ballot could have been committed through inadvertence, the banner man's correction? (especially after the discussion over the form of the ballot) shows DENSE IGNORANCE. The amount of the tax sought to be levied was ONE MILL on the DOLLAR, or as the majority of our people would say, 10 cents on the hundred dollars. Mr. Honeycutt's draft made the tax $1.00 on the hundred dollars, or ten times too much. The banner man's correction? made it ONE CENT on the HUNDRED DOLLARS, or ten times too small. And still he has the unmitigated gall to talk about "competency." Well, the most charitable view to take of his case is that the poor fellow can't help it. "He was BAWN so, donch-yer-know." Another suggestion is this, that since he has been in the United States of America, he has been so busy trying to grab the American Dollar that he hasn't had time to learn anything about "Those blarsted little mills, donch-yer-know." He has gotten many a dollar from the Populists and Republicans of Chilton county, and now he is "working" the democracy. Probate Judge Reynolds' letter to the people in this issue of THE UNION shows what connection the writer hereof had with the ticket. We did the errand for the judge (took the form to a FIRST-CLASS printing office) the same as we have executed many requests in the past for other people, without a cent in it for our trouble, and the banner man when he says we got a commission shows that he does not hesitate to make an assertion without ascertaining the facts in the case.

CHANGE IN FIRM.

Attorney A. C. Smith having assumed the duties of Probate Clerk in Judge Reynolds' office, the law firm of Smith & Middleton is by mutual consent dissolved, Mr. J. Osmond Middleton succeeding to the business and remaining in the offices formerly occupied by the old firm. While this change will throw a great deal of work on Mr. Middleton, we do not hesitate to say that we believe he is equal to the occasion; and that the same firmness and ability which he has demonstrated so often in the past will be shown in the discharge of his increased labors, and the interests of his clients will be carefully protected.

THORSBY.

Clarence Bice has gone to Montgomery, where he has accepted a position in the Capitola hotel. Sanders Ogletree, of Birmingham, is a Thorsby visitor. Mr. Olson, who has spent several months at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hartilius, has returned to his home in Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Barrett left for Monticello, Ia., on the 1st, owing to the serious illness of the latter's sister-in-law. Mrs. S. E. Norton entertained the Union Protestant Ladies' Aid Society on Thursday. Mrs. O. Schive is the recipient of a lovely new piano. G. H. Gerald took a business trip to Birmingham last week. Mr. and Mrs. Feast entertained company from Birmingham during the past week. Mr. and Mrs. Roman were Magic City visitors last week. George Peterson was a visitor in Montgomery on the 5th. Mr. Fred Howard left for Mobile on Monday, from which place he goes to Mantowoc, Wis. Mr. O. Prestholt left for the north on the 6th. Mr. and Mrs. Broad, missionaries from the western states, will speak at the Normal school building on Sunday. Mr. Charley Snyder, who recently returned from Africa, where he has labored as a missionary, is visiting with his parents. He will speak at the Normal school building on Sunday, morning and evening.

NEMO.

HIGHLAND.

Dear Editor:

Please grant me a little space for a few words about the closing exercises of our school here on last Saturday, having been postponed from the day before on account of the very stormy weather. After a march at 1 p. m. the exercises began at 1:30 Many good songs were sung, such as "Freedom's Flag," "Old Folks at Home," "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," "Work for the night is coming," and "Dixie Land." The pieces and the speakers were: "The Young Hero," Emmet Wirt; "Be Doing," Celesta Watson; "The Candy Pulling," Velma Watson; "The School Girl," Vera Watson; "Queen of the May," Hassie Baker; "I'll Wait a While Longer," Mae Baker; "Hope and Persevere," Robert Baker; "Little Hands," Lee Nummey; "The Grumbler," Ida Nummey; "I Don't Know Who He Was," Lula Dobbs; "Pansies," Ida Dobbs; "Keep in the Middle of the Road," Alma Dobbs; "Somebodys Mother," Maggie Dunlap; "God's Kiss," Junie Dunlap; "If I Was Ten Years Old," Jimmie Dunlap; "Barefoot Boy," Pearl Culpepper; "Things Wise and Wonderful," Earl Culpepper; "The Diamonds," Claud Culpepper; "Too Late," Ophelia Lockhart; "George Washington," Zeb Lockhart; "Ship of a Boy," Reese Lockhart; "Cracking Corn," Edgar Baker; "Cigarette," Irving Baker; "Easter Nora," Bertie Wirt; "Old Spelling Class," Rosa Tyus; "Amusing," Leb Tyus; "Rock of Ages," Paralee Jones; "I'm Getting Sorter Old," Mason Deason; "Farewell Address," Lizzie Culpepper. Well, there were others, but I've not got their names, and there was some nice dialogues. I can't forget the sweet talk that Miss Etta Roper made to her scholars, with tears flowing from her eyes, and every one of her students almost heart broken at the parting from their teacher. I do not think that Miss Etta has done the best to teach her scholars their books and manners and kindness; I believe she is a Christian girl, and none need be afraid to select her as a teacher. I wish her success wherever she goes. As this is my first attempt in this line, I'll close with best wishes to THE UNION and its readers.

Our community in the hills is all right. Our Farmers' Union at Rocky Mount is growing fast. I wish "Just a Voter" would write every week. The first thing I look for is his piece. Come on, Union boys; let's hear from you.

HILL BILLY.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Dear Union:

We hear but little in this part relative to the special school tax. Some parties fear that it will not benefit the people after all, thinking that the teachers' salary will be proportionately increased, and thus leave us where we have been. But let us hope for the better. The people have spoken; let the people rule. Judge Reynolds' article in the last Union explaining himself in regard to the school tax ticket is very commendable. It has the right ring. The people need never fear while we have such officials in our county. No one, Democrat, Republican, Socialist or Populist, in official position but what will make some mistakes. But like Judge Reynolds, when they propose to protect the people and take the cost of the mistake on themselves, it is enough to silence all criticism. Because it shows Mr. Reynolds to be an honest man, and that is what we want. There was Davy Crockett, the noted bear hunter of Tennessee in the olden time who represented his people in Congress, and who shouldered his rifle, left his cabin home and loved ones and wended his way to the West, and sacrificed his life for Texas and his country in the conflict with Mexico. He was greeted by vast crowds, exclaiming, "Give me the hand of an honest man." An honest official is worthy and will receive honor from his people Mistakes will occur in the great rush of business, and we can appreciate the condition of the officer as he comes in contact with such a rush, and particularly so when he protects his people from any unfavorable results.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

A HAPPY HOME.

Mr. Editor:

Please allow me space in your good paper to say a few words. Health in this community is good at present. There was a nice little crowd at J. W. Sears' home Saturday night; had good music and all enjoyed themselves. Mrs. Wesson and children visited Joe Sears' family Sunday evening. Mr. Joe Wesson seems to be all smiles when he gets on the streets of Clanton. M. H. Bussey and his father, A. Bussey, Tom Miller and his best girl visited Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Maddox's near New Salem. Mrs. Jack Raspberry was with us Saturday. We have some peach blooms around, and if they don't look out Jack Frost will catch them.

NOBODY'S DARLING.

WYLAM.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words about this place. Beautiful weather here just like spring. The Ladies' Aid Society meets at Mrs. G. W. Luttrell's Thursday afternoon. Ike Walker has moved his family to East Thomas. We are all sorry to lose them. Mrs. J. T. Mitchell visited Chilton Saturday, returning Monday. Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Hayes have moved into their new house, of which they are the only occupants. As this is my first attempt, I'll ring off, but may come again. Success to The Union and its dear readers.

PAPA'S PET.

NEW LONDON.

Editor Union:

Farmers are all busy preparing for their new crop, are done sowing oats, and are now getting ready for corn planting. If the farmers will only stick together in the F. E. & C. U. of A. there will be better times in this country. When farmers, raise their own corn, potatoes and other vegetables, and not so much cotton, they will get better prices for what they do raise. I don't belong to the F. E. & C. U. of A., but I'm going to join if it holds up to be a good thing, and I sure do wish it will turn out to be a good thing, for the farmers have to work too hard not to get something for their labor. I want the farming class to stick together, and so have better times in the future than they have had in the past. I'm a farmer, and I work hard and don't get much for my work. My father takes The Union, and we do delight in reading our paper, for it has such good news in it every week. I delight when Friday comes, so I will get to read some of the pieces from our good old farmers in The Union. I hope every one takes The Union. As this is my first effort at writing for our Union, and not knowing whether the editor will print this or not, I'll say good-bye.

"BLOSSOM BOY."

We humbly suggest to our correspondent that the way to make the farmers' organization a success is to JOIN and WORK for it. Too many hold off until they see if it's to be a "good thing." JOIN and WORK and HELP make it a "good thing."—Editor Union.

Dear Editor:

People of this section seem to be enjoying life very well. Thomas Jones Watson, of Texas, is visiting relatives and friends at Mars Hill. Rev. J. P. Gentry and wife visited their son-in-law, E. J. Scott, a well-known merchant of Ashby, last Sunday. F. M. Langston and wife spent a few days with their son, C. W. Langston, at Center Point last week and report a good visit. Rev. J. H. Thomas filled his regular appointment at Mars Hill Church last Saturday and Sunday, preaching to a large congregation. Harvey Cofer and family spent Saturday and Sunday at J. D. H. Terry's. J. N. Terry was entertained Saturday night by W. F. Terry and L. F. Martin, of West Bessie.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happenng throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1 50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

The Danger of Milk Preservatives

By Mary Hinman Abel.

WHATEVER difference of opinion there may be as to the ... of small quantities of preservatives in other foods, ... cians and hygienists are agreed in condemning their ... tion to milk because it is the food of infants, and the yo... of different species have been shown to be very suscepti... to their effect. Not only is the preservative itself prob... harmful, but by its use the poorest quality of milk can ... palmed off on the consumer. Dirty milk is still dirty ... dangerous, even though its souring point has been artifi... changed. We may be certain that neither farmer nor dealer is going to ... one extra precaution or an ounce of ice more than is needed to get his m... to market in good condition, and if he knows that he can fall back on ... chemical to conceal that fatal sign of souring, and thus this double burde... bad milk and the action of the preservative is laid on the digestion of the ... tle ones, who, if we may judge from the vital statistics, have a hard enou... time at best to get through their first five years of life. All of the large c... insist that very little preservative is now added to milk, yet prosperous ... ing agents continue to solicit, and well-informed people insist that immen... quantities are used. W. J. Headley was a welcome caller Monday.

Uncle George Shaw was in Clanton Monday.

Some of the folks in town hardly appreciate what the city officers do for them in the matter of sidewalks and streets until a storm like Friday's forces the situation on them.

J. M. Burnett was in Clanton Monday.

F. J. Fitts and Tom Glasscock were in town Tuesday. Mr. Fitts bought Judge Reynolds' span of bay ponies, and says he is doing a good livery business in Maplesville.

J. J. Maddox was a pleasant visitor Tuesday.

Attorney J. Osmond Middleton went to Walker county. Tuesday on professional business.

A. Baker, Sr., and John Cleckler were welcome callers Tuesday.

G. W. Pate was a pleasant visitor Tuesday.

Lewis Littleton was in Clanton Tuesday.

Mrs. Amanda Bean, of Collins' chapel, while on a visit to J. B. Littleton, of East Birmingham, fell off the porch and broke both her arms. She is doing very well under the circumstances, for which her many friends feel thankful.

Mrs. J. A. Bean, of Collins' chapel, is back at her home after a couple of weeks' sojourn in the Hillman hospital at Birmingham, where she underwent a very successful operation.

A special term for teachers opens Monday, March 12th, at Clanton high school. Full instruction in all branches required in first, second and third grade examinations. Full information given by Prof. R. E. Sessions, Clanton, Ala.

Alps as Money Makers.

Three million persons are said to pass in at the gates of Switzerland every year, leaving $30,000,000 in the hotels alone. Add to this fares on railroads, for carriage hire, boats, etc., and the millions spent in shops for carved woodwork, clocks, toys of all kinds, souvenirs, laces, etc., and one begins to get a fairly good idea of what it means to Switzerland to have the Alps as a background for her financial progress and prosperity.

The City of Mexico has a population of 344,721.

Loss of sleep proves to be the curious effect that may limit man's mountain climbing. Dr. Bullock Workman mentions that in his camp in the Himalayas at 19,358 feet members of his party were kept awake by lack of breath, and on dozing off would suddenly awake gasping. He concludes that inability to sleep may itself be sufficient to keep climbers from going beyond 23,000 to 25,000 feet.

In the last 500 years Mexico has produced more silver than any other country in the world, the output for that period amounting to $3,050,000,000.

Relic of Painful Days.

When the floor of the operating theatre of the old hospital at Canterbury, England, was torn up the other day the rings were discovered through which were passed the cords for tying patients down on the operating table prior to the discovery of anaesthetics.

Mexican school children are given special lessons in urbanity and are taught to utter all manner of pretty speeches. A well-bred child in addressing an older person will say, "I kiss your hands," while a gallant will say to a lady, "I kiss your feet."

NEW FOOD LAW

People now demand the right to know exactly what they eat.

To be told by maker or retailer that the food is "pure" is not satisfactory.

Candy may contain "pure" white clay or "pure" dyes and yet be very harmful. Syrups may contain "pure" glucose and yet be quite digestible and even beneficial. Tomato catsup may contain a small amount of salicylic or boracic acid as a necessary preservative, which may agree with one and be harmful to another.

Wheat flour may contain a portion of corn flour and really be improved. Olive oil may be made of cotton seed oil. Butter may contain beef suet and yet be nutritious.

The person who buys and eats must protect himself and family, and he has a right to, and now demands, a law under which he can make intelligent selection of food.

Many pure food bills have been introduced and some passed by State legislatures; many have been offered to Congress, but all thus far seem objectionable.

It has seemed difficult for politicians to formulate a satisfactory bill that would protect the common people and yet avoid harm to honest makers and prevent endless trouble to retailers. No government commission or officer has the right to fix "food standards" to define what the people shall and shall not eat, for what agrees with one may not agree with another and such act would deprive the common citizen of his personal liberty. The Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., perhaps the largest makers of prepared foods in the world, have naturally a close knowledge of the needs of the people and the details of the business of the purveyors, (the retail grocer) and, guided by this experience have prepared a bill for submission to Congress which is intended to accomplish the desired ends, and inasmuch as a citizen of the U. S. has a right to food protection even when he enters another State it is deemed proper that the gov't take control of this matter and provide a national law to govern all the States. A copy of the bill is herewith reproduced.

Sec. 1 governs the maker whether the food is put up in small packages sealed, or in barrels, boxed or otherwise.

Sec. 2 governs the retailer, who may open a barrel and sell the food in small quantities. When he puts the goods into a paper bag he must also enclose a printed copy of the statement of the maker which was affixed to the original pkg. and inasmuch as the retailer cannot undertake to guarantee the statement of ingredients he must publish the statement of the makers and add his own name and address as a guarantee of his selling the food as it is represented to him which relieves the retailer of responsibility of the truth of the statement and throws it upon the maker, where it properly belongs.

The remaining sections explain themselves.

The Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., for example, have from the beginning of its existence printed on the outside of each and every pkg. of Postum and Grape-Nuts food a truthful and exact statement of what the contents were made of in order that the consumer might know precisely what he or she was eating. A person desiring to buy, for instance, strictly pure fruit jelly and willing to pay the price has a right to expect not only an equivalent for the cost but a further right to certainty as to what he eats. Or he may be willing to buy at less cost a jelly made part of fruit juices, sugar and a portion of glucose. But he must be supplied with truthful information of the ingredients and be permitted to use his personal liberty to select his own food accurately.

The people have allowed the slow murder of infants and adults, by tricky makers of food, drink and drugs to go on about long enough. Duty to oneself, family and nation demands that every man and woman join in an organized movement to clear our people from this blight. You may not be able to go personally to Washington to impress your Congressman, but you can, in a most effective way tell him by letter how you desire him to represent you.

Remember the Congressman is in Congress to represent the people from his district and if a goodly number of citizens express their views to him, he secures a very sure guide to duty. Remember also that the safety of the people is assured by insisting that the will of the people be carried out, and not the machinations of the few for selfish interests.

This pure food legislation is a pure movement of the people for public protection. It will be opposed only by those who fatten their pockets by deceiving and injuring the people. Therefore, if your Representative in Congress evades his patriotic duty hold him to strict accountability and if necessary demand equitable and honest service. This is a very different condition than when a faction demands class legislation of the Congressman. Several years ago the butter interests of the country demanded legislation to kill the oleomargarine industry and by power of organization forced class legislation really unworthy of a free people. Work people wanted beef suet butter because it was cheap and better than much unclean milk butter, but the dairy interests organized and forced the legislation. The law should have provided that pkgs. of oleomargarine bear the statement of ingredients and then let people who desire purchase it for just what it is, and not try to kill it by a heavy tax. Manufacturers sometimes try to force measures in their own interests but contrary to the interests of the people and the labor trust is always active to push through bills drafted in the interest of that trust but directly contrary to the interests of the people as a whole. Witness the anti-injunction bill by which labor unions seek to tie the hands of our courts and prevent the issue of any order to restrain the members of that trust from attacking men or destroying property. Such a bill is perhaps the most infamous insult to our courts and the common people ever laid before Congress and the Representatives in Congress must be held to a strict accountability for their acts relating thereto. But when bills come before Congress that are drawn in the interest of all the people they should receive the active personal support of the people and the representatives be instructed by the citizens. The Senators also should be written to and instructed. If, therefore, you will remember your privilege and duty you will at once—now—write to your Congressman and Senator on this pure food bill. Clip and enclose the copy herewith presented and ask them to make a business of following it through the committee considering it. Urge its being brought to a vote and requesting that they vote for it.

Some oppressively intelligent and carping critics may say this is simply an advertisement for Postum and Grape-Nuts. It is true that these articles are spoken of here in a public manner, but they are used as illustrations of a manufacturer seeking by example, printing on each pkg. a truthful, exact statement of ingredients, to shame other makers into doing the fair thing by the common people, and establishing an era of pure food, but that procedure has not yet forced those who adulterate and deceive to change their methods hence this effort to arouse public sentiment and show a way out of the present condition of fraud, deceit and harm.

The undersigned is paying to the publishers of America about $20,000.00 to print this announcement in practically all of the great papers and magazines, in the conduct of what he chooses to term, "an educational campaign," esteemed to be of greater direct value to the people than the establishment of many libraries. That is held to be a worthy method of using money for the public good. Tell the people facts, show them a way to help themselves and rely upon them to act intelligently and effectively.

The reader will be freely forgiven if he entirely forgets the reference to Postum and Grape-Nuts, if he will but join the pure food movement and do things.

C. W. POST.

TEXT OF PURE FOOD BILL.

If it meets approval cut it out, sign name and address and send to your Representative in Congress. Buy two or more publications from which you cut this. Keep one for reference and send the other to one of the U. S. Senators from your State. Ask one or two friends to do the same and the chances for Pure Food will be good.

A BILL

TO REQUIRE MANUFACTURERS AND SHIPPERS OF FOODS FOR INTERSTATE SHIPMENT TO LABEL SAID FOODS AND PRINT THE INGREDIENTS CONTAINED IN SUCH FOODS ON EACH PACKAGE THEREOF.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every person, firm or corporation engaged in the manufacture, preparation or compounding of food for human consumption, shall print in plain view on each package thereof made by or for them shipped from any State or Territory, or the District of Columbia, a complete and accurate statement of all the ingredients thereof, defined by words in common use to describe said ingredients, together with the announcement that said statement is made by the authority of, and guaranteed to be accurate by, the makers of such food, and the name and complete address of the makers shall be affixed thereto; all printed in plain type of a size not less than that known as eight point, and in the English language.

Sec. 2. That the covering of each and every package of manufactured, prepared or compounded foods shipped from any State, Territory or the District of Columbia, when the food in said package shall have been taken from a covering supplied by or for the makers and re-covered by or for the sellers, shall bear upon its face or within its enclosure an accurate copy of the statement of ingredients and name of the makers which appeared upon the package or covering of said food as supplied by or for the makers thereof, printed in like manner as the statement of the makers was printed, and such statement shall also bear the name and address of the person, firm or corporation that re-covered such food.

Sec. 3, That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to purposely, willfully and maliciously remove, alter, obliterate or destroy such statement of ingredients appearing on packages of food, as provided in the preceding sections, and any person or persons who shall violate this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not less than one month nor more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 4, That the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture shall procure, or cause to be procured from retail dealers, and analyze, or cause to be analyzed or examined, chemically, microscopically, or otherwise, samples of all manufactured, prepared or compounded foods offered for sale in original, unbroken packages in the District of Columbia, in any Territory, or in any State other than that in which they shall have been respectively manufactured or otherwise produced, or from a foreign country, or intended for export to a foreign country. The Secretary of Agriculture shall make necessary rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions of this Act, and is hereby authorized to employ such chemists, inspectors, clerks, laborers, and other employes, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act and to make such publication of the results of the examinations and anaylsis as he may deem proper. And any manufacturer, producer or dealer who shall refuse to supply, upon application and tender and full payment of the selling price samples of such articles of food to any person duly authorized by the Secretary of Agriculture to receive the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding one hundred days, or both.

Section 5. That any person, firm or corporation who shall violate sections one and two of this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding two hundred dollars for the first offense and for each subsequent offense not exceeding three hundred dollars or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 6, That any person, firm, or corporation, who shall willfully, purposely or maliciously change or add to the ingredients of any food, make false charges, or incorrect analysis, with the purpose of subjecting the makers of such foods to fine or imprisonment under this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars nor less than three hundred dollars, or imprisoned for not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both.

Sec. 7, That it shall be the duty of every district attorney to whom the Secretary of Agriculture shall report any violation of this Act to cause proceedings to be commenced and prosecuted without delay for the fines and penalties in such case provided.

Sec. 8, That this Act shall not be construed to interfere with commerce wholly internal in any State, nor with the exercise of their police powers by the several States.

Sec. 9, That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed.

Sec. 10, That this Act shall be in force and effect from and after the first day of October, nineteen hundred and six.

The undersigned respectfully requests the Representatives from his district and Senators from his State to support this measure.

A WARNING.

Alixe Celestine Maud Anna McKay
Was a doll quite out of the common way.
Her hair was yellow, her gown was silk;
Her eyes were as blue as the best skim milk;
She'd a Paris hat,
And in spite of that
She fell in love with the Kitchen Cat!

Now the Kitchen Cat was ugly and old.
His manners were bad, and his air was bold.
And the intimate friends of Miss McKay
Told her she'd throw herself quite away;
But she tossed her head,
And haughtily said
She wished no advice as to whom she should wed.

Alas for unfortunate Miss McKay!
She has bitterly mourned her wedding day.
In an old patched gown and a battered hat
She is now the slave of the Kitchen Cat.
She lives in the shed;
And, shaking with dread,
She watches for rats till she'd rather be dead.

No more she sits in her pretty chair.
Eating her supper from dainty doll's ware.
She cuts up the meat for the Kitchen Cat
On an old cracked plate, and dirty at that;
And small trace to-day
Is seen of the gay
Alixe Celestine Maud Anna McKay.

MORAL.

Now all you maids, of whatever degree,
Attend to this bit of advice from me.
Be a maiden aunt if you possibly can.
And an eldest child is the next best plan;
Be thin or be fat,
Be this or be that,
But never marry the Kitchen Cat.
—Isabel F. Bellows, in the Christian Register.

"ROBIN HOOD OF VERMONT."

Ethan Allen, to whom a memorial has recently been set up in Vermont, was called the Robin Hood of his State. He was an interesting character, impulsive, unconventional, self-assertive and heedless of custom or results. With these traits he combined a generosity and a tenderness of heart that once led him into the dentist's chair, where he had a sound tooth drawn in order to encourage a timid old lady who was quaking at the prospect. A scene in court, cited in the New England Magazine, gives a good picture of this singularly outspoken man.

In 1779 Ethan Allen appeared at a trial in Westminister clad in a military dress. The Chief Justice and an associate were on the bench. A young lawyer was arguing the case with frequent quotations from Blackstone. When he finished, Allen rose to address the jury. He told the twelve just men and true that he should not deal in quibbles.

"I would have that young gentleman know," he said, "that the eternal fitness of things can upset his Blackstones, his whitestones and his brimstones!"

Here the Chief Justice interrupted, saying it was not lawful to appear in court with a sword by one's side. Allen unslung the weapon, brought it down upon the table with a force that made the house ring, and exclaimed:

"'For forms of government let fools contest;
Whate'er is best administer'd is best!'"

Then, realizing he had "put his foot into it, he added, hastily:

"I said that fools might contest for forms, but not your honors, not your honors!"

A ZOOLOGICAL GAME.

These lines may be used with fine effect at a parlor entertainment. They should be memorized, of course, and recited without referring to the paper. Any boy or girl with fair elocutionary ability could make a decided sensation with them. And then, are they not a pretty good study in natural history?

It will be noticed that the list is alphabetical so far as the first word of each line is concerned, and that the animals and birds are mixed up in the most incongruous way; this was done on purpose, of course.

UP AMONG THE SAETERS.

In mountainous districts of Norway the farmers usually in the spring send their dairy maids, hired men and shepherd boys with their cattle—cows, oxen, horses, pigs, sheep and goats—up on the mountains to the saeters, where they keep them in pasture during the summer. A saeter is a collection of houses, surrounded by green fields inclosed with a fence, and outside of this are stretched the great grazing grounds, over mountains and valleys, through woods, along rivers, brooks and lakes. When everything has been put in readiness and the weather has become more like summer the housewives come and take the places of the dairy maids, and these and the hired men are sent home.

I will not describe to you the many dangers to which herd and shepherd boys were formerly exposed, when wolves and bears were hunting around for lambs, sheep, calves and other animals for their breakfast or dinner; but I will tell you about the bright side of these boys' life to show that they can also play their little tricks and manage to get a good deal of fun out of their daily work, lonesome though they are in those lofty regions.

Nature has blessed them with a wonderfully clear and healthful air, with plenty of sunshine and outdoor life. Though they often are drenched in rain to the skin and have to wade in water all the day long, often for many days at a time, rheumatism, nervousness, dyspepsia and toothache are unknown in their experience. Theirs is a life in clear, healthful and invigorating mountain air, hundreds, often thousands, of feet above sea level. They are very generally healthy, sound in mind and body, playful and full of good humor. Their ringing laughter, a good sign of a sound constitution, re-echoed from mountainside to mountainside, is like the sound of pleasant music.

One summer my father and mother—living in Gol, Hallingdal, a mountainous district in the southern part of the country—had in their herd a big ram with large horns bent backward into spirals. For some reason or other, this ram could not stand to see the shepherd boy having on his rain shawl—a large shawl that the boys put on to cover the head and shoulders on rainy days. As soon as he caught sight of the shepherd boy with the shawl on, he would look at him a moment, his eyes would suddenly flash fire, he would back up a few feet, and then with all his strength he would leap forward and butt the boy, so that he would tumble heels over head along the ground. This was quite dangerous, as the ram had great bodily strength, so the boy had to look out for him every time he wore his shawl.

One day the boy made up his mind he would play a trick on the ram.

The herd was grazing through the woods, at the foot of a high mountain, toward the shore of Tisleia Fjord. At this point the bank of the lake is very high, and it runs up nearly perpendicularly from the water. A few feet from the edge of the bank the boy found a stub of a tree. The stub was just of the same size as the boy, and it was so decayed that only a small kick would send it crumbling over the ground. Over this stub the boy hung his shawl, on its top he placed his cap, and in other ways made it look like himself. Then he hid himself behind some trees, watching the herd, that now was coming grazing toward the bank.

All of a sudden the ram caught sight of the stub-boy and the shawl! He threw up his head, looked at the figure a moment, the old fire came into his eyes again, he backed up a few feet, put his neck into a stiff curve, and laid his ears flat back on his woolly neck. You could read anger all over his face. Calculating only the distance to the stub-boy, he uttered a harsh baa, and then suddenly, with all his strength, threw himself forward into a run and rushed toward what he supposed was the boy. The stub with a loud crack flew into a thousand rotten pieces that, together with a cloud of dust from decayed wood, completely covered the ram's face and the front of his body, the shawl covering his head, blinded him—and bump! with a tremendous force over the bank flew the ram, still covered with the shawl—and with a great splash fell into the lake!

In a moment he came to the surface again, managed to get the shawl from his head, and swam ashore. With drooping ears and water streaming down from all over his body, he crawled out and up the bank, every now and then shaking himself violently to get rid of the water. Having reached the top of the bank, he slowly rejoined the grazing herd.

But you should have seen the boy when the big ram started on that expedition of his through air and water!

As soon as the ram butted the stub, with that great "crack," and plunged out into the water, he jumped out from behind the trees, doubled up with side-splitting laughter.

And when the poor ram crawled up on the bank, drenched to the very skin and looking very "sheepish," the boy ran over to him and greeted him with peals of laughter again and again.

"Oh, Billy," he said derisively; "where have you been, Billy? How did you like it, Billy? Was it good—will you try it any more, Billy?"

But Billy never again tried to butt the boy.—O. C. Vico, in St. Nicholas.

Harem is Costly.

The budget for the Turkish sultan's harem amounts to $15,000,000 a year. Every one of the women who leave the harem every year to get married receives a dowry of $37,000. There are usually 300 inmates of the harem, each of whom has ten maids, and a carriage with four horses. The greatest ambition of courtiers and officials is to have their daughters accepted for the harem.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest, and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out —Cured by Cuticura.

"I had an eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out; also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon scales or crusts formed where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I purchased a complete treatment of the Cuticura Remedies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the eruption appeared again, only a little lower, but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. W. S. BAER.

Subject: "Christian Life."

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Winfield Scott Baer, who came from Grace Church, Sandusky, O., to assume the rectorship of St. George's Church, is a man of attractive personality and an excellent speaker. His subject Sunday morning was "Christian Life." His text was from Psalms cxxii:1-2: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, who made heaven and earth." Mr. Baer said:

It is from the heights that we gain our widest vision. It is from the heights of human attainment that we see life most truly. To gain these heights we need to go where Christ has climbed. There are certain incidents in His life which preserve to us the intimate connection between the truth of His life and the place where it was revealed in its fullness. Let us lift up our eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh our help.

Up into a mount, with a few chosen disciples, He went by night to pray. In the darkness of the night those who accompanied Him beheld a vision. Before them was the Son of Man, transfigured, with shining face and garments all aglow. Then there came a voice from God, "This is my beloved Son, hear Him."

How often in the days to come must they have recalled that vision with joy. How often in the night of their perplexity, when they questioned what to do, must they have heard the voice, "This is my Son, hear Him." Their brethren saw not the vision, heard not the voice. In the valley below they slept. They had not been asked to go with their Master, and they did right to rest their wearied frames for the work of the morrow. But those who went with Him saw the vision and heard the voice which declared to them that whatever other teachers were, or had taught, the perfect now was come, and the imperfect was done away. The glory of the morning star is swallowed up in the light of the sun, which it foretells. So, day by day, these men saw in Him the transfiguration of humanity, the glory of a life lived with the Father; they heard the voice of that Father saying, "This is my Son, hear Him," and knew in Christ the perfection of sonship as God intended it to be.

Is this a vision of past history? A page torn from the biography of Jesus of Nazareth? Is this a day when there is no vision, and no prophet; is this the mount of God far away, and must one journey to the Holy Land to see it? Nay; since He trod the earth, all lands are holy, and we may go into the mount, may gain a vision and hear a voice. For the glory of Christ is not dimmed, nor the voice of God stilled. As one looks back through the vista of centuries and asks for the force which has uplifted man, there dawns upon him for answer the vision of the transfigured Christ. As one seeks for the highest inspiration of brush and chisel, again, clearer or dimmer, as he may see, there stands before him the vision of the transfigured man. As he gazes at glorious cathedrals, wondering at the greatness of the work and the beauty of the art, again the Son of Man appears as the Alpha and Omega, the beginning of the inspiration, the end of all the faith.

Ah, yes, and one need not go to masterpieces of art to discern the transfigured man. Closer and nearer is He to us in life than in canvas or in stone. Wherever man kneels down in prayer, wherever in thought he lifts up his heart to God, wherever in time of meditation he goes apart to be with the Father, there comes a vision of transfigured man, glowing with the glory of God. The young man looking out into the world, the old man waiting his summons home, each may have his vision and must have it, if he would do his work aright. How sad our life as Christians would be if all we did was daily round of duty on the treadmill of existence. How long the days would be; how joyless the task, with our song at best a stoic chant. How glad when weary work was done, and weary eyes were closed, and weary hands were folded on the breast. But that is not the Christian life. It is life and more abundant, with its outlook and its hope. In study of the Scriptures, in musings when the heart is too full for speech, in hours of worship when hearts and voices are upraised to God, there may come to us a vision of strength, of truth, of the better man to be, the answer to all our panting and throbbing desires to come into the fullness of life. It may be dim, because our eyes are dull. But as our eyes grow brighter, the indistinctness fades away into the glory of the transfigured man Christ Jesus. The vision of man is given to us in Him. We long, too, for knowledge of God; as we creep up "the great altar stairs which slope through darkness up to God," far, far above us we see the light of the eternal glory. And as we draw nearer, the light resolves itself into the face of the transfigured One. "We have the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ," in whom God graciously veiled His brightness that our weak eyes might see.

Our fullest vision of God and our clearest vision of man are had in Him. We may see Him in life of noble man and pure woman as we walk through the streets. We may suddenly be brightened in the darkness of a home of sin by a glimpse of Christ shining through the life of one who lives with Him. Let us ever seek for that vision of Christ in the life of our fellows, and if we seek, we shall find. But let us remember that it is well to take time with Him in worship, in family prayer, where two or three are gathered together, in our own communing with the Father, as we go apart in the mount of prayer, which is the mount of vision, the mount of glory.

Another vision, not now on mountain high, apart from others, with veil of night drawn down, but in light of day on little knoll by side of road where throngs from the city pass. Three crosses reaced black against the sky, and the form of Him in the midst is as the form of Him who was transfigured on the mount. When He came down from the mount of transfiguration He met His disciples at the foot of the hill surrounded by a curious and disputing crowd. There was a strife of tongues; there was need and sorrow of man; there was weakness of His followers. The call was made on Him, and the demon was expelled, sorrow was done away, the distressed through His strength was restored to peace. This was the epitome of His life. Then He set His face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem. From vision to service; from communion with God to service of man; from transfiguration to crucifixion. His life was a life of service. He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister; He was a teacher, a preacher, a setter forth of God and man in word and life. He ministered to men's bodies; He enlightened their minds; He cleansed their souls; He strengthened them to realize the ideal which His whole life was pouring out for man in sacrificial love, as He humbled Himself and became poor that we might become eternally rich; He gave Himself up to death for us miserable sinners that we might have eternal life. The depth of sin shows the height of His love. The Cross of Calvary is the offering up of self for others.

As we know well there is wondrous strife of tongues. From every quarter there are questionings. Old forms of belief are losing power, but the old belief, we know, is not. It still inspires and uplifts, because it is life in God. Change is on the face of the earth; new and strange things are taught, sometimes even as the gospel of Christ; the seething waters of life rush to and fro, and at times one is tempted to believe that there is a reversion to chaos in spiritual things. We pass from this church, where we are gathered to worship God with the voice of thanksgiving and melody, the sound of prayer and praise, or we go from the quiet silence of our meditation, which was all filled with God's voice, into our life with other men. They may have no interest in these things, or best it may be an intellectual or speculative interest. They are very critical.

In that babel to whom shall we listen, what voice will still the deep and make a great calm? What but the old voice of the Transfiguration: "This is my Son, hear Him." Study His words to ascertain the truth to meet the inquiries of man's mind. But with all the study that we can give it we can never come to the truth of that which He taught until in our life we live the life of service, as He; He served; therefore is He great. It is a blessed privilege to be on the mount with God, but the vision must pass into service, as we go down, and by words and life declare the vision which we have had of truth and love. It will mean cost. If He found that service of others meant cost, bitter trial and weariness of body and mind, can we expect that as His followers we shall have naught to endure? May there not be for us misunderstandings, temptations from fortune and power and ambition? May there not be hardships for us, does service cost naught? It cost Him the cross. And the disciple is not above his Master. The nearer we come to realizing the vision of the perfect man the closer we draw to Calvary in the offering up of self for others. This mount of service and sacrifice is not far away, inaccessible peak capped with the everlasting snow. The service is here, where throngs of men pass to and fro; it is a lowly mount, the mount of service; in the turmoil and dust of the streets, among busy men thronging the city of man, which should be the city of God. It is lowly, yea, but hard to climb. Easier far to go up on mount of prayer and gain the vision of what we ought to be than in life of service to be what we ought. But thanks be to Him who is with us on Calvary as on Transfiguration. His spirit strengthens and helps us and enables us to offer ourselves a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God. "My help cometh from the Lord."

Is this all—vision, service, death? Nay. Christianity is not a law of death, but a law of life. Buddhism may hope to escape life, but Christ came that we might have life, and have it more abundantly. Christianity is life, not death. A few weeks after the crucifixion, on another mount, was a gathering of men with loving eyes fixed on Him who was the centre of the group: and His form was as the form of Him who had been nailed to the cross, the same, yet changed. Giving them His command, and His benediction. He ascended into heaven. Vision, service, life—not vision, sacrifice, death. Through His obedience to what He knew to be right, through His translation into a life of service of the perfect vision, which He had, He had come into the higher life, and is seated on the throne with God. It was the fitting end and glorious consummation of such a life, the crowning with the glory of manhood, fulfilled and ennobled to its greatest height. The law of sacrifice is not the law of death, but the law of spiritual life. He that loseth his life for My sake, findeth it. He that humbleth himself is exalted. He that bendeth down in love, ascendeth up in glory.

For the truth of the Mount of Ascension is a higher life for man into which he comes through vision and through service. Is it wrong to wish to use aright those powers which we feel within: is it wrong to long for a fuller life than that which now we have; must we be content with what we are in spiritual attainment, in character? Nay, if we be Christians, we cannot be content, as we behold the hills of Transfiguration and Calvary, of vision and sacrifice, and on the hill of Ascension behold manhood crowned by God in a fuller and larger life than that which earth affords, with clearer range of vision, with larger realm of service, with richer glory of the man, as He comes more and more into the likeness of His Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Love.

Nothing is sweeter than love, nothing stronger, nothing higher, nothing broader, nothing better, either in heaven or earth: because love is born of God, and, rising above all created things, can find its rest in Him alone. —Thomas a Kempis.

Do I really love Jesus? Have I ever told Him that I love Him? Let me tell Him now. Do I know Him as my friend to whom I can always go? When I am weak, do I think of His strength? When I am sinful, do I think of His purity? When I am in doubt, do I think of His wisdom? When I am tired, do I go to Him for rest?—Floyd W. Tomkins.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 11.

Subject: The Tongue and the Temper, Matt. v., 33-48—Golden Text, Psa. cxii., 8—Memory Verses, 44, 45—Topic: A Study of the New Life.

I. Christ's teaching on oaths (vs. 33-37). The Saviour has been showing and now continues to show "the relations in which His gospel stands to the previous dispensation, as being the fulfilment and confirmation of true Judaism and the reformation of degenerate Judaism." 33. "Hath been said." By the Jews when they received the law and in their interpretations of it. "Forswear." To swear falsely; to perjure. "But shalt perform." We know from Matt. 23:16-22 that the scribes and Pharisees declared oaths to be binding or not binding, according to the supposed sanctity of the object sworn by. "Unto the Lord." The teaching was that only such oaths as were made "unto the Lord" or in the name of the Lord were sacred and needed to be kept. "Oaths." An oath is a solemn affirmation or declaration. 34. "But I say." The emphasis here is on the "I." "Swear not at all." Profane and common swearing, with all light, irreverent oaths, such as are not required by the civil magistrate, are intended in our Lord's prohibition. "Neither by heaven." None of the oaths which our Lord adduces as specimens are judicial oaths. "God's throne." "Swearing by heaven either has no meaning or derives its meaning from the fact that heaven is the residence, the court, the throne of God."

35. "The earth," etc. See Isa. 66:1; Psa. 48:2.

36. "By thy head." A common form of oath in the ancient world. 37. "Yea—nay." Let your statements be in accordance with facts; let your language be simple, and let your answers be Yes or No. "Cometh of evil." All swearing, genteel or otherwise, "comes of evil."

II. On the law of retaliation (vs. 38-42).

38. "Eye for an eye." As a legal remedy the law of retaliation was probably the best possible in a rude state of society. 39. "But I say." Christ introduces a different method of dealing with an assailant. "Resist not evil." "Resist not him that is evil." "Turn—the other." It is the preparedness after one indignity, not to invite, but to submit meekly to another, without retaliation, which this strong language is meant to convey.

40. "Coat—cloak." The coat was the inner garment, the cloak was the outer and more costly one.

41. "Compel thee," etc. Officers and couriers in the service of the Roman Government traveling through the provinces had authority to impress any man or his beast into service for the purpose of carrying them and their baggage on their journey. 42. "Give—turn not thou away." This cannot mean that an industrious man is to give at the call of every idler, but it does mean that we are to be large-hearted, generous, ready to help others and grant favors. We are here exhorted to patience and forgiveness. 1. When we receive in our persons all sorts of insults and affronts (v. 39). 2. When we are despoiled of our goods (v. 40). 3. When our bodies are forced to undergo all kinds of toils, vexations and torments (v. 41). He that avenges himself must lose the mind of Christ and thus suffer an injury far greater than he can ever receive from man.

III. On loving enemies (vs. 43-48). 43. "Love thy neighbor." The rabbis interpreted the command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," in Lev. 19:18, as referring to Jews only. They therefore believed it to be right to hate the rest of mankind. 44. "But I say." Jesus opposed this narrow, wicked view of the case and "extended our neighborhood over all mankind." See Luke 10:25-37. "Love your enemies." (Rom. 5:5). It has been said that this one precept is a sufficient proof of the holiness of the gospel on those who call down upon you God's curses. "The best commentary on these matchless counsels is the bright example of the One who gave them. See 1 Pet. 2:21-24; Rom. 12:20, 21; 1 Cor. 4:12; 1 Pet. 3:9."

45. "May be the children," etc. To act as Christ commands here would be to act like God, who blesses those who curse Him and are His enemies by the gifts of sun and rain. This is divine. "Sun to rise," etc. He imparts to all alike, but all do not receive alike.

46. "What reward." If you have only loved those who love you, you have only come up to the standard of common sinners. "Publicans." Tax-gatherers employed by the Romans and hated by the Jews.

47. "Brethren only." The prominence of salutation in the social life of the East gives a special vividness to this precept. To utter the formal, "Peace be with you," to follow that up with manifold compliments and wishes was to recognize those whom men saluted as friends and brothers. But this the very heathen did ("heathen," rather than "publicans," being the true reading); and were the followers of Christ to be content with merely copying heathen customs? Christians must do to their enemies what the heathen did to their friends. "What do ye more than others." 1. Disciples have to do more than others. (1) They maintain the Christian life; (2) they extend the cause of Christ. 2. They are able to do more than others. (1) They are in alliance with God; (2) they have more moral power. 3. More is expected of them than of others. (1) By their Saviour; (2) by the world; (3) by their own consciences. 48. "Be—perfect." Complete; perfect in love. Take God as the model instead of publicans.

The bitterness of our way may be the best part of His wisdom.

Wu-Ting-Fang, formerly Chinese Minister to the United States, justified the boycott, and said there was no serious anti-foreign feeling in the country.

A more hopeful feeling seems to prevail at Algeciras regarding an agreement on the Moroccan questions.

Mont Pelee, Martinique, was again in violent eruption, according to a special cable dispatch from Barbados.

The Reichstag, at Berlin, Germany, by a large majority passed the bill granting conventional tariff rates to the United States.

The Pearl Necklace.

Few feminine adornments have enjoyed a longer term of prosperity than the pearl necklace, whether real or sham, and many a wearer would find herself oddly bereft indeed were she to lose her string of pearls or did fashion ordain them no longer permissible. Pearls may be skillfully imitated to look like the real gem, or, perhaps, in many instances, even better, but what dreadful parodies are cheerfully donned only the ultra fastidious can realize. Pearls the size of a filbert, of an indescribable black yellow tint, are not infrequently to be seen worn by a complacent wearer, who ought to possess better taste, to judge by the rest of her attire. No age, no nationality, appears to be proof against the pearl necklace. And it is all the more surprising in that there are numbers of delicately colored chains to be had for a trifle, which are in good taste and decidedly a desirable adjunct to a costume, while this winter sees a return to favor of the bead necklet, often pretty in color and likely to carry out the prevailing tint of the gown or hat. Jewelry, whether real or imitation, can be either in good taste or bad; it is hardly a question of money, for the millionaire's wife in her emeralds or rubies can strike a note of vulgarity just as can the poor woman with her strings of beads or imitation pearls.

Paper Kettles.

It is stated that preparations are being made to furnish the soldiers of the German army with paper kettles, which are a Japanese invention. Although the utensils are made of pliable paper, they hold water readily. By pouring water over them they can be hung over the fire without burning for a length of time sufficient to boil the water. One kettle can be used about eight times, and the cost is only 2 cents. One advantage of these unique receptacles is that they are much lighter to carry than anything else yet devised.

Greatest of All Dry Docks.

Hamburg, which as a port seems to have beaten its brilliant rival, Antwerp, is building a dry dock which will be the largest in the world. It will lift 25,500 tons, which is a little more than twice the capacity of the present leviathan of dry docks. Thus the biggest ships of the world can be docked at Hamburg by the end of 1907 or beginning of 1908, when this dock is finished.

Origin of Raising the Hat.

Lifting the hat to a lady is a custom which dates back to the days of chivalry, when knights never appeared in public except in full armor. On entering the house of a friend, however, or a room in which were ladies it became the custom for a knight to remove his helmet as a sign that, being in the presence of friends, he was safe from attack.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

A German Sausage Exhibition.

A statement has been recently published that in Berne next spring a sausage exhibition will be held, at which 1,785 varieties of sausages will be shown. As Dominie Simpson would say, this is prodigious. It seems almost incredible that so many different sorts of sausage could be gathered together from the four corners of Europe. And yet there is nothing inherently impossible in the statement, for the kinds of sausage are of as infinite variety as the ingredients of which they are made. The trade in Berlin knows over 400 different species, and Berlin is by no means a center of the sausage industry.—London Telegraph.

A Chicago man attended a ball and, by using a pedometer, reached the conclusion that a girl dances about sixteen miles in the course of an evening.

CITIZENS SAVINGS

THIS YEAR

DEVOTE an hour of careful thought today to your New Year's resolutions. Do not be among those who think resolutions are valueless because some are broken.

The progress of men as individuals and as a race has come from MENTAL EFFORT, from resolutions, from trying to do what they know they ought to do.

We can't all keep our resolutions. But we can at least try. We can remain hopeful, earnest, and this is the day for us to begin again.

Let us question ourselves, accuse ourselves, investigate our weaknesses, recognize them - AND DETERMINE TO CORRECT THEM IN THE COMING YEAR.

Every man and woman must decide what she or he needs individually. With many of us lack of will power is the great curse—procrastination, self-indulgence.

With others it is easy good nature, extravagance. With others various bad habits that sap the vitality which could mean success, not mere amusement or physical gratification.

We recommend to you today a resolution illustrated in this picture.

Desiring to give the best possible advice to our readers, we advise them most earnestly TO SAVE MONEY. Every man with a child or any human being dependent upon him owes it to his sense of decency to save his money. For only money saved and accumulated can mean permanent safety for the weak.

We do not advise saving merely for the money's sake, merely for gratification or enrichment. To have money and have nothing else is to be poor indeed.

But money MEANS INDEPENDENCE. Remember that the man whose dollar you must get from day to day is the man THAT OWNS YOU.

And as long as you must deliver each day of your life for that man's dollar you do not own yourself.

In old slave days an unusually intelligent negro would be permitted, as the saying went, "to buy his time," or even "to buy his freedom." The master realized that the slave working free, with some incentive, would produce much more than under compulsion, and he would arrange to sell the slave his own time for so much per day, or sell him the right to buy his freedom absolutely.

What would you think of a negro who in those days would have refused the chance of freedom?

You would say that the man was made to be a slave, and he ought to be a slave.

But do you realize that when YOU FAIL TO SAVE MONEY YOU ARE REFUSING A CHANCE TO BUY YOUR FREEDOM?

Are you a free man, when you don't know where the money will come from to take care of your family or yourself the week after next?

Are you a free man, when you don't own a foot of the surface of this earth, which men buy and sell to each other?

Are you a free man, if you haven't accumulated and saved that which makes you independent of other men?

Do you imagine that having your body owned by a man is so very different from having your time and your future owned?

Make up your mind that this year you will start in to buy your freedom.

We would not suggest to any man that he should free himself from wage dependence in order to be idle. If we believed that a man would accumulate enough to let him do nothing, and then do nothing, we would much prefer he never might save a dollar. Every man should work and want to work, as long as there is strength and energy in him.

But it is also true that every man should be in a position to do the best work that offers. He ought to be in a position to seize a good opportunity. He should be in such a position that, if duty told him to he could devote himself to the welfare of others, to working for his fellow men instead of working forever for his breakfast, luncheon, dinner and bed.

Money is crystalized labor. The dollars that you have saved up are all that you have to show materially for the efforts of your past life. What has become of the money—little or much—that you have received in the past? It has gone into your stomach, in pleasure, in clothes, unless you have it to show. Of course, if you have really spent every dollar as you got it for a family that needed every dollar, all honor to you.

But how many men and women can truthfully say that? How many can deny that if they had the will power they could save something and still do their duty?

Remember that this resolution to save means not only the accumulation of money, but the formation and strengthening of character.

Nine times out of ten the man who begins to save stops some kind of foolishness. Economy means giving up something, and the wise man usually manages to give up that which is bad for him. When you begin to save you begin, as a rule, to sleep longer, to drink and smoke less, to waste less time among unprofitable friends.

The saving of money not only means independence in the future, but it means better use of time in the present.

Think this over today. Think of your own case. Look at the men about you who have money. Remember that with a few disgraceful exceptions among the gamblers, thieves and politicians, the average man has money BECAUSE HE HAD THE STRENGTH OF CHARACTER TO SAVE. Even John D. Rockefeller has a thousand millions now. BECAUSE HE WAS ABLE TO SAVE THE FIRST DOLLAR. IF HE HAD SPENT THE FIRST FEW DOLLARS HE WOULD HAVE SPENT ALL THE OTHER DOLLARS, AND WHILE HE WAS SPENDING THEM HE WOULD HAVE MISSED THE OPPORTUNITY THAT HAS GIVEN HIM THE MILLIONS PILED UP.

True, Rockefeller should not have those millions. He WOULDN'T have them if the other people of the nation equalled him in concentration of purpose, if they took an interest in their own financial welfare and their own government. Let a few millions of men develop the concentrated determination of Rockefeller, and YOU WILL HAVE MILLIONS OF PROSPEROUS MEN, AND NO ROCKEFELLERS.

As to how THE money should be saved, the simple recipe is BEGIN AT ONCE.

The savings bank, of course, is the simplest beginning. There are other ways. The man who has the intelligence to select the means of making one dollar produce another quickly is, of course, the lucky man.

All of us should watch for the opportunities that are offered in this day of extraordinary commercial and other developments.

The real estate field especially, with wise selection, offers a very great opportunity. We shall impress constantly upon all our readers, IN THE HOPE OF MAKING MANY OF THEM RICH, the fact that the problem of transportation is entering upon an absolutely new phase.

The electric road is going to be as great an improvement upon the steam road as the steam road stage coach.

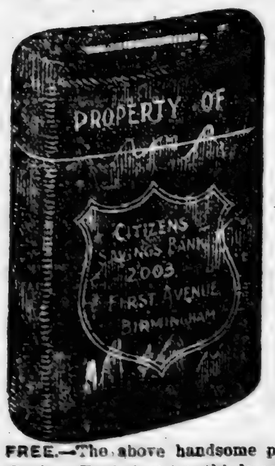
The people of this district, and of the entire South, have got to learn the habit of saving and economy before they can ever become independent like their neighbors of the New England states and oth where the savings bank is considered next to the church and school house in importance.

The Citizens Saving Bank was organized and is being conducted for the purpose of inculcating among the people the importance of thrift and saving, and is ready and anxious at all times to help you so far along these lines.

The Citizens Saving Bank is the only important bank in the State which confines its banking business strictly and exclusively to Savings Accounts, and in this connection we ask you to read the Alabama ing on Savings Accounts, which we publish at the bottom of this page. We also print below an excerpt from the laws enacted for the protection of the vast number of savings depositors in the great savings of Massachusetts. Read both of them. Each is a positive argument in favor of a strictly savings bank for savings deposits.



FREE.—The above handsome pocket Savings Bank (cut two-thirds actual size) free to any man, woman, boy or girl, applying for same. Convenient for the pocket or the shopping bag.

THE ALABAMA BANKING LAW.

Section 250 of the last Constitution provides that depositors in banks who have not stipulated for interest, shall, for their deposits, be entitled, in case of insolvency, to preference of pay over all other creditors, and this law applies to all banks, whether incorporated or not.

In other words, if a bank does both a savings business and a regular banking business, and should become insolvent, then the depositors who did not get interest on their deposits would have a preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings.

The Citizens Savings Bank accepts only savings accounts, hence every depositor stands on the same footing here.

THE MASSACHUSETTS BANKING LAW.

Extract from Section 3, Chapter 169, Acts of 1902, Massachusetts Statutes, reads:

"No savings bank .....shall occupy the same office or suite of offices with a national bank, trust company or other bank of discount, nor any office directly connected by means of doors or other openings in partitions with the office or suite of offices occupied by any such national bank, trust company or other bank of discount." The penalty for the violation of this section being not more than $500. Section 4 provides that "No president, vice president or treasurer of a savings bank shall hold the office or perform the duties of president, vice president, treasurer or cashier of a national bank, trust company or other bank of discount." The penalty for the violation of this section is also not more than $500.

McCalls Want Him to Tell All—Le islative Agent Who Got $1,347,3
From New York Life and Accoun

Unexpectedly From Exile.

Albany, N. Y. — "Judge" And Hamilton, the legislative agent of New York Life and other insur companies, returned to this city unexpectedly. He came to this city most at once. He spent the evenin with his family, refusing to see an one save his immediate relatives.

The "judge" reached Albany wi his son-in-law, James C. Brady, a of Anthony N. Brady. They were by a carriage at the station and d rapidly to the Hamilton home in Thur low Terrace. Early in the evening in quirers were told that Mr. Hamilto was not at home, and while his famil knew that he was expected they di not know his whereabouts. La er member of the family made a forma statement in explanation as follows:

"Mr. Hamilton arrived home to-nigh with his son-in-law. He desires to pas this evening with his family, and wil not make any statement for publica tion to-night."

Much comment was made here tha the "judge" should come back imme diately preceding the active opposition to the insurance reforms.

Arrangements are being made, it believed, by which the New York Lif will bring suit against Hamilton, forc stalling necessity for action by the State. Ex-Judge Keene, of counsel fo the company, was closeted with the Attorney-General for a long time.
Neither would talk about the visit.

New York City. — "They murdered poor McCall, but they will have the b le of their lives when they draw their stilettos on Hamilton."

Thus spoke a friend of "Judge" An drew Hamilton, who met the former legislative agent of the New York Life when he landed from the Deutschland, of the Hamburg-American Line, after an absence of several months abroad.
This declaration was made after Ham ilton had spoken freely to his friend.
It may be taken as an indication of the "judge's" mental attitude, and fur nishes a reason for his return at this time when the air is full of talk about criminal prosecution of those connected with the insurance scandals.

Hamilton's arrival in this city was wholly unexpected by insurance offi cers. Even the heads of the New York Life, who might be expected to have some knowledge of his movements, ex pressed themselves as greatly sur prised when told that the "judge" was really back from France. Members of the Fowler Committee, through whose efforts John C. McCall, son of the late President of the New York Life, was sent to Paris, and brought back a statement from Hamilton purporting to explain his relations with John A.
McCall and the affairs of the company, were equally slow to take the news of his return seriously until undeniable proof was furnished. The McCalls now wish him to tell all.

"Judge" Hamilton sailed from Genoa on February 24. He had come from Nice and the Mediterranean route was most convenient. He wrote his name on the passenger list "H. A. Milton," and the abbreviation served to keep his identity secret most of the way over.
For the first two days he remained in his stateroom. After that he mingled freely with the other passengers and frequently discussed insurance matters when the subject was broached.

"Judge" Hamilton's return revives interest in the testimony before the Armstrong Committee, in which his re lations with the New York Life and other insurance companies were fully explained. John A. McCall admitted without qualification that Hamilton had received enormous sums of money, which were used to prevent the passage of laws which would have injured the business of the companies had they gone into the statute books. Between 1892 and 1904, $1,347,382.41 of the New York Life's money passed through the hands of Hamilton. Of this amount $283,383 has not been accounted for.
The Fowler report, which was pre sented to the New York Life February
1 holds Hamilton individually respon sible for $795,964. According to the report the Albany bureau of taxation and legislation presided over by Ham ilton got $705,577 of this amount. The "home office annex account" got $223,- 00, which John A. McCall personally refunded.

In his statement which he sent from France by John C. McCall, Hamilton admitted he had spent $720,350 from 890 to 1905. This statement, which was put in evidence before the Arm strong Committee on December 27, showed that Hamilton had received for himself $160,650, in the shape of re tainers and percentages allowed to him under the private arrangement with
Mr. McCall. This did not include $90,- 000 which he received from the New York Life for having forced the State to return taxes paid before it was de cided that the premium tax law was not retroactive.

DIES BEFORE CLASSMATES

Student is Shocked to Death by Electricity at Union College.

Holding Part of an Apparatus He Receives 2300 Volt Current and Falls Unconscious.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Before the eyes of his classmates, who were watching an experiment in which he had volunteered to help, Paul Waite, a junior and a student of the electrical engineering course in Union College, was killed by electricity in the laboratory of the college. The class of which Waite was a member was gathered in the laboratory at 2 o'clock in the afternoon for the usual lecture, and the instructor, in illustrating his remarks with experiments, asked one of the students to help him. Waite stepped forward and helped rig up the apparatus, which was connected with the high tension electric service of the college.

The students were watching the electrical apparatus curiously, when the lecturer asked Waite to throw open the switch. As he did so his body came in contact with an exposed portion of the apparatus and 2300 volts passed through his body. Waite fell to the floor unconscious, while the students rushed forward to save him. The lecturer ran out of the room and summoned medical assistance, bringing Dr. Herbert L. Towne, the physical director, at once to the laboratory. Resuscitation was attempted, and for two hours the physician and students took turns in working over Waite. He died two hours after receiving the electrical shock.

The college has been thrown into mourning as a result of the young man's death. Waite was a prominent member of the Chi Psi fraternity and was also one of the best athletes in the college. His home was in Fort Edward, his father being one of the wealthiest men of that town.

Word of the young man's death was sent to his parents, and it was learned here that his mother became hysterical. Waite had been home the day before and had left his parents in a happy frame of mind. Before entering the laboratory he had arranged to take part in an athletic tournament, and he had looked forward to winning championship honors.

It was with a laugh that he stepped forward to help fix up the apparatus with which the instructor was to illustrate his lecture. The minds of all in the room were concentrated on the experiment which was to be made, and there was no thought of tragedy. When Waite suddenly fell to the floor the students were unable to realize that anything serious had happened. Most of those who rushed forward to help the fallen man thought that he had fainted, and when it was realized that Waite had been killed before their eyes many tears were shed.

HELD FOR PRINTING HANGING.

Three Newspapers Indicted Under a Press Muzzling Statute.

St. Paul, Minn.—Charged with violating the State law prohibiting the publishing of details of a hanging, three leading newspapers of this city have been indicted by the Grand Jury.

The indictments are based on what is known as the John Day Smith law, passed in 1889, which forbids the publication of any more than a mere statement of the fact that a convict was on the day in question executed according to law. It expressly prohibits the Sheriff from allowing any newspaper reporter or representative to witness an execution. No attempt has been made to enforce the law until recently, when Governor Johnson set the date for the execution of William Williams. He then cautioned Sheriff Miesen to obey the law strictly.

The newspaper men were excluded, but all of the three papers contained a detailed account of the hanging that day. It is probable that the case will be taken to the Supreme Court to test its constitutionality.

The indictments are against the corporations, and not the reporters who wrote the stories.

COAL AND OIL INQUIRY

Investigation by the Interstate Commerce Commission Approved.

PRESIDENT CRITICISES CONGRESS

In a Message Calls Action Hasty and Inefficient — Asks More Law and Money — Fears Probing Will Result in Immunity to Offenders—Has Signed Resolution Reluctantly.

Washington, D. C.—President Roosevent sent a message to Congress announcing that he had signed the Tillman-Gillespie resolution calling on the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate railroad monopolies in oil and coal, and incidentally gave Congress a piece of news officially that will attract wide attention.

In his message Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I have signed the joint resolution 'instructing the Interstate Commerce Commission to make examinations into the subject of railroad discriminations and monopolies in coal and oil, and report on the same from time to time.' I have signed it with hesitation, because in the form in which it was passed it achieves very little, and may achieve nothing, and it is highly undesirable that a resolution of this kind shall become law in such form as to give the impression of insincerity—that is, of pretending to do something which really is not done—but after much hesitation I concluded to sign the resolution because its defects can be remedied by legislation which I hereby ask for. It must be understood that unless this subsequent legislation is granted the present resolution must be mainly, and may be entirely, inoperative.

"Before specifying what this legislation is I wish to call attention to one or two preliminary facts. In the first place, a part of the investigation requested by the House of Representatives in the resolution adopted February 15, 1905, relating to the oil industry, and a further part having to do with the anthracite coal industry, have been for some time under investigation by the Department of Commerce and Labor. These investigations, I am informed, are approaching completion, and before Congress adjourns I shall submit to you the preliminary reports of these investigations. Until these reports are completed the Interstate Commerce Commission could not endeavor to carry out so much of the resolution of Congress as refers to the ground already covered without running the risk of seeing the two investigations conflict and therefore render each other more or less nugatory.

"In the second place, I call your attention to the fact that if an investigation of the nature proposed in this joint resolution is thoroughly and effectively conducted it will result in giving immunity from criminal prosecution to all persons who are called, sworn and constrained by compulsory process of law to testify as witnesses; though, of course, such immunity from prosecution is not given to those from whom statements or information merely, in contradistinction to sworn testimony, are obtained.

"This is not at all to say that such investigations should not be undertaken. Publicity can by itself often accomplish extraordinary results for good; and the court of public judgment may secure such results where the courts of law are powerless. There are many cases where an investigation, securing complete publicity about abuses and giving Congress the material on which to proceed in the enactment of laws, is more useful than a criminal prosecution can possibly be. But it should not be provided for by law without a clear understanding that it may be an alternative instead of an additional remedy; that is, that to carry on the investigation may serve as a bar to the successful prosecution of the offenses disclosed. The official body directed by Congress to make the investigation must, of course, carry out its direction, and therefore the direction should not be given without full appreciation of what it means.

"But the direction contained in the joint resolution which I have signed will remain almost inoperative unless money is provided to carry out the investigations in question, and unless the commission in carrying them out is authorized to administer oaths and compel the attendance of witnesses.

"I accordingly recommend to Congress the serious consideration of just what they wish the commission to do, and how far they wish it to go, having in view the possible incompatibility of conducting an investigation like this and of also proceeding criminally in a court of law; and, furthermore, that a sufficient sum, say $50,000, be at once added to the current appropriation for the commission, so as to enable it to do the work indicated in a thorough and complete manner, while at the same time the power is explicitly conferred upon it to administer oaths and compel the attendance of witnesses in making the investigation in question, which covers work quite apart from its usual duties."

The general tone of the message will be considered by Congress as a slap from the Executive, and will go far to disturb the relations between the two branches of the Government.

Read between the lines the message is taken by many legislators to mean that urged on by the action of Congress and the charges of inactivity in prosecution of great monopolies, the Administration is contemplating a prosecution of the Standard Oil Company and the coal combinations.

PRAIRIE FIRE IN TEXAS

Billows of Flame Devastated 800,000 Acres of Land.

More Than 1000 Head of Cattle Burned and Four Unorganized Texas Counties Laid Waste.

Lubbock, Texas.—The most destructive prairie fire ever known in the Southwest swept over four large counties northwest of here. It destroyed the grass on more than 800,000 acres of land in Hockley, Lamb, Cochran and Bailey counties, burned more than 1000 head of cattle to death and destroyed many ranch buildings.

These four counties are unorganized, and there are no towns within their borders. They are devoted wholly to ranch interests. The fire started in the northern part of Hockley County five days ago and was swept south and west by the high March wind that was blowing. The grass was dry and of great height and it afforded fuel for the flames that caused the conflagration to become one of the grandest spectacles ever witnessed in this region.

The fire raced with the wind across the breadth of two counties, covering a distance of fifty miles in a few hours. This broad wall of flame then swept south and west, extending its path of destruction for a distance of more than 100 miles and laying everything in that broad scope of country waste.

Women and children who occupied ranch houses lying in the path of the oncoming flames were rescued and carried to places of safety on fleet-footed horses.

It is estimated that the losses caused by the fire aggregated more than $1,000,000.

THREATENS THE POWDER TRUST

Bill For Government Plant May Wipe Out DuPont Contracts.

Washington, D. C. — The Powder Trust, known as the DuPont Syndicate, will lose its valuable contracts with the Government for making smokeless powder if a bill introduced in the House by Chairman Hull, of the Military Affairs Committee, becomes a law. It appropriates $200,000 for the construction of Government factories in which the four or five million dollars' worth of smokeless powder, used annually by the army and navy, will hereafter be manufactured. It is thought the bill will pass, as it has the approval of the President, the Secretary of War and of the Navy.

It is said the Government can make its own powder for about one-half what it now pays the trust. If this statement is correct, the Government will save in a single year on its powder bill three or four times the cost of the proposed Government powder plant.

The introduction of the Hull bill was due to an expose of the working of the Powder Trust made in the House by Representative Graff, of Illinois, showing that the four great powder manufacturing concerns of the country—the DuPont, the Lafland & Rand, the International and the California, which constitute the DuPont Syndicate—always put in identical bids in answer to the Government's advertisement for supplying powder.

REFUSE TO PRINT LYING LABELS

Chicago Lithographers Offer Co-operation to Illinois Pure Food Commission.

Chicago.—Chicago lithographers are going to take up the pure food crusade. Unless certain manufacturers order labels for their food products which tell the truth, it was said that the lithographers would not print them.

This was promised by a committee from the Federation of Labor, which called at the office of the Illinois Pure Food Commission. The committee was headed by Charles D. Wheeler, who said:

"What we think is that the commission ought to go after the manufacturers. Half of the time the dealer sells an adulterated article without knowing what is in it. Then he gets arrested and fined and has to pay the bill. I sympathize with the small dealer. It is the big manufacturer who is responsible for this glucose mixture colored with aniline dye that goes under the name of jam that we are after."

Assistant Commissioner Patterson said he favored the plan of the lithographers.

INDIANAPOLIS CITY THEATRE.

Tomlinson Hall to Be Remodelled For Use of Anti-Syndicate Attractions.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Mayor Bookwalter is arranging to give independent theatrical attractions a place in this city where they may appear.

For more than a year the syndicate has controlled all the theatres in this city, and many attractions have not been brought here because of the bar placed upon them by the syndicate.

It is the plan of Mayor Bookwalter to convert Tomlinson Hall, owned by the city, into a theatre, where independent attractions may appear. The interior of the building is to be remodelled and every appointment necessary for a first-class theatre added.

DOUBT.

She shall not know I love her,
I will not let her see
The rosy riot in my heart
When she is kind to me.

How could I vex so fair a maid,
So fair and calm and high,
When I am shackled to the earth,
Bond-brother to a sigh?

My pain shall not be hers to share,
My passion sway her not,
And high and calm and fair she still
Shall count her happy lot.

But does she count it so, nor yearn
To hear a lover's call?
I cannot longer bear the doubt,
I go—to tell her all!

—Walter Prichard Eaton.

An Up-to-Date Romance

By LESLIE W. QUIRK.

LOIS had two aunts and a lover. The aunts were downright tyrants; the lover—well, I was the lover.

Lois was rich. This fact caused all the trouble. Because Lois was rich the aunts regarded me with undisguised distrust; because Lois was rich they kept her eternally at home like a caged mouse; because Lois was rich, in fact, they forbade my marrying her.

Because I was a fool, perhaps, I swore that I would marry Lois in spite of the aunts, her fortune, and all the personified objections that ever walked on earth. Because I was a fool, certainly, I made this plain to the aunts.

Things went from bad to worse. At first I was allowed to see Lois any time I chose. But after a while the periods when I was permitted to find her "at home" were curtailed mightily. After a time, indeed, I was allowed to see her only on certain days, between certain hours, for all the world as if she were in prison.

I blustered, I swore vengeance, I talked United States law at those two old jailer aunts till my knowledge and powers of invention were entirely exhausted. But still they smiled serenely upon me, and intimated that I might call for a few minutes the week after next.

I don't know what they told Lois about me. Anyhow, it did not in the least alter her love. But it was embarrassing sometimes when she would turn her great, trusting brown eyes upon me and ask if I had ever killed a man or blown up a house with dynamite. Because I had not.

"I wish," she said to me one day, "that I could hear your big, hearty voice all the time. It would make me braver."

Plainly, if I could not be by her side I must find an alternative. There was the telephone, to be sure, but there were also the aunts with their opposition. There was—what on earth was there? Oh, yes——

I sent to a dealer in phonographs.

"I should like a talk," I said.

He led me into his private office.

"Well?"

"Into a phonograph," I explained, "for a reproduction of my speech, you know."

So I talked. It cost me more than the long-distance telephone, but I paid willingly. I bought a phonograph and took lessons on making records. Then I presented the machine to Lois.

"If you wind it up and put in a record," I told her, "it will talk for me."

The machine swore eternal love for Lois in my behalf and Lois smiled.

The next time I called I bought twelve records. Half of them were lastingly impressed with remarks of mine, and half of them were blank. I explained to Lois the process of reversing the machine in order to produce a permanent record of her speeches.

"Now, I have numbered these six records," I explained. "Put them on the cylinder of the phonograph in the proper order. After No. 1 has talked take one of the six blank records and reply to mine. In this manner we will keep up a close imitation of a conversation."

The aunts blandly informed me that I was not to be allowed to call for a week or more. Nevertheless, not all the aunts of the universe could keep me from marching up and down the walk in front of the house.

So the next day I sauntered past—that is, almost past. At the further corner of the yard I came to an abrupt halt, for the curtains of the house were down and no smoke curled from the chimney. It was deserted!

There was no time for trifling. There might be a landlord or an agent who owned a key; no one was on the spot. Within five minutes I had broken into the house.

The rooms down stairs were bare. Scarcely noticing them, I swept up the stairs to the front room, from whose window I had often seen the face of Lois while I was walking in front of the house. It, too, was deserted.

As I searched the room with eager haste my eyes spied a single object. Under the edge of the front window, almost hidden by the curtain, and apparently placed there to prop up the window, was a phonographic record.

I burst into the store of my friend, the dealer in phonographs, with the impetuosity of a runaway train. Before he could restrain me I had placed the record on a small phonograph and started the wheels of the machine.

"Oh, Frank," came the trembling voice of Lois from the megaphone horn, "we are going away—my aunts and I. They told me to-night that I should never see you again. I don't know where we are bound for eventually, but we go to Everville from here. Come to me, Frank, won't you? I—my aunts are coming and I must hide the record. I pray that you may find it."

Everville I found to be a little railroad junction. It was easy to trace the three women to a hotel. They had occupied double room No. 16 the night before.

"Anybody in Room 16?" I demanded of the sleepy clerk.

"Guess not," he grunted, studying the register.

"I'll take it then," I announced, hurriedly.

Before he was through insisting that a single person could find no use for a room with two beds in it I had thrown a bill on the counter and was half-way upstairs.

In a drawer of the dresser I found the record for which I was searching. Without a second's delay I slipped it on the phonograph I carried. The voice of Lois presently broke the breathless silence.

"Aunt Rebecca thinks I am crazy," it said. "Perhaps I am, but it is not because I talk to my phonograph all the time, but because they are taking me away from you. Somehow, Frank, I feel that you will follow us. I do not know where we go from here, but you may be able to learn from the ticket agent. We leave at 8.30 to-morrow (Wednesday) morning."

That was all. But it was the voice of Lois, and it cheered me and filled me with fresh determination. I shut my lips firmly and swore that I would follow the two aunts and Lois through every country on earth rather than lose the girl.

"Think I can remember everybody that buys tickets?" growled the agent at the station when I accosted him for information. I cursed him for a fool. It was evident that the aunts were using Lois' money for bribes.

It seemed that I was off the trail at the very start. But the porter of the parlor car of the 8.30 train the next morning set me right.

"Am yo' name Frank Bomer?" he asked, eying me as I boarded his train.

When I had assured him that it was he handed me a package.

"From a pow'ful scared gal," he chuckled.

I unrolled the phonographic record. With the sight of it came the awful recollection that I had forgotten my phonograph.

The situation was appalling. Here I was within sound of Lois' voice, but to all intents as deaf to it as a man without ears. True, I could buy another phonograph when the train reached the city, but the chances were a hundred to one that the aunts would bundle Lois off at some little junction close at hand.

Again the porter came to my aid. He had been walking past me several times as I sat thinking, and was evidently deeply curious as to the contents of the package he had given me. Now he stopped by my seat.

"Dat part of a phon'raph, sah?" he asked, looking at the record.

"Yes," I explained; "it represents the vocal organs."

He grinned. "Am yo' de owner of the phon-raph in de 'spress car?"

I felt the hot blood rush to my head. Salvation was at my back.

It required some judicious tipping and lordly airs to gain access to the baggage car and secure possession of the phonograph. But when love backs a man, even a do-nothing can accomplish wonders, while an ordinary being—well, I wound the machine and waited for the voice of my sweetheart.

"This is the most momentous day of my whole life," came the clear tones of Lois. "It is my birthday, and I am no longer a girl. To-day I am of age, free to marry whom I please. If you find me, Frank, I will become your wife at once. I hope the promise will spur you on. We stop to-night at Rugby."

The voice ended abruptly, and I fancied the aunts must have disturbed the girl as she was talking into the phonograph.

"How far from here is Rugby?" I asked the conductor, after I was back in the parlor car.

"Just passed it," he growled.

I looked out of the window and found that the train was bowling along at too great a speed to jump. Springing to my feet I whipped at the bell cord. The conductor turned with an oath and signaled to go ahead. The train had barely slackened speed.

It was time for prompt and vigorous action. Grasping the bell cord once more I pulled it sharply, and then, before the official with the ticket punch could object, I pinioned him to a seat. This time the train came to a full stop.

When I dropped off the rear platform and started back up the track I dare say I left a car full of astonished people. I know I left a blaspheming conductor and the ill wishes of a crew whose train had been delayed two precious minutes. But what does a man care for hades when he is chasing heaven?

There is no need of detailing the steps by which I traced the record in Rugby. The station master pointed out the cab driver, who in turn led me to the hotel clerk. Lois had evidently been given the key of the room to deliver when they went, and had taken the opportunity of presenting also the phonographic record, with instructions to turn it over to me.

When I had purchased a new phonograph, I found that Lois' message contained but one short sentence:

"We are going to Leighton," she told me.

It was the last day of June when my train reached Leighton. Rain was falling in perfect torrents, and the Missouri River already looked ugly and swollen. Housed in a comfortable hotel, with four reproductions of Lois' cheering talks, I watched the rain pour down day by day. The weather was at one with my mood, for try as I might, I could find no new record from the girl.

Bit by bit the river rose. Shanties and boathouses on the banks of the Missouri were caught in the mad swirl and swept down stream. But still the water crept higher and higher.

And then one night the railroad bridge trembled and finally gave way, cutting off all connection with the country beyond.

The morning of the Fourth of July dawned clear. For the first time I strolled about the town, at a loss as to my further actions. The postoffice caught my eye, and half jokingly, I asked for mail. I was given a phonographic record!

"Dear Frank," said Lois' voice, when I had fitted the record on the cylinder of my machine, "I think there is a chance to overtake us. We go from here to Berryville, just across the river, where Aunt Sarah says we shall stay for several days. I mail this because Aunt Rebecca has become suspicious of the phonograph. I saw her talking with the hotel clerk, and I am sure she was warning him not to give anything to you should you be following us. I somehow believe you will receive this record. Come quickly."

Within a mile or two of Lois and for four days making no effort to reach her! I cursed my stupidity in not asking for mail before. I sprang up, ready to renew my search. Then I dropped back to my seat.

Between Lois and me rolled the Missouri River, unbridged and swollen in a mighty flood. I could never cross.

I telegraphed north, south; up the river, down the river. Everywhere it was the same. Bridges were gone and no boat dared venture up the river.

At the moment when I was about to give up hope a thought, of a surety heaven born, came to my rescue.

A brisk wind blew straight across the river. Why not hire the aeronaut who was to make a balloon ascension at the Fourth of July celebration to allow me to accompany him? Without question the wind would carry us safely across the river.

The aeronaut was stubbornly mercenary. Dollar by dollar I raised my bid, till his great black eyes grew narrow in greedy anticipation. At last we agreed on a price.

It was not until we had shot up into the air with the speed of a bullet that he explained that it would be impossible to land at Berryville; it was too close to the river.

So we sailed over it. I do not know whether the man was new at the business or whether the balloon acted badly, but we drifted on and on with the wind, never once tilting earthward, till I was frantic. Just at sunset we landed, with a terrible thump, in a field something more than fifty miles from Berryville. I should be forced to go back to that town to pick up the thread of the trail.

Cold, dirty, discouraged, I trudged along by the side of my companion toward a town near at hand. We came to it after a scramble over fields and through woods, and at once made for the hotel. There, sitting in front of the house, deliciously lonely, was Lois!

Later we bearded the lions.

"Young man," said Aunt Rebecca, looking severely at me over her spectacles, "you are prevaricating."

"Yes, indeed," chimed in Aunt Sarah, "Lois has not been out of our sight twenty minutes. You are prevaricating."

"I am telling you the truth," I declared, with my arm thrown protectingly about Lois.

"The proof!" demanded Aunt Rebecca.

"The proof!" echoed Aunt Sarah.

"It is here," I proclaimed dramatically.

I started the wheels of the phonograph and placed on the cylinder the sixth record I had given to Lois. From the horn, slowly and solemnly, came the voice of the dear old minister who had married us:

"I pronounce you husband and wife."

Hunger in the Polar Regions.

Hunger is one of the trials that explorers of the polar regions have to encounter very often. Capt. Scott, in his recent volume, has this description of an unpleasant experience in the farthest south: "My companions get very bad food dreams; in fact, these have become the regular breakfast conversation. It appears to be a sort of nightmare; they are either sitting at a well-spread table with their arms tied, or they grasp at a dish and it slips out of their hands, or they are in the act of lifting a dainty morsel to the mouth when they fall over a precipice."

A Youthful King.

The youngest king in the world is Daudi Chau, King of Uganda, Africa, who is now about eight. He holds his court on a scarlet throne, with a leopard-skin mat under his feet, and bearing in his hand a toy gun. The British exercise a protectorate over the young king and his kingdom, and have established for him a sort of parliament, which he opens regularly with much pomp.

FARM AND GARDEN

THE HORSE STILL WITH US.

Let no one imagine that the horse is soon to become an object of curiosity. Bicycles have come and gone, and the automobile has been making considerable noise the last few years, and cutting up capers and people, while the horse has been quietly eating oats, until now the farmer with a pasture full of the right kind of horses can sell them and buy a bank. Horses have been steadily going up in price, which is much better than blowing up, as the automobile has been doing. Automobiles will come and go, may puff in and speed out, but his majesty the horse remains monarch of the road against all competition. No machine ever built or still unInvented will successfully dispute his reign. He has withstood the locomotive, merely permitting it to do the heavy work and give him an easier lift.

Inventions will crop up from time to time, but none that will dispute the horse's place in the people's hearts, for, always, excepting the human race, the horse is the most beautiful thing made of flesh and blood; and perhaps the human animal scarcely deserves to be excepted, when we consider how men and women deform themselves by foolish habits.

Fashionable horse shows are frequent all over the country, extraordinary inducements being offered for fine animals, and I see in this and other facts signs of increasing interest in the horse beautiful, with an attendant interest in breeding. Buyers are today searching the country for good horses of all kinds, and are offering better prices than were offered six months ago. Another important factor to be seriously considered is the foreign demand for American horses, which is increasing at a phenomenal rate, a shipload of horses being exported weekly. England, Germany, France, Scotland and in fact all Europe concedes that America can raise better horses for less money than any other country in the world, and Europe may be depended upon to take all the surplus stock in the country at fair prices.

Haphazard breeding is the order of the day among farmers; too often they breed without a purpose, not caring what is crossed with what, so that the result is a colt which can be marketed. The average farmer is, above all others, the man who must market his produce at a good price in order to make both ends meet, to say nothing of making farming pay; and yet he persistently neglects to take the one step which will bring him good prices. It is only by repeated admonitions, urging and prodding that he will ever be induced to take forethought enough to control by proper breeding the quality of stock he markets. Not until he does this will he make breeding pay. I will say that I am not afraid that the horseless age is upon us; not while the automobile remains blind to your actions of kindness and dumb to the sound of your voice, not while the horse is the delightful company he is, whether in the stable, under the saddle or in the harness. Certain it is that as far back into the ages as we can trace his association with human beings the horse appears as the friend and intimate companion of man. He steps down the ages decked with the flowers and wreaths of love, poetry, romance and chivalry no less than with the stern trappings of heroism and war. "Man's inhumanity to man" and beast is justly lamented; but so associated with the sentiment and necessities of man is the horse that motorcycles and automobiles will be powerless to displace him.—J. W. Grand, in the Tribune Farmer.

SHEEP ON EVERY FARM.

The percentage of farms in this province (Ontario) on which sheep raising cannot be made a profitable industry is very small indeed. There are a number of reasons why sheep should be kept on every farm. Farming has changed wonderfully during the last fifteen years. We then sold our raw products direct. Now we have become manufacturers as well as farmers, and are putting a more finished product on the market. We are using animals as machines to increase the value of our farm products. I believe that through the sheep we can get more from the feed we grow than through any other animal. Ten years ago I ventured the statement that we could double the annual value of the farm products of Ontario by selling our grain in the form of livestock rather than in the raw state. What I then predicted has come to pass; our output has doubled. I do not believe there is any class of animal that can do more toward still further increasing the wealth producing value of Ontario farms than the sheep.

The next point in their favor is that no class of livestock can be handled with so little labor, and one of the greatest difficulties on the farm during the last five years has been the question of labor.

The third, and perhaps the greatest, point in favor of sheep, is their quality as money makers. There is no class of meat producing stock that can be prepared for market so cheaply as the sheep. The cost of producing mutton as compared with beef is altogether in favor of mutton. I am satisfied that you can produce one hundred pounds of lamb at a cost of $1 to $2 less than it costs to put one hundred pounds of weight on a steer when winter finishing is practised, and at the same time the average selling price of well finished lambs in February and March has been from 75 cents to $1 a hundredweight more than the selling price of export cattle in April and May.—John Campbell, before the Dominion Sheep Breeders' Association in Tribune Farmer.

POULTRY NOTES.

Remember that a warm poultry-house will lessen the feed bill.

Over-crowding the poultry-house is dangerous business and should nover be practiced. By crowding too many living bodies in a limited space it will surely bring disease and disaster. We know it is a great temptation to keep all the nice pullets over but we should not unless we can properly accommodate them.

Excessive cold and heat are two very important factors for us to study, for they are both very productive of disease. We should strive to make the house as warm as possible without the use of artificial heat, allowing them enough ventilation to keep the air pure. Over-heating is usually caused by over-crowding.

Fowls must have grit to digest the food. When taken into the gizzard, it grinds up the food in a rotary motion which is part of the process of digestion. Keep gravel on hand, burn clam-shells and bones, pound up all the broken dishes and give the coal ashes for a dust bath occasionally.

If the combs of your hens become frozen, do not expect them to lay until they are healed. Melt a little fresh lard, into which put a few drops of turpentine and saturate the combs with this, being careful not to use too much turpentine, this mixture will remove the soreness and help them to heal.

By having the farnishings of the poultry-house such as nests, roosts, and troughs so arranged as to permit of their being taken outside when it is desirable to clean up the premises, as the floor and house can then be more conveniently renovated and the appliances can be better cleaned outside. When building make everything about the house as simple as possible, so it may be easily and thoroughly cleaned.—M. D. H. in Indiana Farmer.

GRINDING CORN FOR SWINE.

We believe in feeding swine so that they will have something to keep them busy as well as for the best results to be obtained from the grain, so we feed the corn whole and usually on the cob until it gets hard and flinty, when it is either shelled and soaked a little to soften it or soaked on the cob. All other grains are ground because it has been demonstrated that the smaller grains go through the animals and do them but little good. Carrying out the plan of keeping the swine busy, we always have something for them to chew on —cornstalks, squares of sod, apples, potatoes and other vegetables, and we do not see that they take on fat any slower because of this plan of feeding. Pure water is given them in clean troughs twice a day, and we know they thrive better for having it. —Indianapolis News.

BUILDINGS FOR CHICKENS.

To get eggs, suitable buildings must be provided for the chickens. Do not force or allow them to roost in trees not in the barn or on the farm implements and vehicles. A definite plan and arrangement with reference to the farm poultry, coupled with a small amount of energy, will work wonders.

Coleridge's Comparison.

So great has been the affection of readers for the books that have given them delight, that literature is full of proofs of gratitude toward noble books. There have been countless comparisons and metaphors used to make clear the relation between the book and the reader. Perhaps the most original was hit upon by Coleridge, who compares an excellent book to a well-chosen and well-tended fruit tree. He says "We may recur to it year after year, and it will supply the same nourishment and the same gratification, if only we ourselves return to it with the same healthful appetite." But, though his simile pleases the fancy, it does not quite satisfy the judgment. While the fruit of a tree must yield much the same flavor always, the gratification we experience from reading must always differ according to the condition of mind of him who reads. It has been said that a traveler can bring home only what he takes with him, which means that the pleasure derived from traveling is entirely dependent upon the capacity of the traveler's mind. One's taste may change, and one's ability to understand and appreciate is constantly changing. All of which points the moral that it is an excellent thing to read a good book often, provided the intervals between readings are fairly long.—St. Nicholas.

Cures Belching of Gas—Bad Breath Bad Stomach—Short Breath Bloating—Sour Eructations Irregular Heart, Etc.

Take a Mull's Wafer any time day or night, and note the immediate effect on your stomach. It absorbs gases, disinfects the stomach, kills the germs and cures the disease. Catarrh of the head and throat, unwholesome food and overeating make bad stomachs. Scarcely any stomach is entirely free from taint of some kind. Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers will make your stomach sweet by absorbing foul gases which are formed the undigested food and by reaching the lining of the stomach, enabling it to thoroughly mix the food with the digestive juices. This cures stomach trouble, promotes digestion, sweetens the breath, stops belching and fermentation. Heartburn disappears, becomes strong and regular through the whole process.

Discard drugs, as you know from experience they do not cure stomach disease. Try a common-sense (Nature's) remedy that does cure. A soothing, healing sensation results instantly.

We know Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers will do this, and we want you to know it. This offer may not appear again.

Sleeping With Open Eyes.

All fishes which sleep do so with their eyes open, as they are not provided with eyelids, and cannot therefore, close their eyes. From experiments made it was discovered that some fishes have no preference for night time, but sleep equally well during the day.

They may be observed resting motionless for periods, apparently sleep, except that, having no eyelids they are unable to close their eyes to exclude all influence from without.

The hare also sleeps with its eyes open, for the simple reason that its eyes are unprovided with eyelids. Instead of these there is a thin membrane which covers the eye when asleep. This membrane, is in the form of certain birds, folds like a curtain in the corner of the eye and by an instantaneous action flies back when required, leaving the eye immediately and fully open for the exercise of sight.

Some birds, such as the eagle, have this membrane, which, when at rest, lies in the corner of the eye, rolled up like a drawn curtain.

Vegetarian Crank.

London has vegetarians who carry the extreme of refusing to wear anything that have the "animal" taint in it, as leather. They wear shoes made of rubber, canvas and "bright American cloth."

THE EDITOR

Explains How to Keep Up Mental and Physical Vigor.

A New Jersey editor writes:

"A long indulgence in improper food brought on a condition of nervous dyspepsia, nearly three years ago, so severe that I had to quit work entirely. I put myself on a strict regimen of Grape-Nuts food, with plenty of out-door exercise and in a few weeks found my stomach so far restored to the process of digestion gave me no more distress.

"It also built up my strength so that I was able to resume my literary work, which is onerous, as I not only write my own paper, but also do a great deal of 'outside' writing.

"I find that the Grape-Nuts food enables me to write with greater ease than ever before, and without the slightest feeling of brain-fag with which I used to be troubled. As to bodily vigor, I can and do walk miles every day without fatigue—a few squares used to tire me before I began to live on Grape-Nuts!" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

They may be observed resting motionless for periods, apparently sleep, except that, having no eyelids they are unable to close their eyes to exclude all influence from without.

The hare also sleeps with its eyes open, for the simple reason that its eyes are unprovided with eyelids. Instead of these there is a thin membrane which covers the eye when asleep. This membrane, is in the form of certain birds, folds like a curtain in the corner of the eye and by an instantaneous action flies back when required, leaving the eye immediately and fully open for the exercise of sight.

Some birds, such as the eagle, have this membrane, which, when at rest, lies in the corner of the eye, rolled up like a drawn curtain.

THE EDITOR

Explains How to Keep Up Mental and Physical Vigor.

A New Jersey editor writes:

"A long indulgence in improper food brought on a condition of nervous dyspepsia, nearly three years ago, so severe that I had to quit work entirely. I put myself on a strict regimen of Grape-Nuts food, with plenty of out-door exercise and in a few weeks found my stomach so far restored to the process of digestion gave me no more distress.

"It also built up my strength so that I was able to resume my literary work, which is onerous, as I not only write my own paper, but also do a great deal of 'outside' writing.

"I find that the Grape-Nuts food enables me to write with greater ease than ever before, and without the slightest feeling of brain-fag with which I used to be troubled. As to bodily vigor, I can and do walk miles every day without fatigue—a few squares used to tire me before I began to live on Grape-Nuts!" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

How To Spoil

By Winifred Black.

AN English peeress was buried the cheapest part of a humble day. She was a woman of family. She and her husband left England forever to hide. She sent almost every bit of court beauty in England today to Oxford College.

All of these three children are living. They had neither time nor inclination for grams which were sent to them and money she scrimped to save—aye, even for them to spend. The mother, not good enough for the last tribute, perhaps of forgiveness.

Perhaps there was something to forgive, nothing of the miserable details of but whatever she had been, or had not, ficing mother, and her reward for that titude.

Wait till he comes, you will see enough of him. He'll be a don't walk to save carfare.

Cabs are good enough for him, and he can or and do everything he can to show him a good little creature, but, really, you the shortest kind of time with her. I know a woman who works for her living who told me that she had saved enough music lessons up for two years longer. Her daughter is married to a decent mechanic just about as much use for music as a organ.

I asked my friend, the cook, why she did lessons so she could learn to make bread save that much money, besides learning in handy if husband died.

Every time I think of the look my friend about the sewing lessons I hate to taste. Fathers do very little of the spoiling; but through life helpless and protesting at the whose mother has taught him that the considered for one moment, and that in English children, be a little bit selfish you to get them.—New York American.

How To Spoil Children.

By Winifred Black.

AN English peeress was buried in a cheap grave in a cheap lot in the cheapest part of a humble graveyard in Chicago the other day. She was a woman of great beauty, great wit and noble family. She and her husband separated some years ago and she left England forever to hide herself in a cheap flat in Chicago. She sent almost every bit of her income to her daughter, a noted court beauty in England today, and to her two sons, who are at ent in Oxford College.

All of these three children are living in the greatest luxury and comfort, they had neither time nor inclination to take the trouble to reply to the legrams which were sent to them announcing the death of their mother. money she scrimped to save—aye, even went hungry to save—was good ugh for them to spend. The mother who sent it to them was, so it ap rs, not good enough for the last tribute of a gentle word of gratitude, or n perhaps of forgiveness.

Perhaps there was something to forgive, and perhaps there was not. I w nothing of the miserable details of this poor woman's most miserable but whatever she had been, or had not been, she was a devoted and self rificing mother, and her reward for that devotion and self-sacrifice was— ratitude.

It takes a selfish mother to bring up unselfish children, and all of the cold grod, ungrateful children I have ever known have been the children of hers who oversacrificed themselves.

Whenever I see a woman dressing like a dowd to buy fine clothes for daughter I know before I meet the daughter just exactly the kind of girl 'll turn out to be. Precisely the sort of girl, to be sure, that her mother made her—vain, selfish and calculating. How can she be anything else? Do you know a woman who lives in a little hall bedroom in a cheap boarding house to save money to keep her son in college? Does she wear shabby shes, walk in the rain to save carfare, and hang over the stairs from morning until night waiting for the postman to bring her a letter from her son? e you seen her son?. Wait till he comes home for a day or two's visit you will see enough of him. He'll be dressed in the very latest fashion; won't walk to save carfare.

Cabs are good enough for him, and he will patronize his mother and laugh er and do everything he can to show the other boarders that he knows s a good little creature, but, really, you know after all, and he will only d the shortest kind of time with her that he can possibly manage.

I know a woman who works for her living. She's a cook, and the other she told me that she had saved enough money now to keep her daughter music lessons up for two years longer.

Daughter is married to a decent mechanic, in decent circumstances, and hasn't ust about as much use for music lessons as a fox terrier has for a organ.

I asked my friend, the cook, why she didn't give her daughter dressmaking lessons so she could learn to make her own clothes and help her husband save that much money, besides learning a very useful trade which would e in handy if husband died.

Every time I think of the look my friend, the cook, gave me when I asked about the sewing lessons I hate to taste of the soup.

Fathers do very little of the spoiling; half the men in America are dragging through life helpless and protesting at the heels of some half-baked young whose mother has taught him that there is only one way in the world considered for one moment, and that is his own sweet way. If you want ildish children, be a little bit selfish yourself; that's the surest way in the d to get them.—New York American.

Mapumulo, Natal.—An impressive spectacle was witnessed here, when the chiefs of the district and scores of tribesmen came in to hear the decision of the military commander with regard to the rising of natives in February. The chiefs admitted that the punishment was justifiable, but requested a lessening of their fines.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. C. L. GOODELL.

Subject: "The Carpenter's Son."

New York City.—Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church of Harlem, through the effectiveness of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Goodell, is growing in an unparalleled way. Last February, as the result of revival services for the month of January, he broke all city church records by admitting 365 members. Sunday morning more than 350 were received into the church, and these, added to the fifty taken in at the January communion, make a total of more than 400 admissions as a result of four weeks of revival services. Dr. Goodell gave this as the reason of the great ingathering: "There is no secret to it; any church can be stirred as ours has been if it is willing to pay the price. The price? It is consecration, prayer and hard work. All three are needed in about equal parts. Our magnificent congregation has been moved by prayer and in turn has moved others."

The reception of members into this church Sunday was a joyful event for the ministers and members, for it placed Calvary Church at the head of Methodism in point of membership. Calvary now has a few more than 2400 members on its roll. Since Dr. Goodell has been at Calvary, twenty-one months, there has been a net gain of 1000 members, or about seventy-five per cent. Of these new members more than 600 came on probation. The church seats 2200 and every Sunday night all seats are filled early. At some of the special services many chairs had to be brought in and the altar space filled, and then scores could not find seats. Sunday there were fifteen denominations represented by those who came by letter.

About 1500 persons took communion in the morning, Bishop E. G. Andrews, of Brooklyn; the Rev. Dr. Frank Mason North, of the City Mission, and Tract Society of New York City, and Mr. Williams, the assistant pastor, and officers of the church assisting. In the afternoon about 500 more were communed. In the evening Dr. Goodell preached on "The Carpenter's Son." The text was from Matthew xiii:35: "Is this not the carpenter's son?" He said:

Out of the doorways of the poor come the men who make the world rich and God walks oftener in the narrow rooms and on the creaking stairs of the little cottages than in the wide, sounding halls of the rich with armor and pictures looking down. You have seen the home of Burns and Shakspeare; picture to yourself something as much poorer as these are meaner than the homes of the newly rich and you may call that the home of a carpenter in Nazareth. They will show you the place with votive offerings and gewgaws in it, but you will say, "So!" and walk out. Find a place where a carpenter is now making an ox bow or a poor man's table and it will be like what He knew, for the men of Nazareth are like all their kin in the East; they change not in a thousand years. I like to think that for thirty years Jesus knew the narrow ways of a laborer.

His trade He plied, a carpenter, and built
Doors, where folks come and go, unto this hour,
Not wotting how the hands which wrought their doors
Unbarred Death's gate by Love's high sacrifice—
Tables whereon folks set their meat, and eat,
Heedless of Who was "Bread of Life" and gave Such food that whoso eateth hungereth not.
And, in those little lanes of Nazareth,
Each morn His holy feet would come and go
While He bore planks and beams, whose back must bear
The cruel cross. And, then, at evening's fall,
Resting from labor, with those patient feet
Deep in white wood dust, and the long curled shreds
Shorn by His plane—He would turn innocent eyes
Gazing far past the sunset to that world
He came from, and must go to; nigh to Him—
Nigh unto us, albeit we see it not,
Whereof Life is the curtain, and mute Death
Herald and Doorkeeper.

Nazareth was a town in which to talk with God. The great plain before it had felt His thunderous foot. There was Carmel, where Elijah talked with God, in plain sight. There was Jezreel of Ahab and Jezebel. There was Eudor and Saul and the witch. There was Tabor, lone and majestic, near at hand, and Hermon far to the north, cloud-capped and snow-peaked, while to the East, hidden behind a dozen miles of hill and dale, was the sea of Galilee—mother of sermon and of miracles. In Nazareth He found the illustrations which make so large a part of His sermons. There was a great day of moil and toil before Him, and here in the cool of the morning He must store up the reserve that will take Him on to awful noon at Jerusalem. It takes a great soul to bide his time—to get ready for a great act and be patient with the training and the slow step of the years. To live with God and in Him is the main thing after all. He walked those cliffs with no one to look at Him or to wonder at Him—prayerful, masterful, patient. Was there ever a better example for ordinary people. It is good for the burning fever of life to look at Him. The world is too much with us soon and late. Our home life is low and sordid. We fret under it. There are too many little things to do. Too much of outline and too little of outlook. What are we saying? Look at Him. Poverty? Yes. Toil? Yes. Did they who saw Him appreciate Him? We shall see; who was it said: "Is not this the carpenter's son?" and how did they say it? It was a taunt and a sneer. You know now how He came to say, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country."

The very men whose houses He had built were ready to stone Him to death. It has often been so. The men who have built the houses that the world's thought lives in to-day were most of them buried in ignominious graves. Very likely the men you serve may throw stones at you from the vintage ground where you put them, but it will be no new thing, so keep sweet about it. He could afford to wait. His carpenter bench would yet be holy because He worked at it, and the tools He handled would be held at the price of a king's ransom.

His is the gospel of the mechanic. He fitted Himself at a carpenter's bench to say, "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." He had no sympathy either with the man who wants more work than he pays for or the man who wants more pay than he works for. I want you to see from this life that great deeds should go along with common life, making it sublime. When you read of the great economies that had to be practiced in the homes of such men as Phelps and Alcott, Hawthorne and Emerson, you realize the advantage of plain living and high thinking. There is too much high living and meagre thinking.

The struggle after a more sumptuous life than we can afford takes the strength out of us, and if we get it it takes the nerve for toil and self-denial, which are only other names for victory, away from us. Our impatience takes away our capacity and love for toil, and we are miserable and useless. Be happy in a humble home. You will never have to live so cheaply as did Jesus.

Then make up your mind to work. Jesus the Carpenter taught us the dignity of toil. He made the saw and the plane as truly the ensign of a noble life as the fasces or the toga of the Roman. There is an evangel of toil. The shuttle and the hoe, the saw and the reaper have a message which the world must hear. The workers make life glorious, the shirkers make it detestable. "My father worketh hitherto and I work" was the challenge of the Christ to every indolent and careless soul. Virgil sings of men and arms, but the song of to-day is a song of men and tools. I have a Saviour who wrought the hot day through. I can talk with Him of quivering palm and throbbing limbs and a fainting heart and He will know.

You cannot imagine Him as making a poor joint or allowing a bad knot in an important place. To meet your ideal, and that an ideal which He has founded by His own character, you will take nothing less than a honest attempt at a perfect product. The desire to slight one's work will lead to a compromise of character, and that will lead to the loss of the soul. It is not the work but the spirit you put into it which makes the task ignoble or sublime. I would have every man step to his work to-morrow without dread or envy. I would have him feel that Jesus the Carpenter was the great model, and that if He could fit Himself for the conquest of the world at a carpenter's bench any laborer may feel himself surrounded with glorious hopes and his dingy little shop become the habitat of angels. Paul stitching tents thought out those wonderful chapters of spiritual logic which move the world. Carey, the shoemaker, thought out the plan of giving the Bible to the Hindoos. Morrison, the last-maker, gave the gospel to China. Burrett, the blacksmith, became the most learned workman of his day. Daily humble life lived on high levels—this is the happy possibility of common men. What high discourse there must have been in that humble home when the day's work was over; what acts of affection, what mutual confidences and holy trust!

But He who made lintels for the doors of Nazareth set up also the gates of the eternal city of God. He who made humble houses for the common people of His native town was the Artificer of the eternal home of the soul. It was not a figure of His imagination when He pictures the unsafe foundation and the awful ruin of that unsecure house. He had seen the torrent rush down the chalk cliffs of Nazareth and sweep away the houses of His fellow craftsmen. Small wonder that He looked upon that ruin from the standpoint of a careful builder. But when they drove the carpenter from His bench at Nazareth He went out to build for eternity. I want to ask you to give your contract for an eternal mansion to Jesus the Carpenter. As a wise master builder, He asks you to count the cost. Are you ready to build? Are you willing to pay for a good foundation and will the superstructure you rear be a sacred one? He will not countenance the ornamentations that hide the lack of solid worth. He will have no part in the consummate fraud of a life that is built on the sand. He will not build with hay and stubble. If it were a house to sell it might be out of your sight, but he tells me when I say it is the house you are to live in forever. If there is a flaw in it you will find it out. If when the winds blow and the floods come it falls you will go down in the ruin. Yesterday a man gasping for breath said "I am almost ashamed to ask God to have mercy on me when I ignored Him for three score years," and you will feel the same. To leave you in old age to the mercy of the wintry blasts would be cruel, but the man who shirks in the building of his soul's tabernacle does that for himself. Only Jesus knows how to build for eternity. The old Romans were great builders of roads and bridges, and the old Egyptians were great builders of pyramids, but I want somebody who can build a house for the soul that will outlast pyramids and stars. No man save Jesus can have my contract.

Power of Sacrifice.

John Henry, while a divinity student, went through a tempest that most daring seamen dare not dare face, and brought ashore seven sailors from a wrecked boat. The strain was such that, though he lived to finish his studies, he had scarcely taken up the work of a parish when death summoned him away. The crowds that came to his funeral were so large that the window of the church was removed and a platform erected where those within the church and the masses of humanity without could hear the words of Lord Chalmers.

Kneel in your closet and say, "O God! I have not known Thee; deign to reveal Thyself to me; teach me to love and obey Thee; by all Thy goodness, oh, forgive my wanderings, and let me feel the tranquillity of a life hid in Thy blessedness." Such petitions will not be unheard, nor fail to bring down answers of growing fulfilment.—William Alger.

It takes as much grace to make a saint out of a Pharisee as it does to make one out of a publican.

TOWN OF CLANTON.

The mayor and council elected a few weeks since, having refused to qualify, a new election has been ordered for March 26th. The old council has passed a license ordinance, which is now in full operation, and which will put into the city treasury $1,500 to $2,000 if IMPARTIALLY AND RIGIDLY ENFORCED. No citizen should growl about paying in money to support the state, county or city, but we all have an "inalienable" right to "kick" if we are not shown how and for what it is expended. Choose for city officials men who will let all see what is done with the money.

PUBLISH THE ACCOUNTS.

A NEW NEIGHBOR.

Our sister town, Calera, has attracted a weekly paper called The New Era. May the name be prophetic and the town start on a new era of prosperity. With Calera's railroad advantages she should be way up on the list of Alabama towns. Oliver Bros. & Co. are billed as the proprietors of the venture, and we hear that our old friend, Sam H. Gist, that veteran soldier and journalist, is the editor. "Here's how," Brother Gist.

AN HUNDREDFOLD.

That is the increase, according to the Banner, in the tuition fees at the special course for teachers now on at the Clanton school. Professor Sessions wrote $3.00 (three hundred cents); the Banner makes it $300. Plague take these little cents and mills, they don't count with some folks.

A pleasant feature was the presentation of a handsome watch to Brother Newt Gresham from his Union friends. The watch was presented him in a few well chosen words by Brother Pinegar. Brother Gresham in accepting said: "Words could not do justice to his feelings," but that he would put the timepiece with the chain given him by the Georgia brothers, and the ring from the brethren in Inda-Homa, and if "I ever prove recreant to a single trust reposed in me by the Farmers' Union, I'll send all these articles back as one no longer worthy to keep them." Brother Gresham was greeted with a handshake by every brother present in the convention. Among the resolutions passed by the Union was this: Whereas, it has been the will of Almighty God to spare our beloved brother, Newt. Gresham, to meet with this state meeting of F. E. and C. U. of A., of Alabama; and whereas, further, we desire to express our respect to Brother Gresham; therefore, be it Resolved, That we, the officers and delegates of this State Union, tender our thanks to Brother Gresham for being with us, and we invite him to come again.

A resolution of thanks to Brother Frank Duckworth, of Georgia, for his presence, coupled with an earnest invitation to come again, was passed. Other resolutions were: 1st. That we tender our thanks to the officials of the town of Clanton, and the county of Chilton, for the kind favors shown us; also for the use of the court house to hold our meeting in. 2d. That we extend our sincere thanks to the citizens of the town and surrounding country for the kind and hospitable manner in which they have so loyally entertained this State Union.

3d. That we extend our thanks to the railroad companies for the kind favors shown us in giving us reduced rates.

4th. That last, but not by any means least, we extend our thanks to the officers of the State Union for the noble way in which they have conducted this State Union.

5th. We hereby tender our thanks to Proprietor Latham, of the Clanton hotel, for his kindness to the delegates during their stay in Clanton.

6th. We hereby request our Union paper in Clanton, The Union, to publish these resolutions.

Brother Gresham stayed with us until Sunday in order to rest up, but is now in Mississippi with the brethren in that state. On Saturday evening, by request, he addressed the citizens of Clanton at the court house, expounding to them the objects of the order, and at the same time paid his respects to the Montgomery Advertiser, which last week contained an article, using the Farmers' Union as a club to strike B. B. Comer, telling the merchants that as they were trying to do to the railroads, so would the Farmers' Union do unto them. Brother Gresham told the non-union people present that all the farmers were after was their just rights, and that it is even more necessary for farmers to organize than for bankers, merchants, lawyers or any other of the numberless associations in this country, and that while it might be possible and probable that a few dollars might be saved by the farmers through the benefit of their organization, that those dollars would not be lost, but would be at home in the farmer's pocket, the man who had earned the money by the sweat of his own brow.

The thoughtful man in viewing this great body of men and the full measure which is being accomplished in the matter of organization, will see that now, when "the wagon is on the level road," that many will try to climb in and want to hold the reins. Be cautious, brethren, and don't let any of the "old political hacks" that join popular movements for the sake of an office, get in your locals, where their presence will surely bring distrust and disunion.

Again, every member of the Union should take the state paper, "The Union Educator and Diversified Farmer." By so doing, he keeps in touch with the state officers, also the brethren in other parts of our state. Brother Vanden Burg, the editor, who spent a couple of days here, says that the paper that will be issued April 1st will contain a full account of our convention here, much more in detail than we have been able to do, with many illustrations, etc. Any brother that is not now a subscriber should send or bring us $1 and get his county Union paper and his state Union paper for a year. Don't delay; get your names on the roll.

S. C. A.

At the meeting on the 3d of March among the business transacted was a motion by F. A. Gulledge that the association have a stupendous barbecue on the second Saturday in July at some centrally located place in the county. This was passed and T. J. Dorminy, R. J. Williams, S. S. Scott, J. D. Sims and W. H. Killingsworth were appointed as a committee to recommend a suitable place and report at the meeting the last Saturday in May.

PROBATE COURT.

State of Alabama, Chilton County.

This day came J. T. Cooley, guardian of Belle Cooley, a minor, and filed his petition in due form and made oath, praying for an order to sell certain lands described therein and belonging to said ward, for the purpose of reinvestment. It is ordered that the 2d day of April, 1906, be appointed a day for the hearing of said petition, at which time all parties in interest can appear and contest the same if they think proper.

Witness my hand this 10th day of March, 1906. L. H. REYNOLDS,
3-15-06-3w Judge of Probate.

LETTER OF THANKS.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your valuable columns to say to the neighbors and friends that were so kind and faithful to my dear mother during her illness that I can not express my gratitude to them for their indefatigable care for her. They did all they could for her until the great monster death seized her last Friday and bade all stand back. All human help failed, but we are sure that the Angels of God were present to escort her spirit to the land of rest, sweet rest. So we weep not as those who have no hope, but earnestly solicit an interest in the prayers of all God's children that we may live such a life of consecration to God and our fellow man as she lived before us, and finally meet her on the banks of sweet deliverance, where there will be no more parting. Success to The Union and its readers. ALBERT L. FOSHEE.

The state officers are a fine lot of men and The Union thanks all of them for courtesies extended, and in particular Brothers E. J. Cook, T. E. Pinegar, P. F. Parker and J. M. Hutto, who were especially kind.

All our Chilton county people were good in the parts assigned them, but J. Wiley Foshee, was particularly active. He met every train (rain made no difference), and took care of the visitors in fine style.

THORSBY.

The Young People's Literary Society met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Turnquist on the night of the 6th. Mr. Swanson and a friend of his arrived on last week's excursion. Mrs. A. Horn was painfully, but not seriously injured by a neighbor's cow last week. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson and daughter, who have been spending the past few weeks in Bay Minette, stopped at the Thorsby inn a few days before returning to their home in the east. Mr. Andrew Johnson and family from Hancock, Mich., arrived in Thorsby with the intention of making this their future home. We are glad to welcome them here. Mrs. Rev. Hartilius entertained the Swedish Ladies' Aid Society on the 8th. Mr. T. Bosworth left for Portland, Ind., on the 9th, where his daughter, Mrs. Maud Gibson, is very ill. Many of the ladies and children of Thorsby went to hear Mrs. Hamilton speak on Friday afternoon and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy her talk. She is the organizer of Sunbeam societies throughout the state and she succeeded in having one organized in our Baptist Sunday school. Many citizens attended the Nelson auction on Saturday. Dr. Junkerman had the misfortune of breaking one of his fingers while playing ball the other day. We hope the accident will not seriously hinder him from continuing his dental work. Mr. and Mrs. Barrett returned from Monticello, Ia., on Sunday. Missionary day was very well attended at the United Protestant church on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Broad and Mr. Rev. C. Snyder, who conducted the services during the day, gave interesting illustrations of their work in the mission fields. Rev. Clarke, who has been ill for a long time, was able to attend the morning services and everybody was glad to see him. Rev. C. Snyder left for Pennsylvania on the 12th. Mr. and Mrs. Goos went to Clanton on Sunday.

CENTER POINT.

Editor Union:

Everybody in "this neck of the woods" is mighty busy hustling around for another crop, though it seems like "grim winter" will hold spring off in spite of all that can be done; nevertheless, we trust All-Wise Providence just the same. Our S. S. is doing nicely under the superintendency of Bro. Jesse Thomas. Bro. T. J. Deason filled his regular appointment here last Saturday and Sunday, and it seems that the church has got started out right at last. F. M. Langston and wife, of Mars Hill, visited their son, C. W. Langston, and wife. Captain Usher, of Billingsley, is going to put a saw mill right in our midst, and that means more work, more lumber and more money. Since Fletcher Limbrick has married, we see some more of our boys with long smiles on their faces, too. Our singing society is improving very fast. LOVER OF MUSIC.

JEMISON.

Dear Editor:

I want to say a few words in the interest of the Ladies' Aid Society. I am glad that Mrs. Hamilton is coming to our county in the interest of the Ladies' Aid and I would be glad if all of our churches would organize a Ladies' Aid for the ladies and a Sunbeam for the children. Our Sunday schools are doing well in all five of the churches that I serve, but I think Christianity and good morals would progress better by giving the children and the ladies something to do of their own. The greatest drawback t othe S. S. is the non-attendance of the old people. Dear brothers and sisters, let us all go to work and do our best. Best wishes to the churches. I am yours, J. H. THOMAS.

MARS HILL.

Dear Editor:

Will you please allow me space in your Union paper, it being my first time to write? I am a little school girl, twelve years old, I am going to J. H. Anderson. I obey my teacher well. Mr. and Mrs. Scott were at Rufus Langston's Sunday night and had a very pleasant time. On the 4th Sunday we had a nice singing at Mars Hill and preaching Saturday and first Sunday, and we have a good Sunday school. Y. P. Scott was a visitor at A. J. Scott's Sunday. F. M. Langston and wife visited their son, Charley Langston, from Thursday to Sunday. A. D. Gentry dined with C. W. Scott on Sunday. Well, I've written enough, but will come again.

F. M. S.

WYLAM.

Mrs. Emma Freeman, who has been quite ill, is improving, we are glad to note, for she has had a tough time. Josh. Oldacre is visiting his sister, Mrs. J. T. Mitchell, this week. Mrs. G. W. Sorrell and sister were in Ensley Saturday shopping. Little Luther Sorrell wanted to go along; said he wanted to buy some popcorn from "that man with a little engine." Bro. Brabham filled his regular appointment at the Baptist church Sunday and preached an excellent sermon to a large and attentive congregation. The Misses Lambert entertained a host of friends and schoolmates Sunday afternoon. H. C. Maddox happened to a little accident this week; a boy threw a rock at another boy and it struck Mr. M. on the head, but the hurt is not serious. Dr. J. H. Edwards is on the sick list this week. We sure are glad when Saturday comes and brings The Union. I don't see how we could do without it. Best wishes to you all. PAPA'S PET.

MAPLESVILLE MELANGE.

Dr. Claughton and family attended Mardi Gras in New Orleans and the children are telling of the wonderful sights seen. Mrs. Hanlin saw Mardi Gras in Mobile. Arthur Diedrich is treating his young lady friends to automobiles rides now. Miss Celeste Dunlap lately visited relatives here. Mr Hollister, of Montgomery, has been here on business with the T. T. Lbr. Co. Mrs. Walker, of Birmingham, visited her mother, Mrs. Ricketts, here. Our progressive merchant, Burwell Foshee, has been to Birmingham on business. Ernest Welch and family visited friends here, Dr. Claupghton's. Misses Willie Wallace and DeKale, of Independence, visited Miss Florence Adair. T. U. Crumpton has been away some time on business in Dallas county. Our two most popular young men, Calhoun Foshee and Tom Perry, lately made a flying trip to Centerville, the objects of their visit is not known—yet. Success to ye editor. "O."

Looks as if there soon would be "plenty of room at the top" in the life insurance business, predicts the New York Herald.

W. D. Smith was in Clanton Thursday.

G. W. Jones was in town Thursday.

John W. Foshee arrived home from his trip to Arkansas and Mississippi Friday last and reports having a good visit.

M. L. Bates was in Clanton Saturday.

Quite a number of our people are taking advantage of the cut prices offered by the Collier Drug Co. in their advertisement in THE UNION. Ben Franklin was right when he said: "A penny saved is two earned."

W. J. Williams was in Clanton Saturday.

School district No. 11 had a nice concert Friday night last. There was a large attendance and all enjoyed the occasion.

C. W. Langston was in town Saturday.

J. M. Willis was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

G. W. Willis was in Clanton Saturday.

Monroe Askins and little daughter, Ethel, were visitors in Clanton on Saturday.

H. W. Devaughan and son were in town Saturday.

J. J. Maddox was in Clanton Saturday.

M. C. Williams and Harley Calloway came to town Saturday to attend Odd Fellows' lodge.

Lee Robinson and Miss Jessie Robinson left for Georgia Sunday night to get married. Having went to Deatsville to visit a married sister of the bride, they took the train there and hustled to Georgia, where they were made one. The groom is a son of T. L. Robinson and is 21 years old. The bride is a daughter of D. S. Robinson and is 15 years of age. The happy couple intend making a two weeks' wedding tour in Georgia and north Alabama before returning to Chilton county to settle down. We wish them all kinds of good luck.

As a sample of the way THE UNION is spreading out, Monday morning in our mail we found a subscription with an appropriate money order from O. B. Popwell, of Farmerville, La. The next letter opened was from Vasa Minn., with a sub and check from Rev. John E. Hedberg, who is in charge of the Orphan Asylum at that place. Just think of it, 1,300 miles apart, one at the extreme north of the U. S. and the other at the gulf of Mexico. We thank both gentlemen very heartily.

T. L. Robinson and daughter, Miss Fannie Bell, were Clanton visitors on Monday.

J. N. Dennis was in town Monday.

J. L. Dupree, the carpenter, is home from Mt. Creek, where he has been working for some time past.

Mrs. T. C. Sharbutt is quite ill at her home near Clanton.

No race suicide theory obtains around Mount Pleasant community, as witness the following: A boy born to Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Lowery on Tuesday and on Thursday a boy made his appearance in the home of Rev. W. P. Lowery and wife, where he was promptly named Newton Gresham, in honor of the "Father of the Union." Then, in order to sort of restore the equality of the sexes, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Melton have a fine girl, which Dr. J. P. Hayes says weighs over 12 pounds. All the parents are loyal members of the Farmers' Union and subscribers to THE UNION, which extends its heartiest congratulations to all.

T. J. Hubbard was in Clanton Tuesday looking after delinquent tax payers, and says he is getting ready to foreclose on some of them.

H. I. Honeycutt was in Birmingham Saturday on a business trip.

The Home Banks furnished by the Citizens' Savings Bank of Birmingham are very popular. Read the back page of this paper and come to THE UNION office and get a bank—$1.00 will start your bank account and then—"watch it grow." There will be no expense attendant upon your sending your bank to Birmingham and having the contents entered upon your bank book when you get your bank from THE UNION.

On Sunday morning a fine boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. J. Wiley Littlejohn. Mother and child are doing well.

Thomas W. Weldon, a well known farmer living about a mile west of Clanton, died very suddenly Tuesday morning, aged 47 years, leaving a widow and a number of children.

All our peopleshould read W. Kanter & Bros'. advertisement in this paper, and then have a try for that rubber tired buggy worth $80.

TO THE PEOPLE OF CHILTON CO.

Those who are, as well as those who are not, members of the Southern Cotton Association, are respectfully invited to attend a call meeting of said association on Saturday, April 7, 1906, at 10 o'clock a. m. We have a large membership in Chilton county, for the last few months, however, it appears there is a lukewarmness which I trust to dispel at the said meeting. I trust all farmers, merchants, lawyers, doctors as well as men of all other vocations, will attend, as there will be business before said meeting that will or should engage the attention of all.

MIMS' SAWMILL, BEAT 9.

Editor Union:

Health of this community is good at present. M. H. Parker visited Verbena Saturday last. He seemed to have several "strings to his bow." Wm. Martin and W. J. Varden visited J. M. Parker's Sunday. We see some of our young men taking cart rides these days. "Ye gods and little fleshes; we thought the cart had already had its day." Mrs. Lula Hardy, of Birmingham, is here on a visit to her many relatives and friends.

SAWDUST HUSTLER.

EAST BESSIE.

Dear Union:

Rail splitting is all the go at this place. Sunday school was very weak at Mars Hill last Sunday, but we hope for a larger turnout next Sunday. The birds are singing their sweet songs, and the trees putting forth their beautiful flowers, all tokens that spring is close at hand. Well, boys, I'm glad to see so many good pieces from different places in our good Union paper. That's right, let's stand by The Union, for it is one of the best papers I ever read. It is a great pleasure to me to read The Union, the good deeds that have been and will be done by our good leading men of Chilton—such as Judge Reynolds, J. H. Thomas, W. H. Conway, Moses Robinson, E. G. Cofer and many others too numerous to mention. The children of Mars Hill organized a Sun Beam Society last Sunday evening. There was a nice singing at C. L. Langston's Saturday night. Messrs. W. P. and T. C. Cofer and Miss Laura Cofer were visitors of their aunt, Mrs. Matilda Cofer, Saturday and Sunday. A very nice little crowd dined with G. S. Rasberry Sunday. I'd like to see a piece from C. W. L.'s community in next week's paper. Success to The Union and its many readers.

BRIGHT STAR.

BEATS 9 AND 4.

Farmers are busy in this section getting ready to plant. Miss Minnie Hays, of Mulberry, visited the Misses Littlejohn Sunday. Mrs. Lula Hardy, of Wylam, is visiting friends and relatives in this community. Messrs. G. L. Giles and H. H. Hayes were guests of the Misses Eiland Sunday afternoon. On the 9th inst the death angel visited the home of Mr. Bill Foshee, and took from him his bosom companion. Her remains were laid to rest at the Childress cemetery. She has paid the last debt she owed, and we sympathize with the bereaved ones, and hope she has left an example for younger ones to follow. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn her loss, but remember, our loss is only a gain to Heaven. "Sleep on, dear one, and take thy rest. God called thee nome. He thought it best." ROSEBUD.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happenng throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1 50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happenng throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1 50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

Amends to Nature

I have loved colors and not flowers;
Their motion, not the swallow's wings;
And wasted more than half my hours
Without the comradeship of things.

How is it now that I can see
With love and wonder and delight
The children of the hedge and tree,
The little lords of day and night?

How is it that I see the roads,
No longer with usurping eyes,
A twilight meeting place for toads,
A midday mart for butterflies?

I feel in every midge that hums
Life, fugitive and infinite,
And suddenly the world becomes
A part of me and I of it.

THE VENETIAN GOBLETS

BY RALPH J. HERKIMER

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

As it was dark when I reached Amiens I decided to spend the night at the house of a friend, for I did not dare to imperil the message by riding at night. Already I had been attacked twice since landing at Bologne and I had no mind to fail in the first important trust with which the king, my master, had intrusted me.

I found my friend's house with some little difficulty, being obliged to inquire the way several times from passers by. This was unfortunate, as the event proved, for it gave my enemies a clue to my stopping place. Jean it seemed was absent on a visit, but was expected to return any minute. His father, the Count d'Arteis, received me kindly and bade me, as a friend of Jean's, to make myself at home.

The house was very old and the drawing-room which was used as a guest chamber had an air of historic association which was increased by the trophies of sport and war that hung on the walls. The windows were of heavy plate glass and were hung with curtains of fine Brussels lace. On the ceiling was a peculiar mosaic tile which was crumbling in places with age. In one corner of the room stood a carved oak cabinet containing a valuable collection of glass articles. Two of these in particular the Count pointed out to me as the pride of his collection. They were of crystal, without other ornament than their natural purity and clearness. He informed me that they were of the celebrated Venetian glass, so delicate that if a poison were poured into one it would crumble to pieces.

Dinner was soon over, and after a chat with my host over our cigars I retired to my room. About half after nine the bell rang and the butler announced a gentleman to see me. I asked to have him shown to my room, and after an interval he appeared. From the instant he rang I feared for my precious message, and his aspect was not reassuring except in one particular. I make the exception because at first sight it was apparent that he was no match for me in physical strength. He was a thin, pale individual, constantly coughing. His face was ugly and unintelligent and his shifting eyes were dull and expreasionless.

In a round about manner, but without displaying any tact, he managed to convey the idea that he wished to purchase my message. He went about it so clumsily that I should have suspected something at once had I possessed any experience, but fool that I was I only wondered that my enemies should have employed such a blockhead. Naturally my first impulse was to throw him bodily from the room; but I reflected that if he could be made to talk I might learn something of value. With this idea in mind I got from my saddlebags a flask of cordial and as there were no other glasses in the room I took from their resting place the two Venetian goblets, and, pouring the wine into them, returned to the end of the room to get a chair.

As I picked up the chair there was a sharp sound as of a stone dropping. When I returned to the table I noticed that a piece of my glass was broken in a star-shaped form, as though it had been suddenly hit. To put him at his ease and partly to give him a notion of the value of what he had broken I told my visitor of the legend connected with them. As I finished I saw that he was much agitated, drops of perspiration stood on his forehead as he trembled violently. He saw me watching him and tried to cover his confusion by a fit of coughing, but I was thoroughly aroused. Why had the tale so affected him? In a flash I saw it all. Holding a piece of my glass to the light I saw on the side a powder-like substance. I was examining this when my caller took the opportunity to escape. This did not worry me, however, for I had no mind to be delayed in my journey to give evidence before the city magistrate. The powder I knew to be arsenic, with which I had before had experience. It was now quite late and I would have to start early. I retired immediately, and being accustomed to unexpected adventures was soon asleep.

Early the next morning, Jean, who had returned during the night, awakened me. As I related the adventure a look of amazement overspread his countenance and when I had finished he told me that the goblets were merely copies of the famous Venetian glass and that the originals were safely stored in the family vault. This greatly relieved my mind, for I had been worrying over the breakage of an heirloom which could never have been replaced; but why then had the goblet broken? Walking over to the table, Jean pointed to the ceiling. There above us was a crack in the mosaic, and from the debris of broken glass he picked up a little red tile. It had saved my life!

That night I reached Paris in safety and delivered my trust to the king. When I told him of the happeping he gave me a beautiful cut glass goblet to present to my friend as a compensation for the loss of the copy of the Venetian goblet.

Gen. Natt Head's Decline.

The late Gen. Natt Head of Hooksett, N. H., a former governor of New Hampshire, was a man of imposing appearance and of generous proportions. A full length portrait of Gen. Head adorned his bed chamber, being placed at the end of the room, opposite the foot of the bed.

During his absence, in attendance upon a reception given the governor and his staff in Boston, Mrs. Head rearranged the room, and changed the position of the picture, substituting for Gen. Head's portrait one of Abraham Lincoln.

Gen. Head returned late upon the following evening, and retired at once. Upon awakening the next morning the first object that met his gaze was the tall, lank form of the martyred President, occupying the accustomed place of his own portrait, and his characteristic comment was: "My God, how I have fallen away!"

No Stovelids at That Bar.

Several years ago, while the writer was stopping at the Hygeia hotel (then in existence) at Old Point Comfort, Va., the following incident occurred:

One evening after retiring to my room I was seized with an attack of rheumatism, and, remembering an old-time remedy, I rang for the porter and ordered a "hot stovelid" from the kitchen range, distinctly stating that it be well wrapped in paper. A blank expression crossed his ebony countenance, but he respectfully answered in the affirmative and straightway disappeared. In an incredibly short time he returned, with the following information:

"Miss, de barkeeper says he don't know nuthin' 'bout mixin' a 'hot stovelid,' but he can send up a 'hot stone fence,' if dat'll do."

Just a Trifle Confused.

We have a friend who went home feeling rather well a few nights ago. He came to the top of his outside steps, and then—O, shades of Johnson—he rang the electric bell. And in one minute there was a response.

"Why didn't you use your key?" asked the gracious landlady.

"Use my key!" exclaimed the surprised lodger. "Why, I thought this was an elevator."—Boston Post.

INEBRIATE HAD GREAT SCHEME

Would Keep Fact of His Downfall from His Friends.

Mr. B., who is an ardent prohibitionist, arrived one evening at Ayer Junction, on his way home to Fitchburg, but found that he would have to wait a few minutes for the Fitchburg train.

Among the people already waiting at the station was a well-dressed man who was very evidently under the influence of liquor. Hearing Mr. B.'s inquiries, he sidled up to him and asked: "You goin' to Fishburg?"

"Yes," said Mr. B.

"Well, I'm goin' to Fishburg. Wha' train you goin' on?"

"Oh, the first train that comes along."

"Well, I'm goin' on firsht train." Then, in a confidential whisper: "Say, you know whass matter with me, don't you?"

"Yes, I do."

"Well, I know whass matter with me, but I wouldn't have my folks find it out, noffor world. You goin' Fishburg, eh? Same train with me? Well, when we get to Fishburg, you walk along shtreet with me, and when we meet anybody that knows me, you just tell 'em that I'm you and you're me, won't you? Then my folks won't know anything about it, see?"—Boston Herald.

Captured a Neighbor's Cat.

This last summer members of the United States fish commission were stationed at Lake Maubogog, Me., for the purpose of gathering statistics in regard to the finny tribes which inhabit that region. The guests of the small hotel where they made their headquarters were very much annoyed by the too frequent appearance of a skunk, and steps were taken to capture the offender.

A box trap was constructed, duly baited and set. Through small holes in the box the guests were highly elated to learn the following morning that their efforts had not been in vain.

The fish commission men, thinking it an unusually fine specimen, decided to preserve its pelt, minus the objectionable odor, if possible, and, gently handling the box, they proceeded to the lake, carefully lowered it into the water, removing it when all life was extinct.

This capture will probably not appear in their next report, as the animal proved to be a black cat belonging to the next farmhouse.

In a Corn Field.

The corn has much to say!
It tells with a gay delight
The gossip of golden day,
The dream of the tender night.
The sunny slopes run sweet
To the edge of the woodland shadows,
Where the idle, laughing streams repeat
The talk of the happy meadows.

But the trees that lean above
Have deeper thoughts to measure;
They whisper of home and love,
And hold their own life's treasure;
They breathe in the sun-filled space;
Rooted in calm they stand,
Granting the birds a nesting place,
Blessing the quiet land.

And the hills their secrets hold,
Where the brooding clouds hang over;
There the soft winds unfold
Glad thoughts that few discover.
O whispering corn, be still!
My heart is vainly trying
To hear, through all your rustling thrill
The deep tones underlying.

Ah, sweet escaping song!
Mine ears can ne'er compel it,
But the little flower I bring along
Smiles up, and tries to tell it!
—Marian Couthouy Smith, in Youth's Companion.

Time Lost by Spectacles.

Dr. Abraham Huntsinger has just given out a table relative to the time lost by persons wearing glasses. He says it's mostly time wasted, and costly time to some. Dr. Huntsinger bases his figures on the study of mankind for years.

He says the people who wear spectacles remove them and put them on again at least five times a day, and figures that 20 seconds are required for each such operation.

The man or woman who carries glasses for a period of twenty-five years (the period being placed low by the doctor) will lose thirty-two days of eight hours each as a result of the habit to take off and replace eyeglasses.—Indianapolis News.

As He Was Told.

"What was the cause of that awful racket and disturbance in your office just before you came this morning?" asked one lawyer of another.

"You know that young farmer's son who came yesterday to begin the study of law with me?" said the man addressed.

"Yes."

"Well, I thought he might as well begin at the bottom of the ladder, and I told him that when he arrived this morning the first thing for him to do would be to clear out the office. He found there half a dozen people waiting to see me on business, and he bundled out the lot!"

Collins Imported, Duty Free.

Some time between 1888 and 1892, during the tariff campaigns that were then waged, the democrats hired Faneuil hall the day preceding election for the purpose of holding a noon rally. The late Mayor Collins of Boston was called on to preside. On taking the chair he made the following short speech:

"Fellow Democrats, I have been chosen moderator of this Boston town meeting. I am an imported article, duty free, and there are a great many of you who are just the same," referring to the crowd which occupied the main body of the hall. Then a mighty cheer rent the air.

French Births Increase.

The official report of the French Minister of Commerce sets forth that the excess of births over deaths reported in France for the year 1904 is 57,026, as against an excess in 1903 of 73,106.

WAS CASE OF POT AND KETTLE

Fat Man and Barber Asked Each Other Hard Questions.

The middle-aged, fat man, after the barber finished cutting his hair, unrolled his beard, and lo, it touched the floor. It was over five feet long.

The barber, as he shampooed the beard, said:

"You pin this spinach up with hairpins into a mass six inches square. I know a man with a nine-foot beard who wears it in a bag. About five inches shows from his chin, and then the beard vanishes under his collar as an underground river vanishes under a rock.

"Why are there so many men who desire to have beards of unusual length? Men are often vainer than women when it comes to the matter of a long beard. I know some twenty men who have tried to raise long beards for years, but only three of them have succeeded.

"The average man can raise a one-foot beard, but not more than two or three men in a hundred can raise a nine or a ten foot one."

"Right you are," said the other, regarding his own river of hair complacently.

"But what I say is," complained the barber, "what good are these long, nasty messes of coarse spinach after they are grown?"

"What good," said the middle-aged man, "is that bristly, mud-colored toothbrush that grows out of your upper lip?"

Insects to Be Exterminated.

"Mosquitoes, flies, rats and many other inferior beings are the cause of a great number of the diseases of men," said a scientist. "These creatures must be killed off. That will be man's work in the future.

"We know well now that the mosquito brings us yellow fever and malaria. We know well that the rat brings us the bubonic plague. Flies carry scarlet fever about with them. Cats spread diphtheria and smallpox.

"Continually we learn new evils that the lower orders bring to man. Roaches sometimes bring him consumption. Water bugs bring him typhus.

"For some hundreds of years to come man's hardest task will be the extermination of the mosquito, the fly and a score of other harmful little creatures. This task will be difficult, and it will be rendered more difficult by misguided persons who will claim that it is impious and unwise to exterminate any species—that each species was put upon the earth to serve some good purpose.

"But man, ultimately, will succeed in this task of extermination. Some twenty or thirty years will then be added to his life, and he will be surrounded only by such lower living forms as are agreeable and useful to him."

What Webster Wanted.

Daniel Webster once dined with an old Boston merchant, and when they came to the wine a dusty old bottle was carefully opened by the servant and passed to the host. Taking the bottle, he filled Webster's glass and handed it to him. Then, pouring out another for himself he held it to the light and said:

"Tow do you like it, Mr. Webster."

"I think it is a fine specimen of old port."

"Now, can you guess what it cost me?" asked the host.

"Surely not," said Webster. "I only know that it is excellent."

"Well, now, I can tell you, for I made a careful estimate the other day. When I add the interest to the first price, I find that it costs me the sum of just $1.25 per glass."

"Good gracious! You don't say so?" cried Webster. And then, draining his glass, says a biographer, he presented it again, with the remark:

"Fill it up again as quick as you can, for I want to stop that confounded interest!"

The Tramp.

The curse of the man who will not work has always been with us. In Henry VIII's reign he was not allowed to beg the bread that belonged to honester folk, for a statute was made by which the old and impotent were granted licenses to beg, and anyone found begging without one was soundly flogged and sent home to his own parish. In this way as many as a hundred in one day, in Elizabeth's time, were sent "back to the land."

The begging license seems to work well enough abroad, where the row of authorized beggars is a familiar sight outside every church, and where the halt and maimed are seldom seen anywhere else. The rise of the vagrant in this country no doubt took place after the destruction of the monasteries, and before any other relief-giving body took their place. Yet, after the queen's magnificent gift we can still say with the monk of medieval times, "The friendship of the poor makes us the friends of kings."—London Chronicle.

Anticipation.

When lengthened pause comes in some music sweet,
And listening souls in passive silence wait,
The true musicians then anticipate—
Not heedless of the leader's rhythmic beat—
Those new harmonious measures that shall fleet
Past them in all their grand responsive state,
And smile when there come pealing soon or late
The very notes that they had hoped to greet.

So from earth's music grand true souls divine
Through Life's strange silent pulses, deeply felt,
Celestial strains that all the soul shall melt
To floods of rapture. Ah! how eyes will shine
And greet them thus: "O heavenly songs of mine
I knew and loved ye while on earth I dwelt."
—Edmund Burke.

THRONE ROOM OF CZARINA

Her Majesty's throne room at the winter palace fronted on a court which was surrounded by well-built walls with curiously shaped doors and windows and ornamented yellow and green-tiled designs at intervals, writes Katherine A. Carl in the December Century. In the center of the wall in front was the immense gateway, with wooden folding doors, which had just opened for her passage. The veranda of the throne room had two rooms projecting upon it, making it a rectangular space with walls around three of its sides. The veranda was quite different from any at the summer palace, where they run the whole length of the buildings, back and front.

Entering, I was struck by the beauty of the great central hall—the harmony of its proportions, the somber splendor of its color. It seemed to me the most satisfying, the most picturesque of all the restful, harmonious Chinese interiors I had seen, with its dull red walls and its splendid coffered ceiling glowing in color and glinting in gold, the central dome, with elaborately carved pendentives, being painted in brilliant primary colors, subdued into a rich harmony, by the demi-obscurity, for it had no "lantern" and received its light from the windows below.

The curious feature of the domes in several of the palaces in the City, so effective from within, elevation and space to the is that they are not visible outside of the edifice. The straight line of the roof, with turned corners, remains intact purity and retains its restplicity.

The hall was paved with blocks of highly polished blue ble, which dimly reflected the splendor of the walls and ceil the center of one side was a richly carpeted, on which great antique throne and foot red lacquer, framed in ebony laid with cloisonne; the three screen behind was of bronze landscapes in low relief. O leaf a poem in golden cha gave the needed touch of bri the somber massiveness of bronze.

The front and the hall were almost entirely with the pillars that support roof standing clear between dows—the lower half of plate the upper of transparent Kor per.

PIGS AS DRAUGHT ANIMALS

In many countries and even so near as Scotland the pig has served the purpose of a beast of draught and has actually been harnessed to the plow in company with cows and horses. In Scotland also early in the last century pigs were sometimes made to serve as chargers and proved most docile mounts, says the London Express.

The homing instinct is strongly developed in the pig. Instances not infrequently occur of pigs finding their way back to farms whence they have been conveyed. There is a record of two pigs homing nine miles, and crossing the Thames to boot, to their old farm, whence they had been driven to Reading market and bought by a local gentleman on the previous day. At one point on their homeward journey where two roads met the twain were observed "putting their noses together as if in deep consultation."

About 1815 a London gentleman created a sensation by driving a four-in-hand of pigs through the streets, and thirty years later an old farmer caused amusement to a great crowd in the market place at St. by entering it in a chaise d four trotting hogs. After two turns round the market he d the Woolpack yard, where his steeds were unharnessed a away to be regaled with a tr beans and wash.

There have also been sporti An old account of a black so Richard Tooner, one of th keepers in the New Forest, b find game and to bask and says: "Within a fortnight she find and point partridges or and her training was much for by the abundance of both. MAKING FOUR-LEAVED CLOVER

Four leaved clovers may be grown in abundance on lawns or in flower beds. The raising of four leaved clovers has been made possible by Prof. De Vries of Amsterdam, who has found a plant bearing six or seven four leaved clovers, capable of being transplanted. He first sowed them, and since then he has had a new generation each year. Each time he chose his seeds from a fourth of the best plants; that is, from those which had the most four and five leaved clovers. It was the third generation which began to be rich in the desired form of leaflets, but only with four and five leaflets, and these only in the adult plant. During August and September of the same year he remarked a very few with seven leaflets. At this point he reduced his selection to a severe standard. He chose for his progenitors only those plants having two-thirds of all their leaves wi or more leaflets. But he had ered a curious fact that much fied his selection from then sowing clover one may observ the first leaf of each young a sequent leaflets have regularly leaflets. This knowledge made sible for him to make his se much more quickly. He had choose the young clovers wit pound leaves and transplant from his glass house to his leaving the others to perish. did not need so many hundr viduals as before, though ea he still selected some thous seedlings from their sowing p last, after eight years of e new variety of clover came int ence. Of this crop nearly all plants had their first leaf co ed, and all, with few exceptio five leaved.

MISSED THEIR HARD BEDS

Habit plays a large part in the comfort of the individual. At least, so it was with a party of soldiers from the ventures as related by Mr. Todd in his book on the civil war. The regiment was in barracks near Cincinnati for over Sunday, and a party of four was made up to visit the city and see the sights.

"As a rare treat we were to put up at the hotel for the night, and enjoy good sleep on soft beds and have a fine breakfast before returning to camp.

"We went to the hotel and paid for a big room with two beds in it. We were feeling pretty well as we returned to the hotel, and pitying our poor comrades in their hard bunks.

"As we climbed into our comfortable beds we made various remarks about the places in which we were accustomed to sleep. Then we settled for rest.

"For some reason I could not go to sleep, and my bedfellow was restless. I also heard sounds the other bed which indicated its occupants were not reposing.

"'Come, John, why don't you sleep?' I said to my mate.

"'Why don't you go yourself returned.

"'The bed's too soft!' came across the room.

"That was the secret of our fulness. We rolled hopeless until John exclaimed in desp

ICELAND LIFE IS SIMPLE

There are no manufactories in the country. Each home is a factory and every member of the family a hand, says the Pilgrim.

Shoes are made from goatskins. The long stockings, worn over these in wading through the snow, are knitted by the women and children, and even the beautiful broadcloth comes smooth and perfect from the hand loom found in every house.

The sweet simplicity of their national costume does away with the necessity of fashion books. Young girls who are about to be married need take no thought as to "wherewithal shall they be clothed." When they array themselves in the wedding garments of their ancestor, two or three generations remote, they are perfectly up-to-date in the matter of attire.

This simple life is conducive to a state of high morals, higher than in any other part of the There is not a drop of liquor factured in the island, and 78,000 population there is but liceman. INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 18.

Review of the Lessons For the First Quarter—Read Luke vi., 17-26—Golden Text, Matt., iv., 23—Topic: Christ's Spiritual Kingdom—The Summaries.

Lesson I. Topic: The Saviour revealed to man. Place: Bethlehem of Judea, six miles south of Jerusalem. See Micah 5, 2. God so ordered events that through natural causes Joseph and Mary were led, at just the right time, from Nazareth to Bethlehem. The angel of the Lord appeared to the shepherds. "Unto you is born"—unto the Jews, unto all people; "a Saviour"—a deliverer; "which is Christ"—the anointed One, and as such our Prophet, Priest and King; "the Lord"—this child is Jehovah Himself. The shepherds hastened to Bethlehem and found the babe according to the angel's words.

II. Topic: Man seeking the Saviour. Place: Bethlehem. Wise men, led by a star, come from the East to Jerusalem; inquire for the King of the Jews; they are come to worship Him; Herod is troubled; calls chief priests and scribes and asks where Christ should be born; they say, in Bethlehem; Herod sends the wise men to Bethlehem, asking them to bring him word again; they go, again led by the star, and find Jesus; Jesus is worshiped and gifts are presented. The wise men return to their own country without consulting Herod.

III. Topic: The boy Jesus a pattern for youth. Places: Nazareth and Jerusalem. Jesus grew and became strong like other children. At the age of twelve He went with His parents to the feast of the Passover. When they start on the return trip the child is left behind; found in the temple with the doctors of the law, asking and answering questions; all were astonished; His parents gently reprove Him; He tells them He must be about "His Father's business;" returns with them to Nazareth.

IV. Topic: Christ's preparation for His life work. Place: Jesus was baptized at the fords of the Jordan, called Bethadara. John preached in the wilderness; baptized in Jordan; preached repentance; insisted that they bring forth fruits unto repentance; different classes came to him; a thorough reformation required of all; pointed to the Messiah. Jesus goes from Nazareth, in Galilee, to the Jordan, to be baptized of John. John shrinks from such a step; Jesus urges it; is baptized; the heavens are opened; the Spirit descends like a dove upon Him; a voice from heaven: "Thou art My beloved Son."

V. Topic: A study of Christ's temptation. Place: Mount Quarantania, a short distance northwest of Jericho. Jesus in the wilderness; fasts forty days and forty nights; afterward an hungered; tempter came to Him; asks Him to prove that He is the Son of God by turning stones into bread; Jesus defeats him by quoting Scripture; Satan then asked Him to cast Himself down from the pinnacle of the temple; and again he promised Jesus all the kingdoms of the world if He would fall down and worship him. Jesus resisted Sata and angels came.

VI. Topic: Laws of soul-winning. Place: Near Capernaum, on the Sea of Galilee. Jesus walking by the Sea of Galilee; the people pressed upon Him; He entered into Peter's boat and taught them while they stood on the land; commanded Simon to "launch out into the deep" for a draught; Simon said they had toiled all night and caught nothing, but he obeyed Christ's word; a great multitude of fishes inclosed; the net was breaking, and Peter beckoned to James and John to come to their assistance; both ships were filled until they began to sink; the disciples were astonished at the miracle. They left all and followed Christ.

VII. Topic: Jesus the great Physician. Place: Capernaum. Jesus is in the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Teaches the people; they are astonished at His doctrine; an unclean spirit cries out; Jesus casts him out; fame spread abroad; at Peter's house; mother-in-law healed; when the sun was down the diseased and those possessed with devils were brought to Him, and He healed them all and cast out the devils.

VIII. Topic: Jesus' power to forgive sins. Place: Capernaum. Jesus is probably at Peter's house; a great crowd at the door; a paralytic brought and carried to the roof; the roof torn up; the bed let down; Jesus saw their faith; "Thy sins be forgiven thee;" the scribes reason; He speaketh blasphemies; Jesus answers them; which is easier to say, Arise, or, Thy sins be forgiven? the cure; the people amazed. They glorify God, saying, "We never saw it on this fashion." They saw that none but God could perform such a wonderful cure and they were filled with reverence and fear. The divinity of our Lord is here fully established.

IX. Topic: The Bible secret of the blessed life. Place: The "Horns of Hattin," near the centre of the west coast of the Sea of Galilee. He taught the disciples and the multitudes. Who are blessed? The poor in spirit; the mourners; the meek; the hungry and thirsty; the merciful; the pure in heart; the peacemakers; those persecuted for righteousness' sake. The promises made are all rich and full and sure. True Christians are the salt of the earth and the light of the world.

X. Topic: Christian conduct—a study of the new life. Place: Same as last lesson. Christ gave instruction concerning oaths. All profane swearing is prohibited, but such oaths as are required by a civil magistrate are not included—judicial oaths ought not to be called "swearing." Christians are not to retaliate, but are to be controlled by the law of love. It is also gloriously possible for Christians to be perfected in love. Jesus commands us to love God with all the heart and our neighbor as ourself.

SAVED FROM CATARRH OF LUNGS SO COMMON IN WINTER BY TAKING PE-RU-NA.

Sore Throat Develops Into Bronchitis.

Mrs. Addie Harding, 121 W. Brighton Ave., Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "I have been a user of Peruna for the past twelve years. With me it is a sure preventive of colds and many other ills.

"Two or three times a year I am troubled with my throat, a kind of raw feeling, turning to bronchitis. I have had the services of my physician in each case. Two years ago, when I felt a spell coming I tried Peruna to check it, and to my delight was not troubled with the smothered and choking feeling and never have been since. I can check it every time with Peruna."

Chronic Catarrh of Throat and Lungs.

Mrs. Virginia Caviana, room 32, Cambridge Block, Portland, Ore., writes:

"I was a sufferer with catarrh of the throat and lungs for a long time before Peruna was recommended to me. I gave it a trial, although I thought at the time it would be just like other medicines and do me no good. I was pleased to find that my improvement began in less than two weeks and continued until I was entirely well. I gained nearly 15 pounds, have a splendid appetite and am grateful for what your medicine has done for me."

New Use for Dogs.

A new drainage plan has been prepared for the city of Nice, France. A novel feature is a proposal to use specially trained dogs to carry from one end of the sewer to the other a rope by which a brush can be drawn for the cleansing of pipes.

European Armies.

The military budget of the French republic foots up to a total of 29,000 officers, whose pay alone amounts to nearly 4,000,000 pounds sterling. Italy, under the same head, has 14,000 officers, drawing 1,450,000 pounds annually. Spains pays on account of 23,000 officers the sum of 2,750,000 pounds.

Tobacco Currency.

Tobacco, which used to be the medium of exchange in the early colonial days of Virginia, is today the currency of British New Guinea. The British administrator there reports that the medium is not the means of a lively trade.

PERMANENT MEADOWS should have an annual dressing of 500 pounds per acre of a fertilizer containing eleven per cent. POTASH and ten per cent. available phosphoric acid.

This will gradually force out sour grasses and mosses from the meadows, and bring good grasses and clovers; thus increasing the quality as well as the quantity of the hay.

Our practical book, "Farmer's Guide," gives valuable facts for every sort of crop-raising. It is one of a number of books on successful fertilization which we send on request, free of any cost or obligation, to any farmer who will write us for them.

CITIZENS SAVINGS BANK

Read This Notable New Year's Editorial From the New York American.

Below we reproduce the strong, terse New Year's editorial on Savings from the New York American. It should be read and re-read by every man, woman, boy and girl in Birmingham and Alabama. It is laden with wisdom and sound advice, which if heeded by the people will redound to the continuous prosperity and happiness of this nation. Especially is its wisdom commended to the people of the Birmingham District, the great majority of whom are wage-earners, receiving good wages every month in the year

CITIZENS SAVINGS ...

THIS YEAR

DEVOTE an hour of careful thought today to your New Year's resolutions. Do not be among those who think resolutions are valueless because some are broken.

The progress of men as individuals and as a race has come from MENTAL EFFORT, from resolutions, from trying to do what they know they ought to do.

We can't all keep our resolutions. But we can at least try. We can remain hopeful, earnest, and this is the day for us to begin again.

Let us question ourselves, accuse ourselves, investigate our weaknesses, recognize them. AND DETERMINE TO CORRECT THEM IN THE COMING YEAR.

Every man and woman must decide what she or he needs individually. With many of us lack of will power is the great curse—procrastination, self-indulgence.

With others it is easy good nature, extravagance. With others various bad habits that sap the vitality which could mean success, not mere amusement or physical gratification.

We recommend to you today a resolution illustrated in this picture.

Desiring to give the best possible advice to our readers, we advise them most earnestly TO SAVE MONEY. Every man with a child or any human being dependent upon him owes it to his sense of decency to save his money. For only money saved and accumulated can mean permanent safety for the weak.

We do not advise saving merely for the money's sake, merely for gratification or enrichment. To have money and have nothing else is to be poor indeed.

But money MEANS INDEPENDENCE. Remember that the man whose dollar you must get from day to day is the man THAT OWNS YOU.

And as long as you must deliver each day of your life for that man's dollar you do not own yourself.

In old slave days an unusually intelligent negro would be permitted, as the saying went, "to buy his time," or even "to buy his freedom." The master realized that the slave working free, with some incentive, would produce much more than under compulsion, and he would arrange to sell the slave his own time for so much per day, or sell him the right to buy his freedom absolutely.

What would you think of a negro who in those days would have refused the chance of freedom?

You would say that the man was made to be a slave, and he ought to be a slave.

But do you realize that when YOU FAIL TO SAVE MONEY YOU ARE REFUSING A CHANCE TO BUY YOUR FREEDOM?

Are you a free man, when you don't know where the money will come from to take care of your family or yourself the week after next?

Are you a free man, when you don't own a foot of the surface of this earth, which men buy and sell to each other?

Are you a free man, if you haven't accumulated and saved that which makes you independent of other men?

Do you imagine that having your body owned by a man is so very different from having your time and your future owned?

Make up your mind that this year you will start in to buy your freedom.

We would not suggest to any man that he should free himself from wage dependence in order to be idle. If we believed that a man would accumulate enough to let him do nothing, and then do nothing, we would much prefer he never might save a dollar. Every man should work and want to work, as long as there is strength and energy in him.

But it is also true that every man should be in a position to do the best work that offers. He ought to be in a position to seize a good opportunity. He should be in such a position that, if duty told him to he could devote himself to the welfare of others, to working for his fellow men instead of working forever for his breakfast, luncheon, dinner and bed.

Money is crystalized labor. The dollars that you have saved up are all that you have to show materially for the efforts of your past life. What has become of the money—little or much—that you have received in the past? It has gone into your stomach, in pleasure, in clothes, unless you have it to show. Of course, if you have really spent every dollar as you got it for a family that needed every dollar, all honor to you.

But how many men and women can truthfully say that? How many can deny that if they had the will power they could save something and still do their duty?

Remember that this resolution to save means not only the accumulation of money, but the formation and strengthening of character.

Nine times out of ten the man who begins to save stops some kind of foolishness. Economy means giving up something, and the wise man usually manages to give up that which is bad for him. When you begin to save you begin, as a rule, to sleep longer, to drink and smoke less, to waste less time among unprofitable friends.

The saving of money not only means independence in the future, but it means better use of time in the present.

Think this over today. Think of your own case. Look at the men about you who have money. Remember that with a few disgraceful exceptions among the gamblers, thieves and politicians, the average man has money BECAUSE HE HAD THE STRENGTH OF CHARACTER TO SAVE. Even John D. Rockefeller has a thousand millions now BECAUSE HE WAS ABLE TO SAVE THE FIRST DOLLAR. IF HE HAD SPENT THE FIRST FEW DOLLARS HE WOULD HAVE SPENT ALL THE OTHER DOLLARS, AND WHILE HE WAS SPENDING THEM HE WOULD HAVE MISSED THE OPPORTUNITY THAT HAS GIVEN HIM THE MILLIONS PILED UP.

True, Rockefeller should not have those millions. He WOULDN'T have them if the other people of the nation equalled him in concentration of purpose, if they took an interest in their own financial welfare and their own government. Let a few millions of men develop the concentrated determination of Rockefeller, and YOU WILL HAVE MILLIONS OF PROSPEROUS MEN, AND NO ROCKEFELLERS.

As to how THE money should be saved, the simple recipe is BEGIN AT ONCE.

The savings bank, of course, is the simplest beginning. There are other ways. The man who has the intelligence to select the means of making one dollar produce another quickly is, of course, the lucky man.

All of us should watch for the opportunities that are offered in this day of extraordinary commercial and other develpoments.

The real estate field especially, with wise selection, offers a very great opportunity. We shall impress constantly upon all our readers, IN THE HOPE OF MAKING MANY OF THEM RICH, the fact that the problem of transportation is entering upon an absolutely new phase.

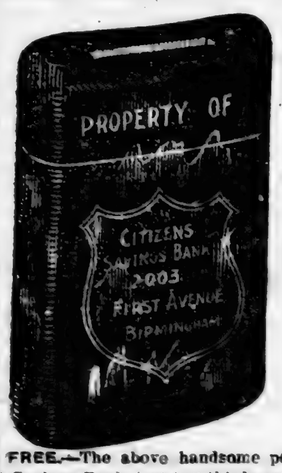
Let One of Your New Year's Resolves Be, "I Will Be Independent, Not at the Mercy of Any Man's Pocketbook

The people of this district, and of the entire South, have got to learn the habit of saving and economy before they can ever become independent like their neighbors of the New England states and other sections where the savings bank is considered next to the church and school house in importance.

The Citizens Saving Bank was organized and is being conducted for the purpose of inculcating among the people the importance of thrift and saving, and is ready and anxious at all times to help you so far as we can along these lines.

The Citizens Saving Bank is the only important bank in the State which confines its banking business strictly and exclusively to Savings Accounts, and in this connection we ask you to read the Alabama law governing on Savings Accounts, which we publish at the bottom of this page. We also print below an excerpt from the laws enacted for the protection of the vast number of savings depositors in the great savings bank system of Massachusetts. Read both of them. Each is a positive argument in favor of a strictly savings bank for savings deposits.



FREE.—The above handsome pocket Savings Bank (cut two-thirds actual size) free to any man, woman, boy or girl, applying for same. Convenient for the pocket or the shopping bag.

THE ALABAMA BANKING LAW.

Section 250 of the last Constitution provides that depositors in banks who have not stipulated for interest, shall, for their deposits, be entitled, in case of insolvency, to preference of pay over all other creditors, and this law applies to all banks, whether incorporated or not.

In other words, if a bank does both a savings business and a regular banking business, and should become insolvent, then the depositors who did not get interest on their deposits would have a preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings.

The Citizens Savings Bank accepts only savings accounts, hence every depositor stands on the same footing here.

THE MASSACHUSETTS BANKING LAW.

Extract from Section 3, Chapter 169, Acts of 1902, Massachusetts Statutes, reads:

"No savings bank .....shall occupy the same office or suite of offices with a national bank, trust company or other bank of discount, nor any office directly connected by means of doors or other openings in partitions with the office or suite of offices occupied by any such national bank, trust company or other bank of discount." The penalty for the violation of this section being not more than $500. Section 4 provides that "No president, vice president or treasurer of a savings bank shall hold the office or perform the duties of president, vice president, treasurer or cashier of a national bank, trust company or other bank of discount." The penalty for the violation of this section is also not more than $500.

WOOD DENIES KILLING.

Taft Receives Cables Declaring Sensational Stories Were Not Founded on Fact.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary Taft has received two cablegrams from Major-General Leonard Wood at Manila relative to the Mount Dajo fight. The first reads as follows:

"If more detailed information concerning the facts connected with the Mount Dajo fight is desired I suggest that Major Hugh L. Scott be called on. He is thoroughly acquainted with the situation, having spent eight months in the attempt to get these people off the mountain without fighting."

The Major Scott referred to has been on leave of absence in this country and has just arrived in Washington in answer to the secretary's summons. He was referred to in some of the Manila cablegrams as having caused the trouble at Mount Dajo by reason of exercise of great leniency toward the brigand Moros. The second dispatch is dated Manila, and reads as follows:

"Sensational cables sent to the United States relating to the Mount Dajo fight were made up in Manila. There has been no reference in a cable from Mindanao to the killing of women and children. On receipt of Colonel Andrews' condensed report for me in Washington the American newspapers cabled for details. The reporters here had no other information than what was cabled in my report."

Six Hundred Miners Cut Off.

Ouray, Colo.—Six hundred miners employed in the various mines within a radius of twenty miles from Ouray have been cut off from all communication with the outside by a snowslide. It is feared as many as twenty miners have lost their lives in the slide, but the exact number will not be known for days. As many as twenty-five mines are completely isolated. The damage may reach $1,000,000.

At the Camp Bird mine, which is four miles from the Camp Bird mill, a snowslide Sunday evening completely isolated fifty or more miners employed there, and as the provision house was carried away it is certain they are in urgent need of food. A party of 200 miners started to their rescue Monday morning.

The body of William J. Cresey, the Englishman who lost his life in the slide at Camp Bird mill, hsa been recovered.

It is said there are sixty feet of snow at the high tower of the tramway of the Camp Bird.

Baroness Shoots Herself.

Leavenworth, Kas.—Carolina von Dembusche, said to be the divorced wife of Baron von Dembusche-Haddenhausen, a German baron of Berlin, committed suicide by shooting at the headquarters of her son, Second Lieut. Carl Frenderick von Dembusche, of the Eighteenth Infantry, United States army, at Fort Leavenworth. Lieutenant von Dembusche is a cousin of Frieherr von Dembusche-Haddenhausen, first secretary of the German embassy at Washington.

No cause, except that possibly of melancholia, is known for the woman having taken her life. The officers at the fort decline to make known any definite facts regarding the affair.

Town Destroyed by Forest Fires.

Seattle, Wash.—A special to the Post-Intelligencer from Lyndon, Wash., says:

Northwood, four miles north of Lyndon, in Whitcom county, has been destroyed by forest fires.

The Northwood lumber and shingle mill was totally destroyed, and many families are homeless. The fire is within a mile of Lyndon and grave fears are felt for that town. Hundreds are fighting the fire and the Bellingham department was sent out by special train to aid the threatened city of Lyndon and the surrounding farmers to subdue the conflagration.

Sheboygan, Wis.—The Goodrich steamer Atlanta, which left this port for Milwaukee, was burned to the water's edge twelve miles south of Sheboygan and about five miles out. The Atlanta is valued as about $150,000, and the boat and cargo is a total loss. The Atlanta had a crew of sixty men and only two passengers.

Strychnine Found.

Fitzgerald, Ga.—The state chemist, who made a chemical analysis of the stomach of Mrs. Reason Handley, states that he found strychnine, and this is supposed to have caused her death. Reason Handley is held in the Irwinville jail on the charge of murder of his wife, and will be tried at the coming term of court.

Belgrade, Servia.—Six hundred Macedonian emigrants have left here for the United States by way of Fiume. All of them possessed sufficient funds to permit their entering the United States.

WOOD MUST TELL

Country Wants Explanation of the Battle at the Crater.

SENATE DEMANDS DETAILS.

Culberson's Resolution Asking President for Reports Voiced Sentiment of the Nation. Roosevelt's "Honor of the Flag" Cable Receives Attention.

Washington, D. C.—Unless General Leonard Wood sends some more facts to this country very soon, in justification of the slaughter of six hundred or more Moros, including women and children, in the Island of Jolo, that fight in the crater of the volcano will very likely prove his undoing. Senators and congressmen, regardless of party politics, are boiling over with indignation and horror and it is said not even the president's amazing message concerning the "honor of the flag upheld" will be able to stem the tide against Wood unless he shows cause for that bloody massacre.

The outbreak in the senate and house was but the reflection of the intense feeling which the country at large entertains over the massacre. When Senator Culberson arose and demanded that the secretary of war furnish the senate with the messages and other documents bearing on the "fight" he merely expressed the general feeling that has been literally blistering the United States capitol building. They do not permit applause in the United States senate, or there would have been an outburst at Culberson's demand that would have rocked the dome.

Over in the house of representatives, however, they do countenance applause, so that when Representative Jones, of Virginia, arose in his place and denounced the killing of the women and children by Wood there was a perfect gale of it to demonstrate the general feeling on the subject. The newspapers of the East are fairly howling for the facts, and there are many other evidences of public wrath over the affair.

There is a vague rumor in Washington that is serving as fuel to the flame against General Wood. The rumor has it that all the messages that have come from the Philippines to the war department and white house have not been made public. The president, it is hinted, got a very facetious message from Wood concerning the "nght," and whispers of this message have been going around until a goodly number have heard of it and believe the rumors concerning it.

Senator Culberson and others are determined to have the facts in the case if there is any possible way to get them. Secretary Taft, it is said, would have sent the whole correspondence to the senate in answer to the Culberson resolution, but strangely enough he found it convenient to leave Washington about the time the senate's demand came to his department. What the senate got in answer to its demand for the papers, therefore, was a message from the president in which there was nothing but the cablegrams that had already been given out to the newspapers. It would seem, then, that Roosevelt is determined to see the thing out in person. Like Wood, he has "assumed the entire responsibility." It remains to be seen if he can check the rising tide of anger which is rolling in from the country at large.

Whether Wood eventually justifies his action in the "battle" or not, the president of the United States will have some difficulty in ever convincing certain senators and congressmen that he did right in sending Wood that cable message approving the slaughter of the women and children. He sent the cable, it will be recalled, before the full story of the "battle" had been received. How he could conceive that the "honor of the American flag" had been upheld by the butchery of savage men, women and children, all of whom were practically unarmed and defenseless against the full military equipment of the American soldiers, is more than even his warmest admirers in congress can understand.

As the affair now stands, the entire nation is exceedingly hot and growing hotter, and the demand for justification on the part of General Wood is becoming louder and louder each day.

DOUBT.

She shall not know I love her,
I will not let her see
The rosy riot in my heart
When she is kind to me.

How could I vex so fair a maid,
So fair and calm and high,
When I am shackled to the earth,
Bond-brother to a sigh?

My pain shall not be hers to share,
My passion sway her not,
And high and calm and fair she still
Shall count her happy lot.

But does she count it so, nor yearn
To hear a lover's call?
I cannot longer bear the doubt,
I go—to tell her all!

—Walter Prichard Eaton.

An Up-to-.....Date Romance

By LESLIE W QUIRK.

LOIS had two aunts and a lover. The aunts were downright tyrants; the lover—well, I was the lover.

Lois was rich. This fact caused all the trouble. Because Lois was rich the aunts regarded me with undisguised distrust; because Lois was rich they kept her eternally at home like a caged mouse; because Lois was rich, in fact, they forbade my marrying her.

Because I was a fool, perhaps, I swore that I would marry Lois in spite of the aunts, her fortune, and all the personified objections that ever walked on earth. Because I was a fool, certainly, I made this plain to the aunts.

Things went from bad to worse. At first I was allowed to see Lois any time I chose. But after a while the periods when I was permitted to find her "at home" were curtailed mightily. After a time, indeed, I was allowed to see her only on certain days, between certain hours, for all the world as if she were in prison.

I blustered, I swore vengeance, I talked United States law at those two old jailer aunts till my knowledge and powers of invention were entirely exhausted. But still they smiled serenely upon me, and intimated that I might call for a few minutes the week after next.

I don't know what they told Lois about me. Anyhow, it did not in the least alter her love. But it was embarrassing sometimes when she would turn her great, trusting brown eyes upon me and ask if I had ever killed a man or blown up a house with dynamite. Because I had not.

"I wish," she said to me one day, "that I could hear your big, hearty voice all the time. It would make me braver."

Plainly, if I could not be by her side I must find an alternative. There was the telephone, to be sure, but there were also the aunts with their opposition. There was—what on earth was there? Oh, yes——

I sent to a dealer in phonographs.

"I should like a talk," I said.

He led me into his private office.

"Well?"

"Into a phonograph," I explained, "for a reproduction of my speech, you know."

So I talked. It cost me more than the long-distance telephone, but I paid willingly. I bought a phonograph and took lessons on making records. Then I presented the machine to Lois.

"If you wind it up and put in a record," I told her, "it will talk for me."

The machine swore eternal love for Lois in my behalf and Lois smiled.

The next time I called I bought twelve records. Half of them were lastingly impressed with remarks of mine, and half of them were blank. I explained to Lois the process of reversing the machine in order to produce a permanent record of her speeches.

"Now, I have numbered these six records," I explained. "Put them on the cylinder of the phonograph in the proper order. After No. 1 has talked take one of the six blank records and reply to mine. In this manner we will keep up a close imitation of a conversation."

The aunts blandly informed me that I was not to be allowed to call for a week or more. Nevertheless, not all the aunts of the universe could keep me from marching up and down the walk in front of the house.

So the next day I sauntered past—that is, almost past. At the further corner of the yard I came to an abrupt halt, for the curtains of the house were down and no smoke curled from the chimney. It was deserted!

There was no time for trifling. There might be a landlord or an agent who owned a key; no one was on the spot. Within five minutes I had broken into the house.

The rooms down stairs were bare. Scarcely noticing them, I swept up the stairs to the front room, from whose window I had often seen the face of Lois while I was walking in front of the house. It, too, was deserted.

As I searched the room with eager haste my eyes spied a single object. Under the edge of the front window, almost hidden by the curtain, and apparently placed there to prop up the window, was a phonographic record.

I burst into the store of my friend, the dealer in phonographs, with the impetuosity of a runaway train. Before he could restrain me I had placed the record on a small phonograph and started the wheels of the machine.

"Oh, Frank," came the trembling voice of Lois from the megaphone horn, "we are going away—my aunts and I. They told me to-night that I should never see you again. I don't know where we are bound for eventually, but we go to Everville from here. Come to me, Frank, won't you? I—my aunts are coming and I must hide the record. I pray that you may find it."

Everville I found to be a little railroad junction. It was easy to trace the three women to a hotel. They had occupied double room No. 16 the night before.

"Anybody in Room 16?" I demanded of the sleepy clerk.

"Guess not," he grunted, studying the register.

"I'll take it then," I announced, hurriedly.

Before he was through insisting that a single person could find no use for a room with two beds in it I had thrown a bill on the counter and was half-way upstairs.

In a drawer of the dresser I found the record for which I was searching. Without a second's delay I slipped it on the phonograph I carried. The voice of Lois presently broke the breathless silence.

"Aunt Rebecca thinks I am crazy," it said. "Perhaps I am, but it is not because I talk to my phonograph all the time, but because they are taking me away from you. Somehow, Frank, I feel that you will follow us. I do not know where we go from here, but you may be able to learn from the ticket agent. We leave at 8.30 to-morrow (Wednesday) morning."

That was all. But it was the voice of Lois, and it cheered me and filled me with fresh determination. I shut my lips firmly and swore that I would follow the two aunts and Lois through every country on earth rather than lose the girl.

"Think I can remember everybody that buys tickets?" growled the agent at the station when I accosted him for information. I cursed him for a fool. It was evident that the aunts were using Lois' money for bribes.

It seemed that I was off the trail at the very start. But the porter of the parlor car of the 8.30 train the next morning set me right.

"Am yo' name Frank Bomer?" he asked, eying me as I boarded his train.

When I had assured him that it was he handed me a package.

"From a pow'ful scared gal," he chuckled.

I unrolled the phonographic record. With the sight of it came the awful recollection that I had forgotten my pronograph.

The situation was appalling. Here I was within sound of Lois' voice, but to all intents as deaf to it as a man without ears. True, I could buy another phonograph when the train reached the city, but the chances were a hundred to one that the aunts would bundle Lois off at some little junction close at hand.

Again the porter came to my aid. He had been walking past me several times as I sat thinking, and was evidently deeply curious as to the contents of the package he had given me. Now he stopped by my seat.

"Dat part of a phon'raph, sah?" he asked, looking at the record.

"Yes," I explained; "it represents the vocal organs."

He grinned. "Am yo' de owner of the phon-raph in de 'spress car?"

I felt the hot blood rush to my head. Salvation was at my back.

It required some judicious tipping and lordly airs to gain access to the baggage car and secure possession of the phonograph. But when love backs a man, even a do-nothing can accomplish wonders, while an ordinary being—well, I wound the machine and waited for the voice of my sweetheart.

"This is the most momentous day of my whole life," came the clear tones of Lois. "It is my birthday, and I am no longer a girl. To-day I am of age, free to marry whom I please. If you find me, Frank, I will become your wife at once. I hope the promise will spur you on. We stop to-night at Rugby."

The voice ended abruptly, and I fancied the aunts must have disturbed the girl as she was talking into the phonograph.

"How far from here is Rugby?" I asked the conductor, after I was back in the parlor car.

"Just passed it," he growled.

I looked out of the window and found that the train was bowling along at too great a speed to jump. Springing to my feet I whipped at the bell cord. The conductor turned with an oath and signaled to go ahead. The train had barely slackened speed.

It was time for prompt and vigorous action. Grasping the bell cord once more I pulled it sharply, and then, before the official with the ticket punch could object, I pinioned him to a seat. This time the train came to a full stop.

When I dropped off the rear platform and started back up the track I dare say I left a car full of astonished people. I know I left a blaspheming conductor and the ill wishes of a crew whose train had been delayed two precious minutes. But what does a man care for hades when he is chasing heaven?

There is no need of detailing the steps by which I traced the record in Rugby. The station master pointed out the cab driver who [illegible] me to the hotel clerk. Lois had evidently been given the key of the room to deliver when they went, and had taken the opportunity of presenting also the phonographic record, with instructions to turn it over to me.

When I had purchased a new phonograph, I found that Lois' message contained but one short sentence:

"We are going to Leighton," she told me.

It was the last day of June when my train reached Leighton. Rain was falling in perfect torrents, and the Missouri River already looked ugly and swollen. Housed in a comfortable hotel, with four reproductions of Lois' cheering talks, I watched the rain pour down day by day. The weather was at one with my mood, for try as I might, I could find no new record from the girl.

Bit by bit the river rose. Shanties and boathouses on the banks of the Missouri were caught in the mad swirl and swept down stream. But still the water crept higher and higher.

And then one night the railroad bridge trembled and finally gave way, cutting off all connection with the country beyond.

The morning of the Fourth of July dawned clear. For the first time I strolled about the town, at a loss as to my further actions. The postoffice caught my eye, and half jokingly, I asked for mail. I was given a phonographic record!

"Dear Frank," said Lois' voice, when I had fitted the record on the cylinder of my machine, "I think there is a chance to overtake us. We go from here to Berryville, just across the river, where Aunt Sarah says we shall stay for several days. I mail this because Aunt Rebecca has become suspicious of the phonograph. I saw her talking with the hotel clerk, and I am sure she was warning him not to give anything to you should you be following us. I somehow believe you will receive this record. Come quickly."

Within a mile or two of Lois and for four days making no effort to reach her! I cursed my stupidity in not asking for mail before. I sprang up, ready to renew my search. Then I dropped back to my seat.

Between Lois and me rolled the Missouri River, unbridged and swollen in a mighty flood. I could never cross.

I telegraphed north, south; up the river, down the river. Everywhere it was the same. Bridges were gone and no boat dared venture up the river.

At the moment when I was about to give up hope a thought, of a surety heaven born, came to my rescue.

A brisk wind blew straight across the river. Why not hire the aeronaut who was to make a balloon ascension at the Fourth of July celebration to allow me to accompany him? Without question the wind would carry us safely across the river.

The aeronaut was stubbornly mercenary. Dollar by dollar I raised my bid, till his great black eyes grew narrow in greedy anticipation. At last we agreed on a price.

It was not until we had shot up into the air with the speed of a bullet that he explained that it would be impossible to land at Berryville; it was too close to the river.

So we sailed over it. I do not know whether the man was new at the business or whether the balloon acted badly, but we drifted on and on with the wind, never once tilting earthward, till I was frantic. Just at sunset we landed, with a terrible thump, in a field something more than fifty miles from Berryville. I should be forced to go back to that town to pick up the thread of the trail.

Cold, dirty, discouraged, I trudged along by the side of my companion toward a town near at hand. We came to it after a scramble over fields and through woods, and at once made for the hotel. There, sitting in front of the house, deliciously lonely, was Lois!

Later we bearded the lions.

"Young man," said Aunt Rebecca, looking severely at me over her spectacles, "you are prevaricating."

"Yes, indeed," chimed in Aunt Sarah, "Lois has not been out of our sight twenty minutes. You are prevaricating."

"I am telling you the truth," I declared, with my arm thrown protectingly about Lois.

"The proof!" demanded Aunt Rebecca.

"The proof!" echoed Aunt Sarah.

"It is here," I proclaimed dramatically.

I started the wheels of the phonograph and placed on the cylinder the sixth record I had given to Lois. From the horn, slowly and solemnly, came the voice of the dear old minister who had married us:

"I pronounce you husband and wife."

Hunger in the Polar Regions.

Hunger is one of the trials that explorers of the polar regions have to encounter very often. Capt. Scott, in his recent volume, has this description of an unpleasant experience in the farthest south: "My companions get very bad food dreams; in fact, these have become the regular breakfast conversation. It appears to be a sort of nightmare; they are either sitting at a well-spread table with their arms tied, or they grasp at a dish and it slips out of their hands, or they are in the act of lifting a dainty morsel to the mouth when they fall over a precipice."

A Youthful King.

The youngest king in the world is Daudi Chau, King of Uganda, Africa, who is now about eight. He holds his court on a scarlet throne, with a leopard-skin mat under his feet, and bearing in his hand a toy gun. The British exercise a protectorate over the young king and his kingdom, and have established for him a sort of parliament, which he opens regularly with much pomp.

THE USEFUL COAT.

Something About a Little-Known Farming Industry That Pays Well.

The goat, except as a troublesome pet and the perennial subject of stale jokes, is in this country but little known. During the past year, however, a number of pure bred milch goats have been imported and made the nuclei of several herds.

Requests for information regarding the milk of these animals have been sufficiently numerous to lead the United States Department of Agriculture to issue a bulletin upon the subject. Therein G. F. Thompson supplies facts regarding European countries, and asserts in a very convincing manner that from both a financial and a dietetic standpoint the people of this country are heavy losers by not keeping goats, an industry worth annually to Germany alone $32,000,000.

Attention is directed chiefly to two points: The superior nutritive value, especially for children and sick people, of goat's milk as compared with cow's milk, and the greater ease with which goats are obtained and kept, a point of particular interest to the poorer classes, says American Medicine. Foreign writers are quoted at length as to the value of goat's milk for children and invalids and in cooking. The flavor and odor of the milk, which the average American regards as once and for all settling the question, is said to be almost wholly under control by the exercise of care in feeding and milking the animals.

A very weighty argument in favor of the goat is its comparative immunity from tuberculosis, this disease being extremely uncommon among goats; the statement of some writers that immunity is complete is not supported by facts.—New York Evening World.

WISE WORDS.

Men who are willing to go alone can always go with God.

The envy of the evil is the good man's best endorsement.

We shall never have an ideal city until we get ideal citizens.

The happiest women, like the happiest nations, have no history.—George Eliot.

He surely is most in need of another's patience who has none of his own.—Lavater.

Beauty is part of the finished language by which goodness speaks.—George Eliot.

Facts are God's arguments; we should be careful never to misunderstand or pervert them.—Tyron Edwards.

One must not always endure the bad temper of others with unadulterable patience; patience irritates wickedness almost as much as anger, for it humiliates more.—Duchess d'Alrantes.

All's a Sham.

The Lancet is not satisfied with condemning the adulteration of foods, but now attacks women's dress and ruthlessly tells them that their fine feathers are not what they seem. It says that the blankets that keep us warm at night are adulterated, that the silk dress which used to rustle deliciously, a sound that gave name to a famous play because of the goodness of the silk, now "rustles" with thirty per cent. of salts of tin used to sophisticate it, or it does not rustle at all, being no better than a "cotton silk." Epsom salts, instead of being used for medicinal purposes, are employed, it would appear, for loading flannel. The lovely table linen that once "lasted a lifetime" is no longer the linen of yore, but largely made of cotton filled with china clay starch and size, and so on. The Lancet is terribly discouraging. One wishes it hadn't spoken!—Boston Herald.

Father's Forgotten Classics.

John was home from college for the Christmas holidays, and one of the things that struck the impressionable young man was that Dora Mason, the daughter of a near neighbor, had during his absence changed from a tomboyish schoolgirl into a very beautiful young woman. His father had also noticed it.

"Have ye noticed how old Joe Mason's daughter's shot up, John?" he asked his son. "Seem's to me she's getting quite a handsome young critter."

"Father," said John enthusiastically, "she is as beautiful as Hebe!"

"She's a jolly sight purtier than he be!" objected the old man. "Whese's your eyes, boy? Joe's got a face like an old barn door! It's her mother she gets her looks from!"—Answers.

No Sympathy From "George."

My uncle, George Bricham, a native of Buckfield, Me., a lifelong hotel-keeper, his last hotel being the Walker House, on Commercial street, Portland, which he sold to the Boston and Maine Railroad, was quick-witted and a great joker, as was also his wife.

He was a very heavy sleeper. One night his wife was taken sick. She nudged her husband and said:

"George, wake up; I am awful sick."

He only grunted and turned over. After a while she nudged him again, and said: "George, you must wake up, for I am very sick."

"You sick, Matil? What's the matter?"

"George, I can't breathe."

He roused up for a moment, and said: "Well, Matil, I wouldn't try."—Boston Herald.

HORSE ENDS LIFE BY HANGING.

Jealous Lest Another Horse Might Take His Place, Owner Says.

"Yes, it was jealousy that drove my faithful old horse to suicide," said W. W. Farrar of Auburn, Me., yesterday, as he hitched his team in front of the grocery store on Spring street.

The horse had been owned by Mr. Farrar for many years and had grown attached to his master. When a second horse was bought by the grocer, a purchase made necessary by increasing business, the old horse showed signs of uneasiness and extreme dislike for the newcomer.

The old horse ill-treated the other by stealing his hay and grain and annoying him in many ways.

Mr. Farrar went to the stable to harness up the old horse and found him dead, with his head through a hole in the side of the stall and his body resting on the floor.

"Suicide by hanging," says Mr. Farrar.—New York World.

DROPPED KEY OVER TRANSOM.

Laughable Act of Man Suddenly Awakened From Sleep.

Two well known Portland (Me.) men, L. J. Carney and Thomas L. King, roomed together at the Preble house in that city. One evening Mr. Carney retired before Mr. King, and the latter on arriving rather late at the room found the door locked, the key on the inside and his friend snoring loudly.

After repeatedly pounding on the door and awakening the other guests he succeeded in arousing his roommate. Mr. Carney jumped out of bed, and after climbing on a chair, managed after considerable trouble to force open the transom. Then he passed the key out to King, and sleepily said he was awful sorry for locking him out.

But King felt more than satisfied, as he roared at the ridiculous performance of his half-awake roommate.

Popcorn Prize a Diamond.

A handsome diamond was the bargain obtained by somebody who bought a sack of popcorn at Webster's confectionery store, Minneapolis. Webster had an unusually busy evening, and just before the rush began he took his diamond ring from his finger and, placing it in a sack, laid it away on a shelf. He paid no more attention to the jewel until closing time, when he decided to put on the ring again.

He could find no trace of it, and as the sack was gone from the shelf he knew it would be useless to look further. He is convinced that in a moment of forgetfulness he filled the sack with popcorn and handed it to some purchaser.

Unless the lucky customer swallowed the diamond he probably thinks he was the winner in a prize package contest.—New York Herald.

Bird That Shaves.

Man is not the only living creature that shaves. The bonmot, a South American bird, takes a dry shave regularly.

The bonmot has long blue tail feathers. Each quill is adorned from base to tip with soft blue down. This arrangement the bird dislikes. Therefore, with its sharp beak, it nips the quills bare from the base out to about an inch from the tip, where it maintains a neat oval of soft blue whisker.

Such action seems silly on the bonmot's part. To certain philosophers, though, it seems no sillier than man's action in regularly scraping bare his cheeks and chin, while he maintains on his upper lip an oval of soft hair not unlike the bonmot's tail oval.

Black Splotches All Over Face—All Parts Now Clear as Ever—Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black splotches all over my face, a few covering my body, which caused a severe itching irritation, and caused me a great deal of annoyance and suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the local physicians of my town. After the examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin cancer in the worst form. They treated me the same for the length of one year, but the treatment did me no good. My husband purchased a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and after using the first bottle of Cuticura Resolvent in connection with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, the breaking out was stopped. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and that every splotch was entirely gone and the affected parts were left as clear as ever. More Steam Engines Used Now Than Ever Before.

The use of the steam engine is increasing faster to-day than ever before. Many mammoth industrial plants are exclusively engaged in building steam boilers and engines, and it is the boast of one of these, the Atlas Engine Works, of Indianapolis, that it manufactures a complete boiler and engine every ten minutes of fifty horse-power every thirty-seven minutes of the working day.

When the visitor to their plant has gone through two or three of the great warehouses, and emerges upon the boiler yard of twenty acres, he wonders where upon earth use can be found for all the boilers and engines. But if he will watch the shipping process, he will see some ten or twelve trainloads per day go out, labeled for destinations all over the world. Then he will gain some notion of the magnitude of the world's work. Then, when he is told that this one concern, leviathan though the trade though it is, does not produce ten per cent. of the world's output of steam boilers and engines, he will begin to realize how vast is the production and consumption of steam power throughout the world.

The product of this one plant, which builds every type and size of horizontal steam engine, affords an interesting study of mechanical evolution. The balanced slide-valve, the shaft governor, the rotating, or Corliss valve, self-oiling devices, compound cylinders and direct connected shafts are among the more visible improvements. The built-up connecting rod, the removable bearings, improved piston construction, stronger and lighter designs of cranks, more intelligent designing of all the reciprocating parts, better selection of materials and more accurate workmanship throughout are some of the things that differentiate the engine of to-day from that of half a century ago.

The changes in boiler construction have not been so numerous, but they have been quite as marked. In the output of this one concern can be found every size and type of boiler, from the little horizontal tubular of fifteen horse-power, to the new Atlas water tube, which purifies its own water, superheats its own steam and gives the highest efficiency yet accomplished in boiler construction.

The Legislative "Be It Enacted"

By James H. Eckels.

LAWMAKERS no longer rest content in the discharge of the legitimate functions of providing for the keeping of peace and order in the country and the manifold acts pertaining thereto; in making provision for the collection of revenues for government expenses and the disbursing of the same; in sustaining the public credit and in maintaining the nation's dignity at home and abroad. They have reduced these things from that of the fundamental principle of our system to the mere incident of legislative life and entered upon the more hazardous and seemingly more inviting field of enacting a multiplicity of so called business statutes and the creation of innumerable commissions having nothing whatever to do with peace and good order, revenues and expenses, public credit or national prestige. There are statutes which make municipal, state and national government a potential partner in almost every man's business undertaking without having therein a dollar of investment and not infrequently ill-adjusted and wholly incompetent commissions the directing agency.

I am not unmindful that in a period of great excitement and open abuses, where unrest is everywhere manifest, there are more demands for reforms through legislative action than during periods of extreme quiet. I take it that no one will dispute the fact that we are in such a period now. There is undernеath all of this undoubtedly much of justification. But even such justification only makes more essential the exercise of wisdom and prudence and self-control.

Nothing can be gained for good government or more widespread honesty on the part of those who have to do with great undertakings by an indiscriminate denunciation of success wherever found or wealth however acquired. When all success is placed in the attitude of being a crime and all acquirement of wealth denounced as criminal the evil wrought by such a course is worse than that done through criminal acquirement of wealth and criminal abuse of it.

The American people cannot afford to have it believed that here is lacking that fine sense of justice which fails to take account and give reward to success honestly achieved and wealth honestly acquired. It cannot afford to be led by mountebanks, nor yield sway to business or political blackmailing, for when it does, not only will the world of business lose character and caste, but legislative bodies will be a still more prolific source of harm and dishonesty and danger.

ROMANCING

By LEWIS HOPKINS

THERE is an ancient story that ought to be told occasionally—for the benefit of those who strain at a gnat and swallow a camel—of an old lady whose boy ran away to sea, returning after many years' wandering, and who wept over the awful mendacity of the boy when he told her of a monster of the deep, sixty feet long, that wrecked boats and killed men by a blow from its tail; of great sharks that attacked and devoured unwary swimmers and of flying-fish, but who embraced him and forgave him for all these awful lies when he told her of their pulling up a wheel off of one of Pharaoh's chariots on their ship's anchor in the Red Sea. We who write of the incidents that come under our observation, and occasionally embellish them, often have our pure fiction accepted as fact, and our unvarnished truths branded as fiction, and so unwittingly prove that truth is stranger than fiction—to some people.

A kindly disposed friend will occasionally call your attention to the ease with which he separates the wheat of truth from the chaff of fiction, in something you have written, and often will have the former in the fuel heap and the latter in the grain bin, but if you love him, let it go at that and thereby keep your friend. That an incident recounted is out of the ordinary is no argument affecting its truthfulness. If not unusual and strange in some particular, why tell it, with the hope that it will interest or entertain the reader?

Many men eat fish for dinner in the city every day, which fact interests no one saving and excepting the fish dealer. But one prominent, prosperous and well known citizen gets a bone of his fish fast in his throat one day, which chokes him to death, and thereupon the victim of the accident, the bone, the table and the waiter are one and all portrayed upon the front page of the daily papers, with full and detailed accounts of how it happened.

So even so insignificant a thing as a small fish bone can change an incident from trivial to tragic, and many will read and believe though they see not the bone nor be acquainted with the man. We all know many incidents, great and small, that are out of the ordinary and of interest, some of which we allow to remain untold for fear of the doubter. And yet I am sure that most of us, when disseminating hot air products, use due diligence to see that the output is duly branded, while molten, to the eye of the fair and reasonable reader.

I often think of an amusing out of the ordinary incident that came under my observation in Florida last winter. We were at a hotel on the Halifax River where the fishing was good, and one day a very large sheepshead was brought in by a lucky fisherman. When all had seen and admired the fish it was turned over to Bill, the expert fish cleaner, for preparation for the table. This Bill accomplished by removing the scales and slicing off each side, leaving the big head and frame, including back fin and tail, intact.

I watched the two great slices of white flesh laid carefully on a tray to be carried to the kitchen, the frame, with its big head and bright eyes, cast as far out into the water as Bill's strong arm could throw it, and as the diplomats say, considered the incident closed.

The next morning several of us were fishing off a point of rocks near the wharf when a new arrival appeared and began casting out with heavy hand line. The second cast he hooked something, and although it made little resistance, he was novice enough to grow much excited and hauled in hand over hand as though he were landing a record fish. We were all watching, mildly interested, when, with a final jerk, he landed his catch, which proved to be the frame of the big sheepshead above referred to, and which was fairly hooked (by accident I admit) in the mouth.

To say that we were surprised is to mildly express our condition, but the lucky (?) fisherman was a little more than this. He was profoundly astonished, and genuinely frightened. At first it looked as though he would faint, and then as he surveyed the big open mouth, with its double row of white teeth and gruesome skeleton body, he tried to run. We soon explained matters and quieted his fears, but he fished no more that day.

Now, this is an example of the unusual and unexpected happening, but if I told this story, as I positively decline to do, some fellow would write to know if my real name was Munchausen.

Or this incident, told by a native of Florida, a young man of character and standing:

"Accompanied by a negro man I was looking for a cow that had strayed off in the woods when we discovered a lusty rattlesnake. Arming ourselves with sticks of safe length we attacked and quickly dispatched it. The skin of such large snakes having ready sale, I determined to secure this one, expecting my companion to do the skinning, as I had never seen such an operation performed. But there I had another guess coming, for my man positively refused to even assist me.

"'Naw, suh!' he said, 'I wouldn't tech dat reptile, dead nor live, for all de money you could stuff in de hide, big as he is.'

"It was up to me, so pulling off my coat and turning up my shirt sleeves I prepared to wade in. In order to avoid all possibility of accident I persuaded the man to stand on a heavy stick laid across the snake's neck while I cut off the head, which I threw away a safe distance. Then as the body writhed and twisted in the usual manner of a dying snake, I reached in among the coils trying to grasp the tail to cut off the rattles. When I finally got hold of it the snake's body had assumed the position which the rattler invariably takes when about to strike.

"Intent upon securing the rattles unbroken, I was stooping over carefully drawing them from the coil with my left hand and advancing the other in which I held the knife, the negro man a little further away, but leaning forward watching with interest, when suddenly the snake sprang forward, the end of its bloody neck striking me with great force on the bare arm, just below my upturned sleeve, knocking the knife from my hand and causing me—more from fright than force of the blow—to pitch over backward.

"I have had narrow escapes before and since that time, but never before nor since have I suffered anything like the awful horror I felt on that occasion when bitten by a dead snake. I fairly writhed in agony for a few minutes, trying all the time to gain my self-control and realize that I was frightened and not hurt.

"I do not know that I was noisy, but may have been, for my companion was fairly splitting the air with shrieks of terror that would have drowned the braying of a fog horn. He had been close to me, and the sudden and wholly unexpected attack of the dead and headless snake, acting upon his emotional and superstitious temperament, frightened him nearly to death. The first use he made of his recovered breath was to pronounce my doom.

"'You is a goner, suh! You might live a few houahs, an' maybe two or three days, but you is dis as good as dead. Ain' nobody goin' git well when bit by a live snake, let alone a dead one.'

"I didn't skin that snake, nor have I ever tried to skin one since."

But the doubter will git you if you don't watch out.—Forest and Stream.

Shirt Fronts.

There is, however, one article of men's dress, in defense of which there is nothing to be said. What makes men so often late for a dinner party? What leads to the emission of more "words" and provokes more ebullitions of irritability than probably anything else in the world—excluding always a herd of pigs to drive; but we are not all pig drivers. Is it not the starched shirt, with its front and cuffs, hard, like a coat of mail? And yet into its interstices delicate studs and sleeve links have to be introduced before the luckless wight can be considered presentable in society. A woman transforms herself, hair, footgear, everything, decks herself in jewels and in lustrous raiment, and meanwhile her lord and master, man, the one rational being, is struggling, apoplectic, with his shirt front. Ah! what battles have been fought by distracted bachelors! What tortures have been undergone by sensitive woman, when first confronted with the man they love, whom they had fondly deemed incapable of a swear word, but like Laocoon contending against embracing serpents, but contending with a shirt front, into which he has unwarily introduced his head, and which has been sent home buttoned up from the laundry.—London Chronicle.

"Who was Perkin Warbeck?" he was asked.

"Perkin Warbeck was a pretender," replied the prince. "He pretended to be the son of a king, but he wasn't. He was the son of respectable parents."

THE WEATHER.

Sunday's storm did a great deal of damage to the bridges and roads in our county, reports coming in from all quarters of bridges partly and some entirely washed away. We hear that an enterprising young man made some money plying a row boat ferry on Pole creek, where the Smith's Ferry road crosses it. The rainfall for the 24 hours beginning at 10 a. m. Sunday was 6 1-3 inches, about 5 inches of which fell on Sunday night. Our readers will get an idea of this quantity by the following comparison: From January 1st to March 17th the total rainfall was 10.64 inches, so you see we get almost as much in one day as in the previous 2 1-2 months. On Monday night the thermometer registered 30 degrees, and on Tuesday night 24 degrees; freezing point is 32 degrees, so our fruit will have a tussle to hold its own. However, there is an old saying that "March takes care of its own buds," and we must hope for the best.

MASS MEETINGS.

This has been mass meeting week for the citizens of Clanton. First one was on Monday night at 8:30 o'clock, which was called by the mayor, and resulted in nothing, as there were only four persons in attendance. The second one was called for Tuesday night (notice not signed) and was called to order at 7:20 p. m. and adjourned at 7:30 in the meantime having made the nominations for mayor and four councilmen. The new ticket is the same as to the council as the last, but the candidate for mayor is N. A. Kicker this time. Everything worked smoothly, in fact it almost looked as if the whole thing had been prearranged. The chairman of the meeting, W. I. Mullins, announced 19 votes as being in favor of the nominees and none against. There were many in the hall who did not vote, and people kept coming in all the time, there being at 7:35 about 50 persons in the court house, and others were met on their way, who had supposed the meeting time was 8 o'clock. Not a word was said by either proposers or candidates about the conditions existing in our town, or suggesting a remedy.

Revolutionizes Corn.

For a number of years after I began to farm I followed the old-time method of putting the fertilizer all under the corn, planting on a level or higher, six by three feet, pushing the plant from the start and making a big stalk, but the ears were few and frequently small. I planted much corn in the spring and bought much more corn the next spring, until finally I was driven to the conclusion that corn could not be made on uplands in this section, certainly not by the old method, except at a loss.

I did not give up, however, for I knew that the farmer who did not make his own corn never had succeeded, and never would, so I began to experiment. First, I planted lower, and the yield was better, but the stalk was still too large, so I discontinued altogether the application of fertilizer before planting, and, knowing that all crops should be fertilized at some time, I used mixed fertilizer as a side application and applied the more soluble nitrate of soda later, being guided in this by the excellent results obtained from its use as a top dressing for oats. Still the yield, though regular, was not large, and the smallness of the stalk itself now suggested that they should be planted thicker in the drill. This was done the next year with results so satisfactory that I continued from year to year to increase the number of stalks and the fertilizer with which to sustain them, also to apply nitrate of soda, at last plowing, and to lay by early, sowing peas broadcast. This method steadily increased the yield, until year before last (1904) with corn eleven inches apart in six-foot rows and $11 worth of fertilizer to the acre, I made eighty-four bushels average to the acre, several of my best acres making as much as 125 bushels.

Last year (1905) I followed the same method, planting the first week in April seventy acres which had produced the year before 1,000 pounds of seed cotton per acre. This land is sandy upland, somewhat rolling. Seasons were very unfavorable, owing to the tremendous rains in May and the dry and extremely hot weather later. From June 12 to July 12, the time when it most needed moisture, there was only five-eighths of an inch of rainfall here; yet with $7.01, cost of fertilizer, my yield was fifty-two bushels per acre. Rows were six feet and corn sixteen inches in drill.

With this method, on land that will ordinarily produce 1,000 pounds of seed cotton with 800 pounds of fertilizer, fifty bushels of corn per acre should be made by using 200 pounds of cotton seed meal, 200 pounds of acid phosphate and 400 pounds of kainit mixed, or their equivalent in other fertilizer, and 125 pounds of nitrate of soda, all to be used as side application as directed below.

On land that will make a bale and one-half of cotton per acre when well fertilized, 100 bushels of corn should be produced by doubling the amount of fertilizer above, except that 300 pounds of nitrate of soda should be used.

In each case there should be left on the land in cornstalks, peas, vines and roots from $12 to $16 worth of fertilizing material per acre, beside the great benefit to the land from so large an amount of vegetable matter. The place of this in the permanent improvement of land can never be taken by commercial fertilizer, for it is absolutely impossible to make lands rich as long as they are lacking in vegetable matter.

Land should be thoroughly and deeply broken for corn, and this is the time in a system of rotation to deepen the soil. Cotton requires a more compact soil than corn, and while a deep soil is essential to its best development, it will not produce as well on loose open land, while corn does best on land thoroughly broken. A deep soil will not only produce more heavily than a shallow soil with good seasons, but it will stand more wet as well as more dry weather.

In preparing for the corn crop land should be broken broadcast during the winter one-fourth deeper than it has been plowed before, or if much vegetable matter is being turned under, it may be broken one-third deeper. This is as much deepening as land will usually stand in one year and produce well, though it may be continued each year, so long as much dead vegetable matter is being turned under. It may, however, be sub-soiled to any depth by following in bottom of turn plow furrow, provided no more of the subsoil than has been directed is turned up. Break with two horse plow, if possible, or better, with disc plow. With the latter cotton stalks or corn stalks as large as we ever make can be turned under without having been chopped, and in peavines it will not choke or drag.

Never plow land when it is wet if you expect ever to have any use for it again.

Bed with turn plow in six-foot rows, leaving five-inch balk. When ready to plant, break this out with scooter, following in bottom of this furrow deep with Dixie plow, wing taken off. Ridge then on this furrow with same plow, still going deep. Run corn planter on this ridge, dropping one grain every five or six inches. Plant early, as soon as frost danger is past, say first seasonable spell after March 15 in this section. Especially is early planting necessary on very rich lands, where stalks cannot otherwise be prevented from growing too large. Give first wroking with harrow or any plow that will not cover the plant. For second working use ten or twelve-inch sweep on both sides of corn, which should now be about eight inches high. Thin after this working. It is not necessary that the plants should be left all the same distance apart, if the right number remain to each yard of row.

Corn should not be worked again until the growth has been so retarded and the stalk so hardened that it will never grow too large. This is the MOST DIFFICULT POINT in the whole process. Experience and judgment are required to know just how much the stalk should be stunted, and PLENTY OF NERVE is required to hold back your corn when your neighbors, who fertilized at planting time and cultivated rapidly, have corn twice the size of yours. (They are having their fun now. Yours will come at harvest time.) The richer the land the more necessary it is that the stunting process should be thoroughly done.

When you are convinced that your corn has been sufficiently humiliated, you may begin to make the ear. It should now be from twelve to eighteen inches high, and look worse than you ever had any corn to look before.

Put half your mixed fertilizer (this being the first used at all) in the old sweep furrow on both sides of every other middle, and cover by breaking out this middle with turn plow. About one week later treat the other middle the same way. Within a few days side corn in first middle with sixteen-inch sweep. Put all your nitrate of soda in this furrow, if less than 150 pounds. If more, use one-half of it now. Cover with one furrow of turn plow, then sow peas in this middle broadcast at the rate of at least one bushel to the acre and finish breaking out.

In a few days side corn in other middle with same sweep, put balance of nitrate of soda in this furrow if it has been divided, cover with turn plow, sow peas, and break out. This lays by your crop with a good bed and plenty of dirt around your stalk. This should be from June 10 to 20 unless season is very late, and corn should be hardly bunching for tassel.

Lay by early. More corn is ruined by late plowing than by lack of plowing. This is when the ear is hurt. Two good rains after laying by should make you a good crop of corn, and it will certainly make with much less rain if pushed and fertilized in the old way.

The stalks thus raised are very small and do not require anything like the moisture, even in proportion to size, that is necessary for large sappy stalks. They may, therefore, be left much thicker in the row. This is no new process. It has long been a custom to cut back vines and trees in order to increase the yield and quality of fruit, and so long as you do not HOLD back your corn it will go, like mine so long went, to all stalk.

Do not be discouraged by the looks of your corn during the process of cultivation. It will yield out of all proportion to its appearance. Large stalks cannot make large yields, except with extremely favorable seasons, for they cannot stand a lack of moisture. Early applications of manure go to make large stalks, which you do not want, and the plant food is all thus used up before the ear, which you do want, is made. Tall stalks not only will not produce well themselves, but will not allow you to make the pea vines, so necessary to the improvement of land. Corn raised by this method should never grow over seven and a half feet high and the ear should be near to the ground.

1,500 pounds seed cotton and stalks will require	64	17	56
Fifty bushels corn, cobs, shucks and stalks will require	70	25	37

I consider the final application of nitrate of soda an essential point in this ear making process. It should always be applied at last plowing and unmixed with other fertilizers.

I as satisfied with one ear to the stalk, unless a prolific variety is planted, and leave 100 stalks for every bushel that I exxpect to make. I find the six-foot row easiest to cultivate without injuring the corn. For fifty bushels to the acre, I leave sixteen inches apart; for seventy-five bushels to the acre, twelve inches apart, and for 10 bushels eight inches apart. Corn should be planted from four to six inches below the level, and laid by from four to six inches above. No hoeing should be necessary, and middles may be kept clean until time to break out by using harrow or by running one shovel furrow in center of middle and bedding on that, with one or more rounds of turn plow.

I would advise only a few acres tried by this method the first year, or until you are familiar with its application. Especially is it hard at first to fully carry out the stunting process where a whole crop is involved, and this is the absolutely essential part of the process.

This method I have applied or seen applied successfully to all kinds of land in this section except river lands and moist bottoms, and I am confident it can be made of great benefit throughout the entire South.

In the Middle West, where corn is so prolific and profitable, and where, unforunately for us, so much of ours has been produced, the stalk does not naturally grow large. As we come South its size increases, at the expense of the ear, until in Cuba and Mexico it is nearly all stalk (witness Mexican varieties).

The purpose of this method is to eliminate this tendency of corn to overgrow at the expense of yield in this Southern climate.

By this method I have made my corn crop more profitable than my cotton crop, and my neighbors and friends who have adopted it have, without exception, derived great benefit therefrom.

Plant your own seed. I would not advise a change of seed and method the same year, as you will not then know from which you have derived the benefit. I have used three varieties, and all have done well. I have never used this method for late planting corn, unless it be necessary for cold lowlands.

The increased cost of labor and the high price of all material and land are rapidly making farming unprofitable except to those who are getting from one acre what they formerly got from two. We must make our lands richer by plowing deep, planting peas and other legumes, manuring them with acid phosphate and potash, which are relatively cheap, and returning to the soil the resultant vegetable matter rich in humus and expensive nitrogen. The needs of our soil are such that the South can never reap the full measure of prosperity that should be hers until this is done.

I give this method as a farmer to the farmers of the South, trusting that thereby they may be benefited as I have been.—E. McIver Williamson in Hartsville County (S. C.) Messenger.

Jemison, Ala., March 19, '06.

Editor Union:

Enclosed please find $4.00. Please reproduce enclosed article on corn culture. I secured some help and pay the remainder myself. I want every farmer in Chilton county to try one acre in corn on this plan. I have made arrangements with G. T. McElderry to get the nitrate of soda; the rest can be had at the Clanton factory. Yours for more CORN and MEAT at HOME. Try this plan, boys, it will do us good.

W. H. CONWAY.

The above letter speaks for itself. Bro. Conway showed us the article, and suggested that it would be a good thing to reproduce in THE UNION, which was perfectly true, but, as we told him, we had seen the article in the RURAL SOUTH of February 24th and should have copied it then but for the item of expense. Good printing does cost money, though many of our people act like they thought it did not. We suggested to Bro. Conway that it would be a good idea for the COUNTY UNION to have a "Press Committee for the Good of the Order," same as the Alliance had in Dale and other counties in former years, and if this committee would select such articles as could be utili3ed by our farmers, that THE UNION would donate the space providing the County Union would pay the bare cost of setting up the type. A nickel apiece from members of the Farmers' Union in Chilton county would pay for an amount of printing that, put entirely on our shoulders, in addition to the load we are already carrying, would bankrupt us. "Co-operation," brethren, meansh something to be done by you, not that the other fellow must do it all. EDITOR UNION.

TO LOAN ON GOOD SECURITY, $250.00. CALL ON OR ADDRESS THE UNION. tf

J. H. Gillespie and J. M. Grant were pleasant visitors Thursday.

Prof. E. J. Calloway was a visiter at Colonel A. C. Smith's home last week.

Prof. A. L. Grant is here on a visit to his father, J. J. Grant. The professor has just dismissed his school at Rehoboth in Bibb county, where he has taught for three sessions with great satisfaction to the people, judging from the testimonials they gave him.

R. F. Littleton was a pleasant visitor Thursday.

Lee T. Vickers and J. R. Collins were in Clanton Friday.

E. B. Popwell was a welcome caller Friday.

Prof. Albert Smith was in town Friday.

J. W., J. C. and W. G. Deshazo were in Clanton Friday.

Fonda Hathcock was in town Friday.

R. J. Downs was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

G. W. Edwards was in Clanton Saturday.

Attorney D. K. Middleton and family, of Birmingham, came down Saturday night on a visit to his father, Capt. W. A. Middleton.

James J. A. Box was a welcome caller Friday. Mr. Box represents the Anniston marble works, manufacturers of tombstones, fences, etc., and is prepared to give all orders prompt attention.

F. E. Hannibal was in Clanton Saturday, accompanied by his brother-in-law, F. Nordgren, from Chicago, who is much pleased with the beautiful climate here, and wants to settle down in Chilton.

Clerk Sam W. Collins has bought one of the prettiest animals in the car load of horses brought here by W. A Reynolds last Sunday and also has ordered a new buggy. Looks like he is making preparations to shake the railroad car.

Elder John E. Dykes will preach at Jackson's chapel 1 mile east of Lomax this coming Saturday and Sunday. All invited.

W. R. Taylor was a pleasant visitor Tuesday.

J. M. Maddox was in Clanton Tuesday.

Charlie Reynolds was a visitor at his brother's (Judge Reynolds) Sunday.

W. A. Reynolds "talks horse" every day in Clanton this week, going home to Jemison at night to recuperate.

A. E. Teel was in Clanton Tuesday.

Doctors Downs and Rollins have returned from college and are at home for the next few months.

MIMS' SAW MILL, BEAT 9.

Health of this community is good. J. M. Parker happened to bad luck Sunday morning. One of his fine oxen died. Sunday was a bad rainy day, but some young folks took buggy rides just the same. Misses Mamie Mims and Cora Jordan visited Miss Lula Sorrell Sunday. M. H. Parker and friend visited I. N. Gentry Thursday. The boys that got hurt at Gentry's mill some time back are getting on fine. J. H. Parker spent Thursday with Tate Robinson, of Clanton, and reports a fine time. Miss Naomi Williams is visiting W. D. Z. Foshee's family this week. Martin Sorrell was certainly rushing Saturday last. Mrs. Mitchell will preach at Bethany Sunday. All come out. She is a fine speaker. Best wishes to THE UNION and its many readers.

SAW MILL HAND.

HAPPY HOME.

Mr. Editor:

I wish to thank you for the space you gave me in your good union paper. Health in this neighborhood is good. Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Bussey went to New Salem the second Sunday and reported a nice time. Miss Sallie Knight, of Jackson's chapel, is on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Beatrice Wilson. M. H. Bussey killed a hawk the other day, the largest one killed around here in several years. Miss Eula Sears spent the past week with her sister, Mrs. P. M. Moore. There was a lot of our people disappointed Thursday about the show that did NOT come to Clanton. Uncle Joe Sears says: "The next time I go to see a show, there surely will be one." J. O. Wesson's smiles have turned to cigars when he is in town. Mrs. Harv. Bussey spent Saturday with Mrs. Beatrice Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Maddox visited her father (J. W. Sears) Saturday night. M. H. Bussey and B. M. Maddox, with their wives, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Moore. Elsie Kelley went to see his best girl Sunday.

NOBODY'S DARLING.

MT. PLEASANT CHURCH.

Editor Union:

We notice with pleasure the improvements along R. F. D. No. 4 in Stump-hills. 'Squire S. L. Ariedge has laid the foundations of a new smoke house, and on up the line at A. R. Wilson's a new dwelling has been built. Jess Burnett has some improvements at his place. There are several new mail boxes along the line, and we hope that if THE UNION don't already make its weekly visit that the editor will receive subscriptions from each and every box. Brothers, support the UNION, the paper that stands for the right. We think Mail Carrier Caddell knows the route very well by this time, but "they"do say he got lost the first trip out. Our S. S. is progressing nicely with a good attendance, but we hope for still better results. Bro. Archie Glasscock has left an appointment for an all-day singing on the first Sunday in April. Bro. Vandiver filled his regular appointment Saturday and Sunday last. We notice some of our young folks smiling at each other. Look out, L. H. R, something for you to do, so be ready. Well, our new school house is beginning to look "housey" sure enough. We'd like to see a two-story building started at Union Grove, for we do like to see our county get up and hustle. Success to THE UNION and its readers.

STUMP-HILL.

JEMISON.

Editor Union:

Will you give me space to say a few words relative to the S. C. A. in this county. I see that the president has called a meeting for April 7, 1906. Let's every one who can possibly leave home on that day come to Clanton with something good to tell about how he is diversifying, whether it pays or not, also to discuss the reduction in acreage in cotton, the increase in acreage of food stuff. Now is the time to talk peas, potatoes and pigs. Hoping to see a large crowd of all classes in Clanton on that day with many good wishes for you and THE UNION and its many readers, I am yours to serve command me.

J. W. SORRELL.

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

The farmers of this part are getting ready to plant corn. J. N. Scott has been to Randolph and brought back a mule. W. H. Maddox dined with A. J. Scott Sunday. Our Sunbeam Society is getting along well and our S. S. is progressing nicely under Supt. J. M. Gothard. Messrs. C. L. Langston, J. M. Foshee, J. D. Terry and W. R. Cofer attended the county union at Cedar Grove Wednesday and Thursday. Best wishes to THE UNION and its many readers.

After Many Years

Can I forget it? 'Twas on such a night,
As this, I think—just as the waning light
Was deepening to darkness—but your eyes
Made all the light we needed for good-byes.
No stars I ever knew shone half so bright!

And so we parted. And the years took flight
Between us—ah, how many snows are white
Since then! Yet, never till my last day dies
Can I forget it!

And now we meet again! Say, you're a sight!
I never saw a lady who was quite
So altered, in appearance, shape and size,
I said I'd love you always—but get wise—
I can't keep promise with such a fright,
Can I? Forget it!
—Cleveland Leader.

The SECOND Mrs VANDERVELT

BY ALBERT H. LAIDLAW

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Mrs. Vandervelt will be down in a few moments, sir," the servant said, as she ushered the visitor into the drawing room.

Vandervelt gazed about the room and his eyes rested on a photograph lying on the table. It was the portrait of his divorced wife—the woman who "would be down in a few moments."

"A picture of her," he muttered, with a wistful, but hopeless look in his eyes. He still loved her—yes, loved her more than ever before—but he knew now that this folly had built a barrier between them that could never be torn asunder.

"A picture of her—just as she looked when I last saw her; at least, just as she would have looked had she been happy. How she must hate me now. God knows, I deserve the hate."

Cursing himself for being a fool, Vandervelt continued his soliloquy. What folly and what cruelty had been his desertion of her—his devoted wife! And his boy—did Francis know what a cowardly beast his father had been? And the divorce they had agreed to—yes, that had been still further folly. He had been blind—his infatuation for the other woman had been as sand in his eyes. He had been unable to see until the sand was removed and then it was too late.

"But heaven knows, I've suffered as greatly as she," was the consolation he tried to give himself, but it was poor consolation, for he realized that she had not deserved the suffering.

As he continued the mental battle against his feelings which he could not control, the man who had once been strong and brave and reckless dropped into an armchair beside the table and buried his face in his hands. Mrs. Vandervelt entered and looked upon the picture of despair. She stepped lightly, and so deeply engrossed was he in his bitter thoughts that Vandervelt did not hear her as she approached.

"Allen," she said, softly, her voice quivering, as she put her hand on his head and stroked his hair.

Vandervelt started violently. He was frightened, so suddenly was he awakened from his meditation, and bounded from the chair as he would have leaped from a railway track to escape death beneath the wheels of approaching train. He turned about and looked at her and saw the tremble of her lips as she tried to speak. Then the gaze from his eyes fell to the carpet on the floor.

"Allen," she finally said again in a voice tremulous with emotion, "you—you—come back to—to—"

"Ask your forgiveness," he supplied.

"——to stay?" she finished.

"To ask your forgiveness," he repeated, unable to raise his eyes and meet her gaze.

Again her lips quivered in an effort to speak, but she could not. She tottered a little as though she were dizzy and might fall, and her hand swept nervously across her face as if she were brushing away cobwebs. He took a step forward, looked up at her and burst forth passionately:

The portrait of his divorced wife.

"Margaret, I want you to listen to my confession. God, how wrong I've been. I—"

She put up her hand and shook her head and he stopped.

"Don't," she said. "Please don't tell me. Let me spare you that—and myself. I could not listen to any confession. I forgive you without the confession."

"But you don't know—" he went on, but stopped again as she made another gesture, and his gaze dropped once more to the carpet.

"I don't want to know." Her voice was approaching steadiness, but it remained gentle. "I know you did not love—that other woman. You did not love her—did you, Allen?" The words were spoken with appealing eagerness.

Vandervelt replied brokenly and remorsefully:

"No. I did not love her. It was merely infatuation—a false infatuation. I never loved any woman but you."

"I knew it. I knew it," she continued. "I knew you would come back—and every thing would be all right.

Broke away from her.

We can begin over again and we can be so happy, for I love you so—I love you so—"

A light of happiness had sprung into her eyes as she spoke, and she rushed toward him and put her arms about his neck.

"Allen, I forgive you," and she kissed him. He could not respond and he could not resist. He was powerless and stood motionless, almost limp, with eyes cast toward the floor.

His attitude produced a frightened light in her eyes, and she drew away from him as she released him.

"Oh, I had forgotten the divorce," she said, "I had forgotten the divorce. We are not husband and wife. What folly that divorce was."

Then the look of fright disappeared and she almost laughed as she continued:

"But after all, that need not be a barrier, Allen. We can be lovers again, and you can ask me to marry you as you did that beautiful afternoon in the rose garden—at father's and mother's—that sweet, beautiful afternoon. And I can say 'Yes,' and then—and then— Oh, Allen, we can bury the past. Can't we, Allen, dear?" She had put her arms about his neck again and spoke with passionate appeal.

Vandervelt broke away from her and broke into a sob as he bitterly exclaimed, pacing the floor:

"Why did I ever come back. I have returned only to torture you. I might have known—you could not know."

"What do you mean?" The look of fright again appeared in her eyes and again she brushed her hand across her face. "Can't everything be all right again?"

"It can never be," he continued bitterly. "It can never be. I am a married man. Oh, why did I ever do it?"

She gave a startled cry and tottered as both hands went to her head. She would have fallen had he not caught her and assisted her to the arm chair.

"Then—you—married—her?" Her lips quivered violently. "She—is—your—wife and is—living?"

"Yes."

"And you—didn't—come—back to—stay?"

"No. I came for your forgiveness. I had to have it. I couldn't live any longer without it—and I thought I might get to see the boy."

"You—you have—my forgiveness—now leave me—please."

Vandervelt left the house silently, filled with the mental anguish and remorse he had hoped would be partly obliterated by her forgiveness. How he wished that she had hated him. He felt that he was worse than a murderer. He did not return to the second Mrs. Vandervelt. He hated her now more than ever before. The strain upon his mind was too great. He could not live under it.

* * * * *

As the door closed upon the man she would never see again, the first Mrs. Vandervelt buried her face in her arms on the table beside the chair and sobbed quietly. Suddenly she was startled by a tapping at the door and then a child's voice called out:

"Mamma. Oh, mamma. Are you there?" Then the door was opened and the little boy rushed into the room, laying a bunch of roses in the lap of his mother, as she lifted her head and tried to dry her eyes.

"Why, what's the matter, mamma? Does your head ache?" exclaimed the child. "I've been looking everywhere for you. Aren't the flowers Mrs. Sanderson gave me nice?"

"Francis, my darling! My love!" exclaimed the mother passionately, clasping the child in her arms and kissing him again and again. "Thank God, I have you to live for, anyway. My little boy."

CLEVER FORGERIES OF STAMPS.

Notable Cases in Which Dealers Have Been Victimized.

A tiny "t" cost a stamp forger a pretty income not long ago. One of the rare stamps is the pink nine kreuzer stamp of Wurtemberg, which is worth about $100 to collectors. A Paris dealer picked up seventeen of these stamps at $40 each and congratulated himself upon his cleverness in obtaining them so cheaply.

Not long after a collector who was approached by an English dealer who had also had the good fortune to pick up a number of these stamps at a low price discovered what the dealers had overlooked. In the forgery the name was spelt with one "t," as is the practice in England, in place of the German double, and then it came out that several hundred of these pink "finds" had been planted all over Europe. The forger took advantage of the fact that no dealer would admit having a number of the rarities for fear that the market would fall, and had placed a number with each dealer without exciting suspicion.

Perhaps the most notable forgery was the "Sedang" issue. Sedang is an island off the China coast. The papers announced the arrival in Paris of King Marie I. of Sedang, and he duly appeared in the person of a former French military man. Soon thereafter sets of seven "Sedang" stamps were placed upon the market, some of them selling for as high as $200 a set. Then it was discovered that the whole affair was a hoax and the forgers had fled.

Beyond the Hills.

All the world is still before you, little boy,
You are in the fair, green valley where the sun
Lights the smooth and pleasant paths down which you run;
Out beyond the hills you dimly see is care,
Far beyond those heights are burdens you must bear,
But beyond those uplands also there is joy,
Little boy.

There are heartaches that await you, little boy,
And those roads that in the distance wind away
Lead to labor and contention and dismay;
Stones are waiting there to bruise your weary feet,
Foes are ambushed there whom you will have to meet,
But upon those hard roads also there is joy,
Little boy.

You are innocent and care free, little boy,
And out yonder there is knowledge you must gain
At the price of many efforts and much pain;
You must toil and you must suffer ere you learn,
You may never from beyond those hills return,
But be glad, for yonder love lies, too, and joy,
Little boy.

Sleeping Place for Cats.

For cats as well as dogs, the neatest sleeping place is a strong, closely-woven wicker basket. Favorite pets have a basket with a curving canopy top, decked out with a big satin bow and carpeted with a rug of white goat's hair. Simpler baskets are round and flat and show a deep opening at one side. A soft blanket should always be laid in the bottom of these and made fresh and clean at least once a week, says the Philadelphia Record.

A pet cat is so very tidy about her own appearance that she requires less attention than a canary or a dog. As a kitten, a dish of milk should be placed where she can always take a drink. An older cat always likes a bowl of milk kept filled for her in the kitchen, while the scraps from the table comprise the remainder of her nourishment. Scarcely any meat should be given in a cat's diet during winter.

No Sunday Paper That Night.

Mr. Capen, an old resident of a seaport town of Massachusetts, is employed as driver of the coach which conveys travelers from the train to the hotel.

One Saturday evening a short time ago three men arrived on the afternoon train from Boston. Mr. Capen was sitting on the driver's seat, waiting to take them to their destination. They looked about the station and evidently were not favorably impressed with the surroundings, for one was heard to say:

"What a desolate country! We certainly have come to the jumping-off place. I don't believe we can even get a Sunday paper in this place, can we, driver?"

There was silence for a moment, and then Mr. Capen drawled out: "Wal, not to-night."

The Colonel's Applejack.

A colonel in Gen. Pickett's division sometimes took more applejack than was good for him. Passing him one evening, leaning against a tree, smoking his pipe, the general said:

"Good evening, Colonel. Come over to my tent for a moment, please."

"S-s-cuse me, G-g-gen'ral 's-cuse me," replied the Colonel. "But's all I can do to stay where I am."—The Sunday Magazine.

SPOILED LAWYER'S FINE PLEA.

Col. Benton Overreached in Eagerness to Make Point.

During the first hearing of the famous Crocker will case in the supreme court, before Judge Lathrop and a jury, there were many interesting and amusing tilts between the eminent counsel engaged in the case—Robert M. Morse for the contestants of the will, and Col. Joseph H. Benton, Jr., for the executors.

Perhaps at no time during the hearing, however, was there any better exhibition of wit than in the summing up of counsel before the jury. At one point Col. Benton was trying to impress upon the jury that the expression "old fool," alleged to have been used by one of the interested parties, might reasonably be construed as a term of endearment.

"For example," explained Col. Benton, "King Lear called his fond daughter, 'my dear pretty fool.'"

Here he waited a moment to let the point sink into the minds of the jury. Judge Lathrop, however, who had been listening with intense interest, leaned forward in his chair and dryly remarked:

"But, Mr. Benton, King Lear was crazy, wasn't he?"

"Well, your honor, that's a mooted question," was all that the confused attorney could reply, and even this was almost smothered by the mirthful outburst in the court room, in which the opposing counsel, Mr. Morse, joined most heartily.

Force of Habit.

George W. Wallace, president of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company, and one of the best known residents of Salt Lake, tells this as his latest telephone story:

In a certain Western central office one hello girl was always late in arriving in the morning. Time and time again the manager pleaded with her to be more prompt. Her tardiness continued until he was moved to desperate methods.

"Now, Miss B——," he said one morning as he came to her exchange with a package in his hands, "I have a little scheme which I hope will enable you to arrive at the office on time. Here is a fine alarm clock for you. Promise me that you will use it."

The young woman promised and accordingly set the alarm clock for the proper hour when she retired that night. At 7 o'clock the next morning there was a tremendous whirring from the alarm clock. The sleepy hello girl rolled over in bed and said sweetly:

"'Line busy, call again.'"

Willie Wanted His "Dad."

When Willie Simmonds of McIndoes, Vt., was about 18, his folks moved to Boston, leaving Willie in McIndoes. After a while Willie decided to join them, so started out alone for the big city.

He had never been in the city before, and thought every one should know every one else, as in the town where he came from. Arriving in Boston, he was rather surprised at the greatness of everything and at the number of people on the streets.

After looking around for a while, and not seeing any one that he knew, he finally saw a man in uniform whom he thought must be a very important person, and would certainly know his father. So he walked up to the surprised officer and asked: "Say, mister, have you see anything of dad around here?"—Boston Herald.

Not a Fair Division.

"If a house contains six bureaus, eleven armoires, seven chiffoniers and fifty-three miscellaneous drawers, how many of 'em is the husband entitled to, and how many is the wife?" asked the young clubman.

The second clubman laughed harshly.

"You are young and have much to learn," he said. "You may as well understand first as last that if there were in your house a mile of bureaus, three acres of armoires and 17,000 drawers, all these would be stuffed full of veils, ruching, hatpins, ribbons, silk stockings, petticoats, powder puffs and safety pins, and the best course for you to pursue would be to wrap your own things—your shirts, underclothes, and so on—in a newspaper and keep them under the bed."

When Snow on the Sun-Dial Falls.

When snow on the sun-dial falls,
And the clinging leaves are numb,
And bitter the marsh wind calls
To river and songbird dumb;
When the sheep draw close in the fold,
And the biting mistrals blow,
Then the heart, as a rosary told,
Finds its love of the long ago.

I make no count of the hour
While the sun-dial stands in the snow;
But the mind holds its hardy flower
Where the arbor-vitaes grew.
The waves no more return,
Where the icebound currents flow;
Still afresh does the hearth-brand burn
With the wood of some long ago.

As a carrier-dove through the skies
Seeks the path which her message knew,
So my heart, beloved, tries
Its homing flight toward you!
When snow on the sun-dial lies,
And the heart and the year seem cold,
As the carrier-pigeon flies
I return to the love of old!

Birthday in Doubt.

Tom Pezzi, the genial old fish market man of Green Harbor, and his famous sign on the roof of his market, "Tom Pezzi Forever," are well known to the thousands of visitors to that summer resort, and also to many of the Brant Rock people, as are also his funny sayings.

One day one of his customers asked him how old he was. Removing the clay pipe he habitually uses from his mouth, he thought for a moment, and then said: "Well, I was born in 1702 or 1802, and I'll be d—d if I know which."—Boston Herald.

GAMBLER GAVE BACK FORTUNE

There is a well authenticated story of Scrope Davis, a London dandy of a hundred years ago, an inveterate gambler, but also a man of talent, a gentleman and a wit. One night he was introduced to a young man named Hastings, who had inherited a colossal fortune, much of which he had already gambled away. They commenced to play hazard, Hastings remarking at the same time that he must soon cut out that sort of fun, as he was about to marry and settle down.

Scrope was in great luck. Main after main he won, and as often wished to cease play, but Hastings, who continued to pour glass after glass of champagne down his parched throat, was pallid with excitement, and insisted upon a chance to retrieve his fortune. The excitement became general. Other players left their own tables to crowd around the duellists. Time after time Hastings threw crabs, while Davis followed with the nick.

The rattle of the dice and the ceaseless flow of wines went on all night and far into the next day. Hastings was mad with excitement. Every pound and every security he possessed or could think of he pledged and lost. At last, like the gamester who staked his wife upon a cast of the dice and lost, he would have risked the life of the girl to whom he was engaged, the other would have accepted some kind of security. But he would not. Then Hastings hurled dice and box across the saloon, smashing a valuable mirror, and, throwing himself exhausted upon a soft chair, burst into tears, exclaiming, "I can play no more. I have lost everything in the world. I am a beggar!"

Davis stood still, calm, unmoved, watching him. Then he said: "Mr. Hastings, listen to me. I will stake everything I have won to-night on one condition and that is, that you shall take a solemn oath never to touch cards or dice again." The young gambler fell on his knees to thank his benefactor and to take the oath. The latter immediately restored everything he had won, and, oddly enough, Hastings kept his vow and became wealthy and prosperous man.

But the medal has a sordid reverse. When in after years Scrope Davis was reduced to great poverty, ventured to ask him for some slight assistance, the hound wrote him a curt, formal reply, in the third person, regretting that Mr. Hastings was unable to assist Mr. Scrope Davis any assistance.

WEALTHY MEN OF TO-DAY

It is admitted that we are the richest people in the world to-day—the richest people the world has ever seen, says Cleveland Moffatt in Success. The vaunted wealth of Croesus is estimated at only $8,000,000, but there are seventy American estates that average $35,000,000 each. As showing the rapid growth of individual fortunes in this country there is interest in a list of rich men, printed in 1855, according to which New York city at that time boasted only twenty-eight millionaires. And a pamphlet published some years earlier says that in 1845 Philadelphia could show only ten estates valued at $1,000,000 or more, the richest being that of Stephen Girard, which reached $7,000,000. In contrast to which in 1892 there were over 200 millionaires in Philadelphia.

As to New York city, the number of its millionaires, according to best information, is over 2,000, while the number of millionaires in the United States is at least 5,000, or half the total number in the world. There is one family alone, at the head of which stands the richest and most powerful man in the world, John D. Rockefeller, and the wealth of this family is estimated at $1,000,000,000, a sum so great that the human mind quite fails to grasp it, a sum so huge that if the birth of Christ Rockefeller had been making a dollar a minute and taking all these dollars accumulate day and night for all these centuries, he would not yet, 1906, have amassed $1,000,000. And if Rockefeller were to-day turn his wealth into gold and take it out of the country into Canada, he would carry across the border three times as much gold as would then remain in the United States. Nor would he carry it himself, for the weight of it would be 1,750 tons. And if he loaded it on the backs of porters, each man bearing his own weight in solid gold (150 pounds), it would require 23,000 men to move it. And if they walked with feet apart the line of them would reach forty-four miles and would occupy fifteen hours in passing a given point. None of which takes any account of the daily interest on the fortune, which interest, if paid in gold, would require the strength of 1,000 men to carry it, for it would weigh 1,000 pounds. Such are the riches of a single family.

TO PRESERVE THE DEAD

"Auto-preservation" is the name which Signor Vercelloni, an Italian doctor, has given to a discovery that preserves the human body without the use of ordinary methods of embalming.

"There is no necessity to touch the body at all, much less to dissect it," explains the doctor. "The old method, which is a very expensive one, is entirely done away with. No unctions or wrappings are used.

"The body is simply placed in a zinc coffin, which is laid inside an ordinary wooden coffin, and between the two a patent powder mixture is sprinkled, which preserves every feature of the body, and especially of the face, exactly as it was at death. Viewed through a glass lid, there is nothing revolting in its appearance, the person appearing as though in being simply in a peaceful sleep.

Signor Vercelloni is of the opinion that the discovery will do away with the religious feeling against cremation, and may be valuable from the point of view of identification in criminal cases, and also in scientific research.

"In cases of family disputes," says the doctor, "think of the enormous advantage it would be to be able to gaze through the crystal lid and see the body fully preserved. There are a big case, involving millions of money, in the law courts now which the discovery would have decided without the dispute being dragged before the public. Then consider the historical advantage in having the remains of eminent personages exposed to public veneration." — Manchester (Eng.) Chronicle.

LAZINESS LEADS TO LUNACY

"Laziness is a great contributory cause of lunacy," says a British specialist in mental diseases. "The only way to preserve a healthy mind is to lead a busy life. But modern conditions, the compulsory retirement from professional occupations of men who have reached the age of, say, 55, condemn them to spend the rest of their existence in idleness. They become introspective and brood. They feel themselves 'side-tracked' from the main line of life, and almost unconsciously a state of rebellion is set up. From lack of mental exertion the brain loses the nutrition it has been accustomed to over a long period of years. Other conditions are set up which cumulate in mental degeneration.

"Young men who inherit fortunes and devote their time to sport fall them fall ready victims to this undermining of the brain. Tragedies of this kind are constantly occurring among women and girls who belong to the leisured class are saved from a similar fate by their devotion to dress and bridge. The zealous pursuit of these pastimes requires at least some measure of mental exercise. Perhaps golf is the best that can be said of it.

"It is dangerous for a man who has led a busy life to abandon business at once. Medical science has prolonged the span of human existence, but yet retirement is now forced upon men at a much earlier age than heretofore. The only hope for these people is to cultivate some engrossing hobby."

QUICK TRIP FOR NAILS

This story was told by Mr. Baker, of chocolate fame: Some years ago, in Milton, he had a man in his employ by the name of Tim Reardon, who was considered a handy man with tools. As Mr. Baker was walking through his yard one day he noticed that the shingles on the gable end of one of his buildings had blown away. Seeing Tim, he called him, and asked him if he could replace the shingles.

"Of course I can," said Tim. And he immediately erected a temporary staging to work on, some thirty feet high.

He got his hatchet and shingles and went up on the staging. He had been up but a short time, however, when he tripped and fell to the ground, which, luckily, was soft, and he had no bones broken, but was stunned.

While he was lying there, some one informed Mr. Baker of the accident, and he went immediately to see Tim, who had just opened his eyes. He asked Tim if he was hurt, and how he came to fall. Tim answered:

"I don't know, Mr. Baker: I was on something up there. But," he added, "it doesn't make much difference; sure I had to come down for some nails, anyhow."

Whereupon Mr. Baker, trying to keep a straight face, remarked: "Well, Tim, I like to see a man do a job quickly, but the next time you want nails I prefer that you come down the ladder, even if it takes a little more time."—Boston Herald.

Custom Pleases Fair Sex.

In Venice the women of the lower classes accept tributes to their beauty from perfect strangers as a matter of course. It is considered not only proper but polite to compliment a passing maiden on the charm of her beautiful eyes or complexion. If one treads on the skirt of a pretty woman one has only to say, "Pardon, beautiful girl," to receive the most dazzling smile and a bow in return for the awkwardness. At cafes frequented by the people it is the custom for customers to say, when placing a chair for one of the women, "Take this chair, beautiful blonde," or, "Sit here, lovely brunette," as the case may be.

HOSPITALS CROWDED

WITH VICTIMS OF PATIENTS WOMEN

Pinkham's Advice Saves Many from this Sad and Costly Experience.

It is a sad but certain fact that every year brings an increase in the numberofoperations performed upon women in our hospitals. Morethan three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow-te beds are women and girls who awaiting or recovering from operas made necessary by neglect.

Every one of these patients had nty of warning in that bearing down ling, pain at the left or right of the omen, nervous exhaustion, pain in small of the back, pelvic catarrh, siness, flatulency, displacements or regularities. All of these symptoms indications of an unhealthy con-ion of the female organs, and if not ded the trouble may make headway til the penalty has to be paid by a gerous operation, and a lifetime of paired usefulness at best, while in ny cases the results are fatal.

Miss Lucila Adams, of Seattle, Wash., writes:

"Mrs. Pinkham:—
About two years ago I was a great suf-er from a severe female trouble, pains and aches. The doctor prescribed for me and ally told me that I had a tumor and must dergo an operation if I wanted to get well.
ld that this was my death warrant, but I ent hundreds of dollars for medical help, the tumor kept growing. Fortunately I sponded with an aunt in the New England tes, and she advised me to take Lydia E. kham's Vegetable Compound, as it was d to cure tumors. I did so and immediately an to improve in health, and I was entirely ed, the tumor disappearing entirely, with-an operation. I wish every suffering man would try this great preparation."

Just as surely as Miss Adams was ed of the troubles enumerated in r letter, just so surely will Lydia E.

her women who suffer from fe-

They laugh "when father carves the duck,"

Tyranny of Bachelors.

There is, however, one article of men's dress in defense of which there is nothing to be said. What makes men so often late for a dinner party? What leads to the emission of more "words" and provokes more ebullitions of irritability than probably anything else in the world—excluding always a herd of pigs to drive, but we are not all pig-drivers. Is it not the starched shirt, with its front and cuffs, hard, like a coat of mail? And yet into its interstices delicate little studs and sleeve links have to be introduced before the luckless wight can be considered presentable in society. A woman transforms herself, hair, footgear, everything, decks herself in jewels and in lustrous raiment, and meanwhile her lord and master, man, the one rational being, is struggling, apoplectic, with his shirt front. Ah! what battles have been fought by distracted bachelors! What tortures have been undergone by sensitive women, when first confronted with the man they love, whom they had fondly deemed incapable of a swear word, not like Laocoon contending against embracing serpents, but contending with a shirt front, into which he has unwarily introduced his head, and which has been sent home buttoned up from the laundry.—London Chronicle.

Women in China.

The most essential and conspicuous mark of heathenism in China today is the division of the sexes. It divides the empire into two classes and robs each of the help which the other is intended to supply. It is astonishing to see to what extent this rule of division is carried. In the families of the better class the male and female members are kept strictly apart. The different sexes even have different servants. Brothersand sisters are not allowed to associate together after the boys begin their studies, which is usually at the age of 5 years.

The social gatherings where both sexes meet is not only unknown, but is regarded with abhorrence. To them no country could show greater signs of moral degeneracy and barbarism than to indulge in mixed social gatherings. Even the working people seldom appear in the streets with their wives, and on the rare occasions when they do the man walks behind his wife to see that she conducts herself properly. It is astonishing to see to what extent that among the people of the higher classes the husband and wife are never seen together in the street or in any public place.

The law requires a man to mourn three yearsfor the death of a father and 100 days for the death of a mother, but a man would be ostracised socially if he gave any signs of grief at the death of his wife. Probably many a Chinese husband becomes fond of his wife after marriage—he has no opportunity previously—but it is a breach of good manners to give any sign of such a nature.

Two intimate friends engaged in conversation would never think of mentioning the name of any female relative. That common question, "How is your wife?" is never heard in China and would be considered a gross and unpardonable insult even between the most intimate friends. Chinese gentlemen never mention, look or speak to members of the other sex except those of their own family. In order that there shall be no embarrassing chance meetings when calling on a friend the visitor heralds his approach by coughing as he nears the house, thus giving the objectionable females time to make their escape. It would be a sign of poor breedings to fail to give this sign.

According to the annual report on births, deaths and marriages in Ireland during 1904 the natural increase of population recorded, or the excess of births over death, was 24,298. The loss by emigration amounted to 36,902.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THIS YEAR

DEVOTE an hour of careful thought today to your New Year's resolutions. Do not be among those who think resolutions are valueless because some are broken.

The progress of men as individuals and as a race has come from MENTAL EFFORT, from resolutions, from trying to do what they know they ought to do.

We can't all keep our resolutions. But we can at least try. We can remain hopeful, earnest, and this is the day for us to begin again.

Let us question ourselves, accuse ourselves, investigate our weaknesses, recognize them. AND DETERMINE TO CORRECT THEM IN THE COMING YEAR.

Every man and woman must decide what she or he needs individually. With many of us lack of will power is the great curse—procrastination, self-indulgence.

With others it is easy good nature, extravagance. With others various bad habits that sap the vitality which could mean success, not mere amusement or physical gratification.

We recommend to you today a resolution illustrated in this picture.

Desiring to give the best possible advice to our readers, we advise them most earnestly TO SAVE MONEY. Every man with a child or any human being dependent upon him owes it to his sense of decency to save his money. For only money saved and accumulated can mean permanent safety for the weak.

We do not advise saving merely for the money's sake, merely for gratification or enrichment. To have money and have nothing else is to be poor indeed.

But money MEANS INDEPENDENCE. Remember that the man whose dollar you must get from day to day is the man THAT OWNS YOU.

And as long as you must deliver each day of your life for that man's dollar you do not own yourself.

In old slave days an unusually intelligent negro would be permitted, as the saying went, "to buy his time," or even "to buy his freedom." The master realized that the slave working free, with some incentive, would produce much more than under compulsion, and he would arrange to sell the slave his own time for so much per day, or sell him the right to buy his freedom absolutely.

What would you think of a negro who in those days would have refused the chance of freedom?

You would say that the man was made to be a slave, and he ought to be a slave.

But do you realize that when YOU FAIL TO SAVE MONEY YOU ARE REFUSING A CHANCE TO BUY YOUR FREEDOM?

Are you a free man, when you don't know where the money will come from to take care of your family or yourself the week after next?

Are you a free man, when you don't own a foot of the surface of this earth, which men buy and sell to each other?

Are you a free man, if you haven't accumulated and saved that which makes you independent of other men?

Do you imagine that having your body owned by a man is so very different from having your time and your future owned?

Make up your mind that this year you will start in to buy your freedom.

We would not suggest to any man that he should free himself from wage dependence in order to be idle. If we believed that a man would accumulate enough to let him do nothing, and then do nothing, we would much prefer he never might save a dollar. Every man should work and want to work, as long as there is strength and energy in him.

But it is also true that every man should be in a position to do the best work that offers. He ought to be in a position to seize a good opportunity. He should be in such a position that, if duty told him to he could devote himself to the welfare of others, to working for his fellow men instead of working forever for his breakfast, luncheon, dinner and bed.

Money is crystalized labor. The dollars that you have saved up are all that you have to show materially for the efforts of your past life. What has become of the money—little or much—that you have received in the past? It has gone into your stomach, in pleasure, in clothes, unless you have it to show. Of course, if you have really spent every dollar as you got it for a family that needed every dollar, all honor to you.

But how many men and women can truthfully say that? How many can deny that if they had the will power they could save something and still do their duty?

Remember that this resolution to save means not only the accumulation of money, but the formation and strengthening of character.

Nine times out of ten the man who begins to save stops some kind of foolishness. Economy means giving up something, and the wise man usually manages to give up that which is bad for him. When you begin to save you begin, as a rule, to sleep longer, to drink and smoke less, to waste less time among unprofitable friends.

The saving of money not only means independence in the future, but it means better use of time in the present.

Think this over today. Think of your own case. Look at the men about you who have money. Remember that with a few disgraceful exceptions among the gamblers, thieves and politicians, the average man has money BECAUSE HE HAD THE STRENGTH OF CHARACTER TO SAVE. Even John D. Rockefeller has a thousand millions now BECAUSE HE WAS ABLE TO SAVE THE FIRST DOLLAR. IF HE HAD SPENT THE FIRST FEW DOLLARS HE WOULD HAVE SPENT ALL THE OTHER DOLLARS, AND WHILE HE WAS SPENDING THEM HE WOULD HAVE MISSED THE OPPORTUNITY THAT HAS GIVEN HIM THE MILLIONS PILED UP.

True, Rockefeller should not have those millions. He WOULDN'T have them if the other people of the nation equalled him in concentration of purpose, if they took an interest in their own financial welfare and their own government. Let a few millions of men develop the concentrated determination of Rockefeller, and YOU WILL HAVE MILLIONS OF PROSPEROUS MEN, AND NO ROCKEFELLERS.

As to how THE money should be saved, the simple recipe is BEGIN AT ONCE.

The savings bank, of course, is the simplest beginning. There are other ways. The man who has the intelligence to select the means of making one dollar produce another quickly is, of course, the lucky man.

All of us should watch for the opportunities that are offered in this day of extraordinary commercial and other developments.

The real estate field especially, with wise selection, offers a very great opportunity. We shall impress constantly upon all our readers, IN THE HOPE OF MAKING MANY OF THEM RICH, the fact that the problem of transportation is entering upon an absolutely new phase.

The electric road is going to be as great an improvement upon the steam road as the steam road was upon stage coach.

Let One of Your New Year's Resolves Be, "I Will Be Independent, Not at the Mercy of Any Man's Pocketbook."

The people of this district, and of the entire South, have got to learn the habit of saving and economy before they can ever become independent like their neighbors of the New England states and other sections where the savings bank is considered next to the church and school house in importance.

The Citizens Saving Bank was organized and is being conducted for the purpose of inculcating among the people the importance of thrift and saving, and is ready and anxious at all times to help you so far as we can along these lines.

The Citizens Saving Bank is the only important bank in the State which confines its banking business strictly and exclusively to Savings Accounts, and in this connection we ask you to read the Alabama law bearing on Savings Accounts, which we publish at the bottom of this page. We also print below an excerpt from the laws enacted for the protection of the vast number of savings depositors in the great savings bank State of Massachusetts. Read both of them. Each is a positive argument in favor of a strictly savings bank for savings deposits.

THE ALABAMA BANKING LAW.

Section 250 of the last Constitution provides that depositors in banks who have not stipulated for interest, shall, for their deposits, be entitled, in case of insolvency, to preference of pay over all other creditors, and this law applies to all banks, whether incorporated or not.

In other words, if a bank does both a savings business and a regular banking business, and should become insolvent, then the depositors who did not get interest on their deposits would have a preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings.

The Citizens Savings Bank accepts only savings accounts, hence every depositor stands on the same footing here.

THE MASSACHUSETTS BANKING LAW.

Extract from Section 3, Chapter 169, Acts of 1902, Massachusetts Statutes, reads:

"No savings bank .....shall occupy the same office or suite of offices with a national bank, trust company or other bank of discount, nor any office directly connected by means of doors or other openings in partitions with the office or suite of offices occupied by any such national bank, trust company or other bank of discount." The penalty for the violation of this section being not more than $500. Section 4 provides that "No president, vice president or treasurer of a savings bank shall hold the office or perform the duties of president, vice president, treasurer or cashier of a national bank, trust company or other bank of discount." The penalty for the violation of this section is also not more than $500.

THE UNION.

EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL; SPECIAL FAVORS TO NONE.

VOL IV. CLANTON, ALA., MARCH 29 1906. NO. 1

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Chairman Nations Talks.

Decatur, Ala.—W. T. Nations, Cordova, chairman of the Farmers' Co-operative and Protective Association of Alabama, declares that the farmers of the south are in better condition today than they have been in the world's history. I am firmly of the opinion that the farmer has more money in the bank today and is in better circumstances than he has ever been before. Our association is completing a plan with the warehouses whereby we can store our cotton and get negotiable receipts, which will answer the purpose of money until cotton reaches the point that will justify the planter to sell. The past few years that have been so rich in opportunities for the planters have enabled many to get enough money ahead to inspire them to make a fight for the appreciation of the fleecy staple. We believe firmly that cotton will reach 12 cents and that every one who has not sold last year's crop will have the privilege of disposing of the same at that price.

"Our organization is less than a year old, but we have a membership in the state of over 40,000."

Warehouse Collapses.

Montgomery, Ala.—Overloaded by the weight of more than 300 tons of cotton seed hulls, stored in its second floor, the immense warehouse of the Standard Cotton Oil Company, near Commerce street and First avenue, collapsed Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock causing a loss of several thousand dollars worth of property and seriously endangering the lives of seventy-five men. With the crash and the sound of falling timbers, the sides of the building caved outward, the upper floor sank to the top of the sacks piled on the floor beneath, and the loose cotton bursting through the broken walls of the structure, spread like a snowdrift several feet deep over the ground. Boards and pieces of timber were sent flying through the air, and the clouds of dust that arose from the wreck blinded those seeking to escape from the vicinity of the falling building. It was not until several minutes had elapsed, when the dust had cleared away, that it was ascertained that those working near the building had been caught in the debris.

Verdict Set Aside.

Birmingham, Ala.—The verdict for $5,000 rendered by a jury in the circuit court in favor of Mrs. Laura C. Ensley against the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company was set aside by Judge Alston. A new trial was granted.

Attorneys for Mrs. Ensley took exceptions to Judge Alston's order and were allowed sixty days for preparing their bill of exceptions.

The forty-five reason given in the written motion of the railway's counsel for a new trial. Argument was heard Tuesday morning in the circuit court.

The case will be decided by the decision of which will once more be submitted to a jury. It is a suit for the death of Charles Ensley, who has been before three juries, none of which never had the opportunity of handing up a verdict.

Late Primary Is Probable.

Gadsden, Ala.—Dr. R. F. McConnell, chairman of the Etowah county democratic executive committee, has called a meeting of that body for Saturday, March 31, at the court house in this city for the purpose of arranging a date for the county primary to select candidates for the various county offices. The senatorial committee will also meet on that date and select a candidate for the senate. A majority of the committeemen are in favor of a late primary, and it will probably be held for the second week in August. This gives the young men who have just become of age to register in July time to vote in the primary.

Frost Damages Peaches.

Huntsville, Ala.—The frost has done a large per cent of the peach crop of North Alabama, particularly the later peaches, which invariably ripen first. The extent of the damage is not yet known, but it is expected to be considerable.

Connors Guilty of Murder.

Florence, Ala.—Jesse Connors has been convicted of the murder of Clem Hunt and has been sentenced to life imprisonment. The original difficulty was between the two men over a dispute about some cotton, and Connors was alleged to have stabbed his victim to death after making numerous threats. The jury consumed but little more than an hour in making up its verdict.

COMER AT ANNISTON.

Says He Don't Want Any Railroad Lawyers in the Legislature.

Anniston, Ala.—B. B. Comer, of Jefferson, spoke here Saturday morning to an audience of about 200, the court house being comforably filled. Capt. A. W. Bell, chairman of the Comer-Cooper campaign, presided and introduced the speaker, a former resident of Anniston.

Mr. Comer spoke for two hours in his usual manner, protesting against the election of railroad attorneys to the legislature, saying, "If you expect to vote for me for governor and for a railroad attorney for your representative, I don't want your vote." His remarks were principally to the farmers, although less than one-third the audience were farmers. His daughter and friends occupied seats in the gallery and sat through the speech.

Mr. Henderson, of Troy, spoke at the conclusion of Mr. Comer's speech.

Plans for Primary in Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—The democratic county executive committee met Saturday and perfected plans for the primary election to be held August 27 next. At this election, besides voting for governor, lieutenant-governor, auditor, railroad commissioner, etc., a number of county offices are to be filled here, including the position of sheriff, for which there are fourteen announced and able candidates. There will doubtless be a struggle for both houses of the legislature, and over a dozen prominent names are before the people for the seven seats in the house of representatives. The name of W. M. Drennen, ex-mayor of Birmingham, is most prominently mentioned for the state senate. C. P. Beddowfl a well-known "damage suit" lawyer, is the only announced candidate. William M. Walker, counsel for the Frisco system, is also named as a probable entry in the race.

Will Deport Man to Austria.

Birmingham, Ala.—The first local case on record in which a foreigner, not a Chinaman, has been deported will be that of Oswald Kartus, who is to go from here to far Austria in the next few days. Kartus was arrested some time ago on a charge of larceny, having taken a suit case from the union station. His demeanor in jail was most singular, and he speedily showed signs of insanity. One of his manias was that he was "king of North and South America." He has just been sentenced to the insane asylum by the probate judge of Jefferson county. In view of the fact that he landed in this country from Austria less than two years ago he will be sent back. The Austrian consul at New York has been in conference with local attorneys in regard to the matter.

Drane Is Pardoned.

Montgomery, Ala.—Linton Drane, a youth of Lee county, who was unjustly convicted of rape and sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment, after serving four years, has been able to prove his innocence and has been pardoned unconditionally by Governor Jelks on recommendation of the state board of pardons.

Drane' story is intensely pathetic. The boy was the victim of the scheme of a bad woman. She perjured herself and secured corroboration through an equally unscrupulously female. The young boy, 18 years old, was sent up for fifteen years. After he had lived as a convict for four years it became known that the women on whose testimony he went to prison are unworthy of belief.

Drowned in Raging River.

Scottsboro, Ala.—While attempting to ford Paint Rock river near Trenton Friday Ollie Robinson, son of Paul Robinson, of Trenton, was drowned, also one of the horses that he was driving. Mr. Hinshaw, a brother-in-law of Mr. Robinson, came near being drowned at the same time, but fortunately was saved.

Mrs. Robinson, wife of the drowned man, was standing on the opposite bank of the river and was an eye-witness to the tragedy and could not render any assistance while her husband was swept under the rushing waters of the mad stream.

Wild Animal Scare.

Florence, Ala.—Much excitement exists in the hills four miles above South Florence over the appearance of two wild animals of a species which none who have seen them can determine. The animals are said to be as large as leopards and of a grayish color.

ARMED MOB ROBS BANK

Twenty-five Men Get $432,500 From a Moscow Institution.

ESCAPE WITH THEIR LOOT

The Credit Mutual Bank in Heart of the City Robbed in Broad Day Light in a Manner That Was Exceptionally Daring — Guards Seized and Disarmed.

Moscow, Russia.—The Credit Mutual, one of the largest banks in Moscow, was robbed by masked men at dusk, the robbers getting $432,500. Circumstances raise the suspicion that the robbery was committed under the direction of some one at present or previously employed in the institution.

The bank is in Ilinka street, in the heart of the city. The last of the clerks had just departed, leaving a guard of three men inside, while under the covered driveway outside were a policeman and the house porter. The street was crowded with people hurrying homeward. According to the story of the guards they were suddenly confronted with revolvers in the hands of twenty masked men, who had entered silently by the main door, which had been locked when the office force left the building.

After a command to the guards to hold up their hands not a word was spoken. The guards were quickly bound and gagged and thrown into a dark corner. The robbers then took positions at all the entrances, and the curtains of the windows were lowered. The chief of the robbers, who directed the operations of his associates by gestures, showed thorough familiarity with the location of the vaults. When all was ready he went to the heavy, burglar proof safe and with a few whirls of the knob threw the combination of the lock, the heavy doors swung open and the treasure of the bank was revealed.

The plunder, consisting of gold, silver and notes, was speedily thrust into sacks. When not a kopeck was left the robbers departed as silently as they came, making their exit through the main entrance, leaving no trace behind them. They had been in the bank less than half an hour. Twenty minutes later one of the guards succeeded in freeing himself and gave the alarm. The policeman and house porter, who had been standing in front of the bank throughout, said they had seen no one enter or leave it. An immense crowd was attracted to the scene by the news of the robbery.

MOB MOCKS SUPREME COURT.

Lynches a Negro After a Federal Stay Was Granted.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Ed. Johnson, a negro, was taken from the jail here by a mob of seventy-five men and hanged to a beam of the county bridge over the Tennessee River.

The rope broke, the negro's body fell and the mob quickly riddled him with bullets. Sheriff Shipp and the jailer were locked in a bathroom while the mob secured the prisoner.

Johnson was to have been hanged the day on which the lynching occurred for an assault upon a white woman, but the United States Supreme Court granted a stay of execution, and this action served to enrage the citizens of the city.

At 10.45 p. m. seventy-five determined men assembled at the jail and gained admission. Overpowering the sheriff and his deputies they secured the prisoner and quietly led him to the bridge. The mob was composed of men of mature years.

Washington, D. C.—The lynching at Chattanooga, Tenn., of the negro, Ed. Johnson, after an appeal had been granted him by the United States Supreme Court, is an act in contempt of the court probably without precedent in its history. The question of proceedings by the Federal Government against the leaders of the mob who lynched Johnson is being considered by the Department of Justice.

"CHEAPER TO KILL LABORERS."

Costs Less Than Protecting Them at Work, Contractor Tells Dr. Strong.

New York City.—A contractor of prominence, according to Dr. Josiah Strong, recently told him that the killing of workingmen was cheaper than protecting them.

The statement created a stir when made by Dr. Strong, who is President of the American Institute of Social Service, at the Municipal Art Society dinner.

"Nine men are killed every day in New York," he continued, "in accidents which are for the most part avoidable. Our city is fast becoming a veritable human shambles."

Coal mines and railroads, he said, were slaughter houses for the laboring men. Last year there were 2500 accidents to laboring men that the public knew nothing about.

Froze to Death in Mother's Arms.

A TRACTION REVOLUTION

Mayor Weaver Forces Philadelphia Company to Give Up Franchises.

Graft Tide Turning Back — Quaker City Recovers Street Grants Worth Millions—Monopoly Begs For Terms.

Philadelphia.—The terms of capitulation of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, which for more than ten years has enjoyed a monopoly of all street railway privileges in Philadelphia, are now in the hands of counsel for the city and the company being whipped into legal shape.

Caught in a trap which menaced its very existence, with the Philadelphia and Western Railway Company at the city line as an active competitor and with no complacent councils or political leaders to fall back upon, the Transit Company has given up some of its most valuable franchises and has opened the doors, perforce, to its competitor.

Besides that, it has given George Gould his opportunity to reach tidewater, for no one doubts that he is the real force behind the Philadelphia and Western, and thus has thrown the doors open to railroad competition in Philadelphia.

This transit revolution, which is even more important to the city than was the political upheaval of May, has come about through the franchises which the Philadelphia Rapid Transit bought from the independent street car company at the time of the merger in 1903. These franchises gave the right to construct underground, surface and elevated lines on almost every street in Philadelphia.

There were time limits to them, and forfeiture of franchises if these were not complied with, but with councils and the administration under control these conditions need not be noticed—they could always be extended.

The Market street subway was to be finished in three years. Extension after extension was granted and work went on leisurely. The last extension of time expires this April. Unless another extension is granted, this franchise and others expire.

The political revolution swept away the support the Rapid Transit Company had depended upon, and this week it faced the veto of the subway extension, saw the Philadelphia and Western throw off its mask, and awoke with a bump.

To save itself from ruin the Rapid Transit Company gave an astonishing example of self-sacrifice. It agrees to complete within three years a subway under Market street, from Fifteenth street to the Delaware River; a subway under Broad street, from Walnut north to the end of the opened street; a subway under Walnut street, from Broad to Fifth, under Fifth street to Arch, and under Arch street to Broad; an elevated road from South street and Delaware avenue to Frankford.

It surrenders the following franchises:

For a subway under Chestnut street—thus clearing the way for the Philadelphia and Western's proposed line; for surface lines on Broad street—thus removing for all time the danger that that thoroughfare will be disfigured by tracks; for elevated roads in Ridge avenue, Passyunk avenue and Germantown avenue—thus restoring to the city rights which open the way for future competition; for elevated roads on Lancaster, Baltimore and Woodland avenues, in West Philadelphia, all of which were to be connecting links with the Market street elevated, but which will now go to the Philadelphia and Western and will give that company full hand in the western and southwestern sections of the city.

The agreement covering all this was formally executed at the meeting in the Mayor's office between officials of the city and the Rapid Transit Company.

The Transit Company undertakes to commence construction of the Broad street subway at once. The least estimate on this work places the cost at $24,000,000.

The "loop" subway from Broad street, under Walnut to Fifth street, thence to Arch street and then west to Broad street will cost about $4,000,000.

Completion of the Market street subway-elevated line will cost not less than $5,000,000 beyond what has been already expended.

All the franchises vacated by the Rapid Transit Company will be taken up by the Philadelphia and Western, whose tracks now run from Parkersburg, Pa., to Sixty-third and Market streets. Fifty miles away from Parkersburg at Hanover, Pa., runs the Western Maryland, a Wabash connection.

NO CRIME IN CAMPAIGN GIFTS.

District Attorney Jerome Says He Can't Find Any Felonious Intent.

New York City.—In a brief which he filed with Judge O'Sullivan in the Court of General Sessions District Attorney Jerome holds that the giving of political contributions to political parties by officers of insurance companies was not a crime, because it cannot be shown that such payments were made with felonious intent.

To be larceny, Mr. Jerome says, such appropriations of policyholders' money would have to have been made, under the Penal Code, "with intent to deprive or defraud the true owner of his property, or the use and benefit thereof." Mr. Jerome is of the opinion, as he says in his brief, that that was not the case in the political contributions from the insurance companies.

CORNERED AT LAST

Rogers Says Standard Oil Is a Trust Within Meaning of the Law.

ROGERS' MEMORY WELL PRODDED

Many Things He Could Not Recall Were Finally Proved After a Sharp Legal Encounter.

New York.—Cornered by the decision of the court, Henry H. Rogers, the executive head of the Standard Oil trust, which Attorney-General Hadley, of Missouri, stigmatized as the meanest possible combination on earth, inasmuch as it thrived on the necessities of the very poor, Saturday admitted that the corporation was a trust within the meaning of the law.

That admission was made before Commissioner Sanborne, appointed by the state of Missouri to oust the Republic Oil Company, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company and the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, which are doing business in that state, presumably as independent concerns, but as a matter of fact as branches of the Standard Oil trust, of New Jersey, dividing the territory of the state between them for business purposes, regulating the supply and the price of oil to suit themselves and throttling all competition.

It means that Mr. Hadley can now return to his home state with evidence upon which the courts must find the trust concerns guilty as charged and inflict the penalty, which is either confiscation of all the oil trust's property in the state of Missouri, forcible ejection from the state or a heavy fine, to be repeated every time the offense is committed.

It was the first time in all the long years of litigation that the powerful aggregation has ever been—in which various states have endeavored in vain to destroy the octopus that has strangled all competitors and compelled the consumers to buy and pay for oil the price their greed dictated—forced to admit that it was a combination in violation of the anti-trust laws.

"In obtaining that admission I have accomplished all I came here for," said Attorney-General Hadley, jubilantly.

"It has been a hard struggle, but I have dragged it out at last."

The incriminating and convicting admission was not given willingly. The highly paid counsel from five different states, who had been brought here by the Standard Oil Company magnates to defend them, dodged, twisted and tried every movement known to the shrewdest lawyers and sharpest practitioners before they reluctantly surrendered.

First, they stopped Mr. Rogers when he was about to reply to the question embodying the admission by saying they would prefer to see the admission in writing. Then they wrote the admission in such an ambiguous form that it could be construed any way.

Mr. Hadley was too sharp and detected the barefaced trick, and insisted that if there was to be any written admission it certainly would have to be in such form that it could be comprehended and also would have to be specific and comprehensive.

The Standard Oil Attorneys consulted for at least fifteen minutes more and puzzled their brains apparently like school boys over a first essay. Then, in triumph, they presented another product of their joint talen, in which two innocent looking holes were left for the trust to slip harmlessly through.

Mr. Hadley spotted the omission.

Then, by the aid of a few suggestions from the attorney-general, they were enabled to return in a few minutes the statements which Mr. Hadley and his representative here, Henry Wollman, described as a copper-riveted statement embodying all they had been endeavoring to drag from the unwilling witnesses of the trust for the last twelve months or more.

With the convicting testimony from the mouth of Mr. Rogers the presence on the witness stand of John D. Rockefeller is not so necessary to Mr. Hadley's case. In the light of developments since Mr. Hadley began taking testimony in this city, however, he is still anxious to have the founder of the oil trust before him under oath.

NOT ALL MONSTERS

SCIENTISTS THROW LIGHT ON PREHISTORIC ANIMALS.

Beasts of Burden of To-day in Many Instances Are Larger Than Their Ancestors We Know as Representatives of the Past.

The study of the remains of extinct monsters has brought to light among other curious things, the fact that in general the animals of the past that survive in developed types were much smaller than their descendants are today. Even some of the tremendous saurians which look nightmares in the drawings reconstructing them, the Plesiosaurus, for illustration, were much smaller than several existing species of whale. This is not true, however, of the ancestor of the shark, the Carcharodon megaladon, a savage leviathan that measured 100 feet in length; neither is it true of the ancestors of the modern kangaroo and wombat, whose progenitor, the Diprotodon, was as big as the largest rhinoceros or a small elephant.

Skull of a giant marsupial and that of a man.

In a book intended for children, but of a character so instructive and entertaining that older children are likely to be fascinated by it, Prof. E. Ray Lankester, director of the natural history departments of the British Museum, has clearly shown the relationship of some modern mammals with the peculiar animals whose remains are found in old strata, and drawn some interesting comparisons. Prof. Lankester's book, entitled "Extinct Animals," published in this country by Henry Holt & Co., is not solely devoted to the monsters of a million or so years ago, but to a vivid reconstruction of some of the creatures found in the Mesozoic and Tertiary systems. All of these were not, of course, monsters; indeed, some of the earliest mammal remains found are exceedingly small.

"It is a big mistake," says Prof. Lankester, "to conclude that it is a law of nature that recent animals are all small and insignificant, as compared with their representatives of the past. That is simply not true. Recent horses are bigger than extinct ones, and much bigger than the three-toed and four-toed ancestors of horses. Recent elephants are as big as any that have existed, and much bigger than the earlier elephantine ancestors. There never has been any creature of any kind—mammal, reptile, bird or fish—in any geological period we know of, so big as some of the existing whales, the sperm whale, the great rorqual and the whalebone whales.

"It is true that there were enormous reptiles in the past, far larger than any living crocodiles, standing fourteen feet at the loins and measuring eighty feet from the tip of the snout to the tip of the tail; but their bodies did not weigh much more than that of a big African elephant, and were small, compared with whales."

Although evolutionists have not yet been able to complete the lines of ancestors of man, the ancestry of the horse is believed to be completely accounted for. The big draught horse and the swift race horse are descendants of a little animal that lived a few million years ago that was no larger than a fox. The remains of this curious animal have been found in the Eocene. It had four toes on its front feet and three on its hind feet. The modern horse, it should be remembered, walks on single toes, the others having practically disappeared.

Many of the extinct monsters were herbivorous animals. This is true of some of the great Dinosaurs, which measured from fifty to eighty feet in length. There were others, however, Megalosaurus, for instance, which was not quite as large, but for all that a very ugly and ferocious beast that could successfully attack the giant Brontosaurus and lay him low. It is not definitely known that man existed in the days of the great Dinosaurs, but he is known to have been on earth as a contemporary of the Mammoth. This great creature, which was a branch of the elephant, was not so large as is popularly believed. From numerous remains of skeletons it is known that the Mammoth was little larger than an Indian elephant, which is smaller than his African cousin.—Philadelphia Ledger.

GATES "CALLED" THE GAMBLER.

Stinging Rebuke Administered by Well Known Millionaire.

It will be many days before the regulars of the Waldorf-Astoria cease telling the story of the calling down John W. Gates gave to a gambler the other night. Possibly Mr. Gates was not feeling well. His name had been brought out in the malodorous Town Topics case that day and the market had not acted right in Wall Street.

The gambler has an international reputation. He affects a deep interest in art and has wealth enough to be ranked among millionaires. He was sitting on one of the great lounges in the corridor with a friend from out of town when Mr. Gates hove in sight, coming from Peacock alley toward the cafe. Several acquaintances stopped him to ask his opinion of the market.

"Know who that stout man is?" asked the gambler of his friend, not in the way of a question, but as a basis to giving information.

"No; who is he?" was the reply.

"Gates—the only John W.," said the gambler.

"Indeed!" exclaimed the man from out of town, much impressed.

A minute later Mr. Gates broke away from the party about him.

As he was passing the gambler and the man from out of town the gambler said, "Hello, John."

Mr. Gates stopped, glanced at the two men, knitted his brows as if perplexed, and then started off again.

He had not taken two steps when the gambler said, "What's your hurry?"

Mr. Gates turned and walked back.

"Were you speaking to me?" he inquired.

The gambler began to laugh. Turning to his friend, he said: "John must have his little joke. He is a gay dog." Then, addressing Mr. Gates, he continued, "John, let me introduce my friend, Henry Adkins."

Mr. Gates ignored the introduction, but, looking the gambler in the eye, said to him: "Sir, you have been a gambler many years, but you seem to have failed to learn one thing that every gambler ought to know. That is, never speak to a gentleman unless the gentleman speaks to you. In the social grade gamblers are classed with fallen women. If I choose to visit an establishment conducted by you that is my private affair, and you must not presume on it. If I elect to recognize you in any public place, all well and good. I have no desire to offend the person who is with you, but I can accept no introduction from you." With that Mr. Gates turned and resumed his trip to the cafe.—New York Press.

GETS A SHOVEL OFF HIS MIND.

Preacher Pays Railroad for Tool Broken in Rage Twenty-two Years Ago.

A check for $2.50 conscience money sent by a preacher who has a church near Utica, N. Y., was received recently by General Manager Clarke of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad.

With it was enclosed a letter of explanation. The minister wrote that twenty-two years ago he, having newly arrived in this country, got a place as section hand on the railroad. One day he was unjustly discharged by the foreman and in a fit of rage, smashed a shovel with which the company had provided him.

It proved to be the turning point in his career, for he got other work, studied and eventually became a minister. For some time his conscience has been worried about the shovel and he decided to pay what he thought it was worth. Supt. Clarke sent him a receipt.

Fish on Land.

It is not to be supposed that a fish is absolutely comfortable away from its own element, but it is nevertheless true that it sometimes sees fit to live on the land for a short period. Of all land-frequenting fish, the most famous is the climbing perch of India, which not only walks out of the water, but also mounts into trees by means of sharp spines situated near its head and tail. It has a peculiar breathing apparatus, which enables it to extract oxygen from the water stored up within a small chamber near its gills, for use while on land.

Growth and Life of Oyster.

The oyster is not much larger than the head of a fair-sized pin at the end of a fortnight, and at three months about equal to a split pea. At the end of four years' growth it is fit for the market. Oysters live to the age of from twelve to fifteen years. According to one naturalist, these bivalves feed on monads—the most minute form of marine life.

MORIARTYS IN ROLL OF FAME.

How One of That Name Silenced Would-Be Detractor.

Eugene Moriarty, who seemed to be a fixture in the Massachusetts legislature some years ago, was at one time on the Worcester school board. A fellow member, the Rev. D. O. Mears, more than hinted at one meeting that there were altogether too many Irish names on the list of Worcester teachers.

The charge passed unchallenged at the time, but at the next meeting up rose Mr. Moriarty, with this little gem: "Mr. President, at the last meeting of the board someone intimated that there are too many Irish names on our list of teachers. The next day I went up to the public library and saw our genial librarian, Mr. Green. 'Mr. Green,' I sez, 'have ye a dictionary of American names?' 'I have,' sez he. 'Is it complete?' sez I. 'It is,' sez he. 'Can I take it home.' sez I. 'Ye can,' sez he. Mr. President, I took it home; I searched it through and through from cover to cover. I found no Mears in the book, but I found that Michael Moriarty was one of the bodyguard of Gen. Washington!"—Boston Herald.

NOT INTENDED FOR CARVING.

Second Bird Brought On for Delectation of Diners.

One of the most inveterate of practical jokers was Alvah Raymond, at one time postmaster at Weymouth, and for one or two terms a member of the Massachusetts legislature. He was a very prominent figure during the "P. L. L." agitation, and used to say that he was a member of the P. L. L. double L., which meant People's License Law Little Louder.

While a member of the legislature he was also president of the Weymouth Agricultural society the year that Gen. Butler was running for governor, and, as one of the attractions of the annual fair of the society, Butler was invited to speak on the fair grounds.

Mr. Raymond was noted for his hospitality, and after his speech at the fair, where "flat money" was coined by a breath of the gifted orator, the distinguished guest, together with the officers of the society, were taken to his home, where a tempting repast awaited them.

When all were seated at the table the host attempted to carve the turkey, but the knife slipped without making a scratch on the carcass. Again he tried, with no better result. A third attempt was a failure, and then the knife was brandished and the bird viciously stabbed and slashed, but to no avail, and with a thoroughly disgusted expression the host seized the offending biped and hurled it through the window.

Consternation was pictured on the faces of the guests, and the host appeared disconsolate; but just before the affair assumed the dimensions of a tragedy the waiter appeared with another turkey, which proved as tender as the first was tough, and, as the proportions of the joke dawned upon the senses of the company, Gen. Butler led the laughter.

Always Raining.

There is a group of islands to the south of New Zealand called the Sisters, or Seven Sisters, which are reputed to be subjected to a practically constant rainfall. The same may be said of the islands and mainland of Tierra del Fuego, saving for the difference that the rain often takes the form of sleet and snow. On a line running round the world from four to eight or nine degrees there are patches over which rain seldom ceases to fall. This is called the "zone of constant precipitation," but at the same time there are several localities along it with very little rainfall.

HER FIRST BIG FISH

WOMAN TELLS OF THE JOY OF LANDING A TUNA.

Long and Hard Fight, Followed by Wearied Muscles, but the Fighter of the Deep Finally Succumbed to Skill and Endurance.

The champion woman fisherman, so far as present chronicles go, is Mrs. Edward Nicholls Dickerson of New York. Mrs. Dickerson is the heroine of one of the most exciting fishing experiences ever related and she tells her story naively.

"I was about to speak to my husband when the boatman whispered:

"'Hush! Look ahead and to the right!'

"My heart gave a bound. I leaned far forward to look in the direction he pointed. A long dark line cut the tumbling blue of the waves. Triangular shapes pierced sword-like the air. In the Florida waters I had seen sharks whose outline was exactly like that. The fins nearest us dipped and moved in rotary motion. That distinctive motion belonged only to one fish. I was looking upon my first tuna. He had come to the surface, as is their habit, to watch for flying fish. I drew in my line taut. I glanced back stealthily over my shoulder. There was the flying fish bait, following the invisible line, in the wake of the boat. I looked back to the tuna. He was sinking slowly back into the waves. Craftiest of fish, he chose to make no sound lest he frighten his prey. I grasped my rod with all my strength.

"It was none too soon. I felt the rod in my hand quiver slightly. The tuna was reconnoitering and had given a tentative nibble. I summoned all my reserve force for the strain. It came as though someone twice my weight were pulling with all his strength at a rope tied about my shoulders. The fish gave a long, steady pull that would have dragged me from the boat had I not known the habits of the tuna and been prepared. I sat straight, braced my feet against the bottom of the launch and matched my strength against that of the big fish. The long, steady, desperate pull made my arms ache. I felt as I might if they were being drawn from their sockets. It was torture.

"Once he was quiet and I thought the battle was over. I was reeling in rapidly and encountered no resistance, when the battle began again, more furiously than at any time before. I had reeled in until the fish was close beside the boat. Its black length showed plainly in the water a few feet away. By the rules of tuna-fishing the boatman may at that distance throw the iron hook. It pierced the side of the fish, which jumped out of the water, then fell lashing the waves and turning from side to side. I reeled in fast and in another moment had drawn him into the boat. He lay there gasping and I cried out in triumph:

"'You see, I've caught my——'

"As though he realized that I was gloating over his defeat the fish thrashed about in the bottom of the boat for a second, then to our amazement writhed and plunged and with a mighty effort leaped back into the ocean.

"Fortunately I had never once ceased holding the rod firmly. When the tuna slipped over the side of the boat and made back for his deepest sea home I was gripping the rod, for my reputation as a fisherman depended upon that hold. Suddenly I noticed that I was in a dangerous predicament—I was in real danger of being captured by my prey instead of capturing him.

"In getting him into the boat I had not reeled in the line fully and now I discovered several circles of it wound about me.

"After a fierce struggle I managed to clear myself from the tangled line and felt sure of victory.

"The sun was rising now and by its first light we could see the big black body at the end of the line. It was within the prescribed distance. The boatman threw a second hook. It struck the tuna near the right side of the head. The pain goaded him to a final fury. He sprang from the water as the flying fish springs, high, as though he disdained his native element.

"He fell, but sprang again. Each time I reeled in swiftly. The second time he sank into the water he was close beside the boat. With a final effort that set every muscle in my body a-quiver I drew him into the boat. This time he lashed and beat about impotently. In this battle the tuna had lost.

"My husband stopped his watch.

"'Seven forty,' he said. 'The fight lasted two hours and forty minutes. Madam, the Victric, I salute you.'

"To conquer a tuna is worthy the mettle of the best fisherman. My scars in my battle with the biggest tuna were most uncomfortable. So terrific had been the strain upon my arms that I could not use them for two weeks."

MRS. SMITHERS AS A GRAFTER.

She Understood After Husband's Lengthy Explanation.

Mrs. Smithers had been reading the evening paper for half an hour when she laid it aside and said:

"Smithers, what is a grafter? I have met the word in every paper I've picked up for the last three months. It doesn't exactly seem to mean a burglar or highway robber."

"No, not exactly," replied Smithers. "For instance, I go to the club."

"Yes."

"The boys press the wine on me until I have a drop too much."

"I see."

"I come home and fall into bed and sleep like a log."

"Well?"

"You get up while I sleep and go through my pockets, and the next morning I miss $5. You say I must have lost it at poker, but I know that you grafted it."

"Do you mean to say I stole it?"

"Not at all, dear, and you needn't look so red over it. Graft means to find, to sequester, to gobble, to keep, to beat the policy holder any way you can, and that's why I have been hiding my wallet under the front steps every night for the last two weeks."

"And I—I——?"

"You'll have to graft on the cook's wages in future. Tell her you'll have to keep out a dollar a week for the yellow dog fund."

HYPNOTIZED OVER THE PHONE.

Remarkable Performance Vouched for by Medical Men.

Some remarkable experiments in the way of hypnotizing by telephone have just been carried out in the Savoy Hotel by Mr. F. F. Abbott. The experiments were conducted in the presence of a considerable number of medical men. Mr. Abbott introduced a young Scotsman, whom he had hypnotized seven times during the previous fortnight. After passing his hand over the face of the subject, Mr. Abbott soon reduced the man to a passive state, and then, accompanied by one of the medical men, he left the building, and from a distance of two miles telephoned to the hotel in which the seance had been held. When the bell in the hotel room rang the young Scotsman went to the telephone, and, with a shudder, fell back quite unconscious. Mr. Abbott had commanded him over the telephone to go to sleep, and the subject remained in a hypnotized state until Mr. Abbott returned and awakened him.—London Tit-Bits.

Peculiar Old English Inn.

At the old Chequers Inn at Slapestones, North Yorkshire (Eng.), is a peat fire in a huge grate. The fire has been kept burning continuously for 105 years. A huge draught board-like sign hangs outside this curious old "pub," bearing the following inscription: "Step in and taste beer for nothing to-morrow." It is one of the oldest licensed houses in North Yorkshire.

Followed Old Custom.

When the parliamentary writ for the recent elections arrived at Dover, Eng., the other day it was saluted with three blasts from the ancient "burghmote" horn. Why? Because such writs have had that reception at Dover for 800 years.

Electricity and Clouds

By A. H. Laidlaw.

J. P. GIBSON of Salisbury, N. C., has some singular ideas in regard to electricity and clouds. What he calls the glazed appearance of one of the peaks of a thunder-cloud is simply the reflection of sunlight from frozen vapor. The light slants from the peaks to his eyes, so that certain peaks show what he calls a glazed appearance and other peaks do not, because light is reflected at a different angle.

After a few remarks he calls the glazed peak a flattened out peak without assigning a cause. A peak of a cumulus cloud might be flattened by a high wind, which would always be likely to flatten more than one peak. It is not likely to be flattened by atmospheric weight, as that is about five pounds less on every square inch of such a peak than it is on the earth. Nor is it likely to be flattened by the weight of frozen vapor, because that is lighter than the unfrozen vapor. What Mr. Gibson calls "the squeezing of the nodules of vapor" might be done by an external positive current of electricity, since ice, frost and snow are all negatives; but that effect would not be limited to one peak. Neither would lightning start from those negative surfaces.

There is no doubt that a fall of rain makes the air a better conductor of electricity, but after the discharge of electricity there is a heavier rain than before. It is also true that lightning is frequently delivered from one part of a cloud. It is the same with hail.

The reference to Franklin's experiment with the kite was unfortunate, as modern meteorologists know that the results which Franklin obtained under a thunder cloud can be obtained under a clear sky. The same electrical action which created the cloud electrified the kite. Electric currents are everlastingly active in the atmosphere overhead. A thunder cloud is encircled by a sea of accumulated electricity, which is the matrix of the storm. Men traveling high in mountain regions are occasionally so controlled by the electric behavior of the clouds above them that they are compelled to lie down until the climax has passed.

Clouds are classified as minerals, being formed and dissipated under similar chemical and electrical laws.

The Value of the Submarine in Naval Warfare

By Lawrence Y. Spear.

PARADOXICAL as it may seem, the possibilities of the submarine are much better known than are the possibilities of a battleship. In a broad sense they are the least experimental type of warship. This will be readily understood when it is remembered that the submarine is the only type of vessel practically immune from gun-fire when in action. The effect of gun-fire upon a ship and its personnel is a most uncertain and difficult problem which the designer or tactician has to solve, as best he may, without experimental determination.

No amount of discussion can, in the end, obscure one great fact regarding the submarine—that is, her ability to approach a battleship in broad daylight and force the latter to retire, or accept disablement or destruction. This is the essence of the matter. All other considerations are by comparison non-essential. This limitation curtails the battleship's control. That, in final terms, is what the submarine can do now, and that is enough.—Harper's Weekly.

FARM AND GARDEN

EARLY AND LARGE VEGETABLES.

There are two ways in which every man who takes pride in his garden likes to excel his neighbor. One is in having the earliest products and the other is in having the largest. A man may earn a reputation for having the sweetest peas, the crispest lettuce or the most mealy potatoes, but all this is eclipsed by one big squash or turnip, or one vine of early tomatoes, though none of these prizes may be any more than tolerated for the table.

Earliness is the result of conditions favorable for rapidity of growth and quick maturity. A warm soil still further improved by the addition of available plant food and an abundant of humus. A little nitrogen in some form is good at the start, but later it encourages a growth of top which retards maturity. This is not objectionable in case of some vegetables, but is not advisable for others. The treatment which would be fitting for lettuce and asparagus, or other plants grown for the top, would not be commendable for tomatoes and beans, or plants grown for their fruit. A balanced ration is most reliable in this case, and barnyard manure serves the purpose best if it is to be had.

For producing large vegetables the requirements are different. A long season is desirable. For this reason an early start should be made and maturity retarded so as to secure a long period for growths. The soil should be in a good responsive condition. The plants are not to be forced into a rapid growth at the start, but are to be kept growing through a long period. Stimulating nitorgenous manures are to be used sparingly, but phosphoric acid and potash are the dependence, the former for seed or fruit growth and the later for root.

However, with due respect to theories, the gardener who succeeds is the one who understands the requirements of plants and treats them accordingly. He sows the seed and sees that conditions are what are most suitable. Nature will do the rest.—National Fruit Grower.

TELLING AGE BY TEETH.

The following table for telling the ages of cattle by their teeth was recently presented to and adopted by the International Live Stock show at Chicago, and is interesting as well as valuable as showing the dentition in such animals at different stages of growth: Twelve months—An animal of this age should have all its milk (calf) incisor teeth in place. Fifteen months—At this age centre pair of incisor milk teeth may be replaced by centre pair of permanent incisors (pinchers), the latter teeth being through the gums, but not yet in wear. Eighteen months—The middle pair of permanent incisors at this age should be fully up and in wear, but the next pair (first intermediate) not yet cut through the gums. Twenty-four months—The mouth at this age will show two middle permanent (broad) incisors fully up and in wear, and next pair (first intermediate) well up, but not in wear. Thirty months—The mouth at this age may show six broad, permanent incisors, the middle and first intermediate pairs fully up and in wear, and the next pair (second intermediate) well up, but not in wear. Thirty-six months—Three pairs of broad teeth should be fully up and in wear, and the corner milk teeth may be shed or shedding, with the corner permanent teeth appearing through the gums. Thirty-nine months—Three pairs of broad teeth will be fully up and in wear, and corner teeth (incisors) through gums, but not in wear.—Weekly Witness.

CORN GROWERS ARE USEFUL.

While fully recognizing the value of the corn crop in all sections and particularly in the West, where it is so largely grown, the fact remains that more of it is wasted than should be. Western farmers wear out themselves and their horses plowing under cornstalks which could be put into the ground much more easily and inexpensively but cutting the stalks, shredding them and feeding them to the stock, so as to have the manure for the soil. If humus is needed it can be much more easily supplied than by plowing under cornstalks. Farmers of the East can not understand why their brethern of the West follow corn with corn; perhaps, in the East, it is realized that the time has been when the change was forced on them, as it must be, eventually, in the West. We may follow corn after corn now and for some years to come successfully, but we'll have to stop it sometime. Further, why should we continue it until forced to stop, either in the West or elsewhere?

If sections have found the rotation of crops profitable is there any reason to assume that it will not be equally successful elsewhere? On the other hand, if a soil is able to grow crop after crop of corn with success, is it not fair to assume that a short rotation, say three years, would give crops which would be more profitable and leave the soil in much better condition? Think it over, or, better still, experiment a little on small plots, and see what the result is.—Indianapolis News.

AN ADVANTAGEOUS METHOD.

If the hens are expected to come to the poultry house to lay, and this is where they should lay, the nest boxes must be made as inviting as possible, or one will find them stealing nests or even laying in hidden nooks on the range. Make it a point to locate the nest boxes in the dark part of the houses, but where it is as cool as possible, and see that they are kept filled with clean straw and fumigated regularly, after the house is cleaned weekly. It is a good plan to scatter a lot of insect powder through the nest material.

Another good plan is to have a small quantity of some food the fowls particularly like, in the house from which they may help themselves when they leave the nest. They are not likely to disturb it when they come in, for they are intent on laying, but they will enjoy it when coming off the nest, and it will do much to induce them to come to the house each time they are ready for laying. It pays well to cater to all the little foibles of the egg-producer.—Indianapolis News.

POULTRY NOTES

Have the winter quarters ready for the fowls.

Confined fowls must have their wants carefully attended to.

The plumage of old fowls tends to shade lighter with increasing years.

During the shedding of feathers the hens lay very few eggs and sometimes none at all.

Teach the young chicks to scratch as early as possible by scattering small grain among litter.

Poultry powders are rarely required for flocks that are fed and cared for properly.

A little flax seed meal in the food will help the old fowls to pass through moulting readily.

Air slacked lime dusted everywhere is cheap and will aid materially in destroying lice, gapes and roup.

One important item in fattening fowls economically is to supplly the food in a way that is easily digested.

The flesh of the guinea is dark but contains a delicacy of flavor that approaches that of wild game.

The laying of unusually large eggs is an indication that the hens are too fat.

The roosts should be low, especially for large, heavy fowls and should all be the same height.

When the hens stop laying they may often be started again by a change of food.

Prevent disease among the fowls rather than risk curing them; keep the quarters clean and supply pure water.

While ducks require water to assist in swallowing their food they should not be allowed on ponds until well feathered.

One advantage in breeding ducks is their freedom from disease; after they are a week old there is but little danger.

In nearly all cases improvement among poultry can be more readily secured if only one or two breeds are kept rather than a larger number.

SELL THE POOR COWS.

Get rid of those poor cows that are eating their heads off. No farmer can afford to keep any free boarders in his cow stable, and the cow that does not pay her way is nothing more nor less than this. Many a non-paying dairy could be made a profitable one if some of the cows were sold.

Asbestos and its uses

The mineral unique is asbestos. Different from every other material in its occurrence, mining and preparation for the market, it forms an entire study in itself.

It was first mined about a hundred years ago, chiefly as interesting to the geologist and mineralogist, and of little or no commercial value. About 1868 it was at first used commercially in the manufacture of roofing felt and cement. Early attempts to spin this fiber were unsuccessful, but the difficulties have now been overcome, so that a single asbestos thread, weighing not more than one ounce per 100 yards, which has a pretty fair strength, may be made. In its spun state it is used largely as yarn for packing, valves, etc., for which use it has many advantages.

Asbestos ropes for fire departments are made entirely of asbestos, or asbestos with a core of steel. With the steel wire core a three-quarter inch rope carried nearly 2,000 pounds. Without the core the three-quarter inch rope carries over 300 pounds, and suffices for firemen's purposes.—Chicago Tribune.

A Fear.

"So you think that this concentration of wealth is the inevitable outgrowth of our civilization?"

"I do," answered Mr. Thinker.

"And you must admit that the ultimate result of such a condition would be to put all the money under the control of one individual?"

"Yes."

"Well, it seems terrible to think of."

"What does?"

"The possibility of some billionaire getting out of temper some day and making up his mind to discharge the entire human race."—Judge.

The plants are not to be forced into a rapid growth at the start, but are to be kept growing through a long period. Stimulating nitorgenous manures are to be used sparingly, but phosphoric acid and potash are the dependence, the former for seed or fruit growth and the later for root.

However, with due respect to theories, the gardener who succeeds is the one who understands the requirements of plants and treats them accordingly. He sows the seed and sees that conditions are what are most suitable. Nature will do the rest.—National Fruit Grower.

TELLING AGE BY TEETH.

The following table for telling the ages of cattle by their teeth was recently presented to and adopted by the International Live Stock show at Chicago, and is interesting as well as valuable as showing the dentition in such animals at different stages of growth: Twelve months—An animal of this age should have all its milk (calf) incisor teeth in place. Fifteen months—At this age centre pair of incisor milk teeth may be replaced by centre pair of permanent incisors (pinchers), the latter teeth being through the gums, but not yet in wear. Eighteen months—The middle pair of permanent incisors at this age should be fully up and in wear, but the next pair (first intermediate) not yet cut through the gums. Twenty-four months—The mouth at this age will show two middle permanent (broad) incisors fully up and in wear, and next pair (first intermediate) well up, but not in wear. Thirty months—The mouth at this age may show six broad, permanent incisors, the middle and first intermediate pairs fully up and in wear, and the next pair (second intermediate) well up, but not in wear. Thirty-six months—Three pairs of broad teeth should be fully up and in wear, and the corner milk teeth may be shed or shedding, with the corner permanent teeth appearing through the gums. Thirty-nine months—Three pairs of broad teeth will be fully up and in wear, and corner teeth (incisors) through gums, but not in wear.—Weekly Witness.

CORN GROWERS ARE USEFUL.

While fully recognizing the value of the corn crop in all sections and particularly in the West, where it is so largely grown, the fact remains that more of it is wasted than should be. Western farmers wear out themselves and their horses plowing under cornstalks which could be put into the ground much more easily and inexpensively but cutting the stalks, shredding them and feeding them to the stock, so as to have the manure for the soil. If humus is needed it can be much more easily supplied than by plowing under cornstalks. Farmers of the East can not understand why their brethern of the West follow corn with corn; perhaps, in the East, it is realized that the time has been when the change was forced on them, as it must be, eventually, in the West. We may follow corn after corn now and for some years to come successfully, but we'll have to stop it sometime. Further, why should we continue it until forced to stop, either in the West or elsewhere?

If sections have found the rotation of crops profitable is there any reason to assume that it will not be equally successful elsewhere? On the other hand, if a soil is able to grow crop after crop of corn with success, is it not fair to assume that a short rotation, say three years, would give crops which would be more profitable and leave the soil in much better condition? Think it over, or, better still, experiment a little on small plots, and see what the result is.—Indianapolis News.

AN ADVANTAGEOUS METHOD.

If the hens are expected to come to the poultry house to lay, and this is where they should lay, the nest boxes must be made as inviting as possible, or one will find them stealing nests or even laying in hidden nooks on the range. Make it a point to locate the nest boxes in the dark part of the houses, but where it is as cool as possible, and see that they are kept filled with clean straw and fumigated regularly, after the house is cleaned weekly. It is a good plan to scatter a lot of insect powder through the nest material.

Another good plan is to have a small quantity of some food the fowls particularly like, in the house from which they may help themselves when they leave the nest. They are not likely to disturb it when they come in, for they are intent on laying, but they will enjoy it when coming off the nest, and it will do much to induce them to come to the house each time they are ready for laying. It pays well to cater to all the little foibles of the egg-producer.—Indianapolis News.

POULTRY NOTES

Have the winter quarters ready for the fowls.

Confined fowls must have their wants carefully attended to.

The plumage of old fowls tends to shade lighter with increasing years.

During the shedding of feathers the hens lay very few eggs and sometimes none at all.

Teach the young chicks to scratch as early as possible by scattering small grain among litter.

Poultry powders are rarely required for flocks that are fed and cared for properly.

A little flax seed meal in the food will help the old fowls to pass through moulting readily.

Air slacked lime dusted everywhere is cheap and will aid materially in destroying lice, gapes and roup.

One important item in fattening fowls economically is to supplly the food in a way that is easily digested.

The flesh of the guinea is dark but contains a delicacy of flavor that approaches that of wild game.

The laying of unusually large eggs is an indication that the hens are too fat.

The roosts should be low, especially for large, heavy fowls and should all be the same height.

When the hens stop laying they may often be started again by a change of food.

Prevent disease among the fowls rather than risk curing them; keep the quarters clean and supply pure water.

While ducks require water to assist in swallowing their food they should not be allowed on ponds until well feathered.

One advantage in breeding ducks is their freedom from disease; after they are a week old there is but little danger.

In nearly all cases improvement among poultry can be more readily secured if only one or two breeds are kept rather than a larger number.

SELL THE POOR COWS.

Get rid of those poor cows that are eating their heads off. No farmer can afford to keep any free boarders in his cow stable, and the cow that does not pay her way is nothing more nor less than this. Many a non-paying dairy could be made a profitable one if some of the cows were sold.

Asbestos and its uses

The mineral unique is asbestos. Different from every other material in its occurrence, mining and preparation for the market, it forms an entire study in itself.

It was first mined about a hundred years ago, chiefly as interesting to the geologist and mineralogist, and of little or no commercial value. About 1868 it was at first used commercially in the manufacture of roofing felt and cement. Early attempts to spin this fiber were unsuccessful, but the difficulties have now been overcome, so that a single asbestos thread, weighing not more than one ounce per 100 yards, which has a pretty fair strength, may be made. In its spun state it is used largely as yarn for packing valves, etc., for which use it has many advantages.

Asbestos ropes for fire departments are made entirely of asbestos, or asbestos with a core of steel. With the steel wire core a three-quarter inch rope carried nearly 2,000 pounds. Without the core the three-quarter inch rope carries over 300 pounds, and suffices for firemen's purposes.—Chicago Tribune.

A Fear.

"So you think that this concentration of wealth is the inevitable outgrowth of our civilization?"

"I do," answered Mr. Thinker.

"And you must admit that the ultimate result of such a condition would be to put all the money under the control of one individual?"

"Yes."

"Well, it seems terrible to think of."

"What does?"

"The possibility of some billionaire getting out of temper some day and making up his mind to discharge the entire human race."—Judge.

tf THE UNION.

HOWDY.

This paper marks the beginning of our fourth year. Our regular issue is almost 1,100 copies per week. Many of our readers will realize better what that circulation means when they understand that it took the Banner ten years to get to the point that THE UNION has attained in three years—and we keep on growing. We feel that we have many warm friends to whom we feel sincerely grateful. We also have some bitter enemies, which fact does not cause us to lose a moment's sleep, for we feel that it is a credit to be opposed by such people, and that we are surely right when they are "agin us."

If there is a Populist or Republican in Chilton county that does not take THE UNION, now is the time for him to "make good" and subscribe at once. Brethren, if you come across any one in this coming campaign who claims to be with the PEOPLE'S CAUSE in this county, but who only takes the organ of the ring and does not get THE UNION as an antidote, beware of him, for he is very probably "doaty at the heart."

A NEW FIRM.

We mean E. G. Rollins & Co., whose advertisement is in this paper. Our people all know Mr. Rollins and that he can be depended upon, so go in his store and "prove your faith by your works."

Talking about advertising, do you all ever stop and think over the matter? When business men advertise in YOUR paper, it just means this, that they want the trade of that paper's patrons; that they want you to call on them, and that YOU will be welcome in their stores.

"What's wanted is worth asking for," and the merchant that don't ask you to come and see him shows very plainly that he don't care about your trade; and you ought to see that he don't get it.

NUMEROUS CANDIDATES.

There was a good deal of talk about the number of candidates in our primary in 1904. But this year in the various sure democratic counties are from five to thirteen candidates for sheriff (our neighbor, Bibb county, has nine). There isn't a word said. You can't expect a number of candidates on the democratic ticket here, for the offices in this county don't go that way; only the hopes of filling a "dead man's shoes" (by appointment) brings out the "forlorn hope." There is a good deal of "grave yard ghoul" about Alabama democracy this year, anyhow.

MR. FONVILLE'S LETTER.

Our readers should not fail to read "About Hypocrites" in this issue. Most of our true and tried Populists know Mr. Fonville, as they elected him Secretary of State in 1892, but, as he says sometimes, "another fellow drew the salary." If you want to see church discipline properly enforced you must go to the country churches; as the salaries paid preachers in the centers of population seem to have a bad effect on the eyes of many of them, and they don't see the swearers, drunkards, card players and dancing people among the membership.

ABOUT HYPOCRITES.

Editor of The Union:

Some time ago I wrote you a letter, in which I applauded an editorial in a religious paper and expressed astonishment that a religious editor should be guilty of moral sentiments.

I never mailed the letter, for the good man died.

My observation is that when a good man talks one way and votes the other, his goodness is of the negative kind, and deceives no one. Our great Dr. Hawthorne was won't to be very earnest and emphatic in the Sunday pulpit opinion that "the man who steals the negro's vote will steal the negro's money," but when on Monday he aligned himself with the fellows he had described, the observant bartender was of the opinion that the good doctor was fearfully included in the adage, "Birds of a feather will flock together."

This goes to show that a real good man is sometimes judged by the company he keeps.

If our leading divines persistently align themselves with a political party pregnant with gross immorality their condemnation of bad taste at a funeral is taken for—what it is worth.

But the condemnation was so limited that the conclusion may be reached that the clergy was not so much outraged after all.

The prevalent alignment of the upper clergy with a political party which maintained itself in power by breaches of the moral law went a long ways towards rendering them inefficient of good, and perhaps neutralizes their efforts of evil, since even a child or a fool is quick to detect hypocrisy.

However, they have their uses, and somebody knows how to use them.

Not long ago, in a preachers' meeting, it was suggested that collections be taken up on Sundays in the churches to aid Mr. Meador in his race for Lieutenant-Governor!

I believe the man who was drunk at the funeral has higher ideas of decency than that.

And I don't think Mr. Meador should suffer a loss of votes because he has friends who have obtunded ideas of propriety and decency.

The saloon is bad enough, but some people prefer it to the "blind tiger."

Prohibition is the prolific womb of the "blind tiger."

Some say good men advocate "prohibition" so that they can conscientiously avoid State and county license, and from such hard earned savings contribute more liberally to the "objects fostered by the church" and be unctiously remembered in the prayers of the good men who approve and endorse fraud.

I think Mr. Meador is of the "Black Belt," and, reading between the lines of clerical endorsement, I think I can discover "the tie that binds" him to the "truly good" who stand for the real bad.

A lately defeated candidate honestly confessed that he feared and avoided clerical endorsement!

He was an observant man!

It is intimated in a Democratic paper that Dr. Cunningham, whose movements indicate lameness, is to leave the race track for Governer and be substituted by a prominent Baptist preacher. And it is thought he will have 20,000 Baptist votes to start with—because he is a Baptist!

Why, in 1892 this same Baptist preacher wrote a letter "to the brethren" not to vote for Kolb!

Kolb was a Baptist and overwhelmingly elected, but if this Baptist preacher ever condemned the immoral unrighteous, unchristian methods of episcopal enjoyment of what the people intended for Kolb, I never heard of it.

I think it likely he is now worthy the support of every immoral, unrighteous, unchristian Baptist, the fragrance of whose detestable character "smells to heaven."

I am a Baptist, and I don't think any Baptist is under any Christian obligation to violate his moral conscience.

There are candidates now before the Democratic voters for nomination who hesitated not to take and enjoy salaries voted by the people to other men!

That is a great deal worse than drowning sorrow in drink at a funeral!

Did the upper clergy or religious press receive any shock at that?

There is a vast difference between the sheep thief and the salary thief—in respectability.

If, at least, one good man was shocked at an impropriety of manner perhaps the good men may hush consistrained to be shocked at breaches of morals. "Who'll be the first?"

I do wish the upper clergy would "come out on the Lord's side" and stand for right and decency, even if reward be postponed till the "sweet bye and bye." J. C. FONVILLE.

CLANTON'S NEW OFFICIALS.

It is to be Mayor N. A. Kicker and council. If the new regime does its duty, it can depend upon THE UNION for anything it can do. Let us hope for the best, and pray that the public service will be conducted in a public manner.

THORSBY.

Mr. Thomas Bosworth returned last week (Tuesday) from Portland, Ind., where he was called on account of the illness and death of his daughter, Mrs. Bert Gibson. Mr. I. N. Borden is back in Thorsby again. We are glad to number him among our citizens. Mr. Goodgame was in Clanton Wednesday. Mrs. Eggen entertained the Norwegian Society of the United Church last Thursday. There were about sixty-five present. Rev. Morgan was unable to keep his appointment here last Sunday, and many were disappointed in not being able to hear him. A number of the young people surprised Miss Clara Soberg last Friday evening at the home of Miss Hannah Paulson. Miss Grace Michelson entertained the "Busy Bees" last Saturday afternoon. Mr. A. Tornblom is in Thorsby for a short visit. The Swedish Young People's Society will meet at the home of the Misses Malmquist next Tuesday evening. All are invited. Mr. Anderson, who arrived here recently from Denmark, is stopping at Mr. Villadsen's. Miss Florence Thorson, of Calera, is visiting relatives here. Mr. Carl Olson returned to his home in Michigan last week. Mr. P. K. Villadsen went to Jemison Friday evening. Judge Reynolds and wife, of Clanton, were in town Sunday. Lonnie Reagan was in town Sunday between trains. Mr. Lund returned to his home in Chicago Monday. Mr. P. W. Peterson transacted business in Clanton Monday. Martin Sorrell left Sunday morning for a short visit at Coleanor. The friends of Misses Sarah Colyer and Alma Hovey are sorry to hear of their being on the sick list and wish them a speedy recovery. Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Curtis, of Elgin, Ills., spent a few days in Thorsby last week, leaving Saturday morning for New Orleans. Mrs. H. H. Groethe went to Calera Sunday morning. Miss Lila May Robinson returned home Saturday from Birmingham, where she has been visiting. Mr. Ben Olson, of Kansas City, Mo., is here visiting relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Goss have moved to Birmingham. Mr. J. S. Gerald was in Clanton Tuesday. Mr. P. Olson and family, from Chicago, are visiting at the home of Mr. G. Berlin. Miss Deshazor, from Ohio, arrived in Thorsby Saturday evening, and went from here to Mulberry to visit her brother. Miss Nellie Malmquist has gone to Birmingham. Mr. Goodgame has moved into the Skov house recently vacated by Charles Robinson. Mr. and Mrs. Roman have sold their home here and left for Birmingham Tuesday morning, where they expect to reside. Mrs. Roman expects to take a trip North soon. Mr. J. J. Stanley and family visited friends in Jemison Sunday evening. Miss Belle Cline is enjoying a visit from her sister, Miss Sarah Cline, of Leechburg, Pa. Mrs. Stindahl, from Minnesota, is stopping with Mr. and Mrs. Dyrhood. Mr. Andrew Johnson, formerly of Hancock, Mich., has moved his family into the Brandt house, southeast of town. In spite of all the rain Tuesday afternoon a few of the "Sunshine" girls met with Miss Anirea Hanson at the Thorsby Inn and had an enjoyable time. Miss Selina Malmquist is home again from Clanton. The Ladies' Auxiliary meets with Mrs. G. C. Michelson March 28. A "Sunbeam Band" for children has been organized lately and meets every Sunday afternoon at 2:30 at the public school house. Frank White, one of our former Thorsby boys, graduated this past week from the Agricultural school in Minnesota. We are glad to hear that the fruit was not as badly hurt by the recent frost as was first supposed. Quite a number of our citizens have been doing some good work on the roads lately. Among those who attended the Teachers' Institute in Jemison last week were Misses Fay and Gallagher, Messrs. Hix and Rascoe. Miss Gallagher visited with her parents in Montgomery Saturday and Sunday. Ice cream can be had every Saturday evening from 5 to 10 at the millinery parlors. Mr. Goodgame has sold out his interest in the livery business to Mr. Thomas. We now have two liverymen, the other being Mr. J. I. Stanley. Mr. Scott Caverno made a trip to Montgomery the 21st.

"ANON."

SOUTH BESSIE.

We again appear before the many readers of The Union, hoping our humble contributions to its columns may interest some one. The health of this community is fairly good. Our mail carrier on R. F. D. No. 3 from Jemison, A. D. Gentry, seems to be very popular with his patrons. He was a welcome guest at John Barnhill's recently for dinner. It was log rolling day, and that means good dinners. Ira Ward, of Randolph, was among his friends here recently. Well, South Bessie is still going to the front. We are going to have a telephone line from Randolph to J. P. Atchison's store and from Atchison's to Bessie by way of E. Z. Nix's. In point of morals we are equal, if not superior, to other boasted localities. Let the Macedonia "Bird" come again. If any of the brethren wish to reach the people they should place their articles in The Union, the people's paper, so we can all read them. We welcome "Papa's Pet," of Wylam, to The Union. Come again. The rain here on the 16th was terrible—the heaviest in many years, but since then we have had some lovely weather. The birds are welcoming spring, while the lovely blast of Pete Smith's bugle dies away on the distant hills. Z. J. Jones and daughter, Miss Ursula, visited the family of Assessor Pounds on the 25th. The official work of Assessor Pounds shows up beautifully. We don't think Chilton county will ever regret electing Mr. Pounds to office. The little school girl of Mars Hill is fine. Come again to the columns of The Union. The rapid growth of Chilton is wonderful all along the line since the people took charge of it several years ago. Let the people remain in charge, with the reformers solidly united, governed by honesty, truth and progress, and we will continue to go forward as we have in the past. Any other course will be fatal.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

CENTER POINT.

Editor Union:

We've had some of the coldest weather I ever saw in March, and all the peach blooms are killed. And then that Sunday rain, it made branches like creeks, and the creeks were made rivers for a while, and the land was worked mighty bad. There were many washouts on the M. & O. R. R. and one wreck near Billingsley; killed the engineer and injured the fireman and flagman. But that is all gone now, and you only hear "Gee" and "Haw" on every side. Well, Mr. Editor, we read the article in last week's paper on "Corn Culture," and we think it is fine. Now, brethren, it behooves every farmer in the South to look well to his corn crop, and to all crops that he can well consume at home, for we all know that when a man raises all that he needs at home in corn, oats, peas, potatoes, molasses, meat and lard, and makes cotton a surplus crop he is the man that will have some ready cash when he sells his cotton at a profit, because he can afford to hold it until he gets a just price for it. Capt. Usher's mill will be ready for work soon. Our school closed last week, and we certainly had a good one, taught by Prof. Davis, of Billingsley. We were up at Popwell's school house the night of the debate between Messrs. Riggins and Roper, and for the sake of our lives we don't see how the judges could give the decision against the negative, in the face of all the facts and figures that were presented. Yours for better times, C. W. L.

MARS HILL.

Dear Editor:

Will you allow me a space in your Union paper, it being my first time? I am a little Sunday school girl, 12 years old. We are having a nice little Sunbeam society, and I am going to it every Sunday, and I go to Sunday school also and study my Sunday school book. J. W. Scott had a log-rolling last Thursday, with a nice dinner, which everybody enjoyed. Good-bye for this time, but I will come again.

LITTLE S. S. GIRL.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, the Father of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

G.; Frank Dubose, I. G.; T. J. Patterson and Tom Smitherman, R. S.; A. L. Bullard and J. Fuller, L. S. The new lodge starts with bright prospects, there being many prospective members in sight.

WYLAM.

That cheeky our peaches are gone, for that little snow made the blooms quiver. The Ladies' Aid Society held prayer meeting Tuesday of last week at Mrs. Futrell's, conducted by Mrs. Brabham. Mrs. Freeman was there. We are glad to see her out again. W. A. Riggins visited his parents in Chilton recently. Mrs. Ike Halkes, of East Thomas, was here Thursday. Mrs. J. L. Mitchell left Friday for Cullman, where her sister is sick. What's the matter with "One Forsaken?" Come again. We like to read your piece in our good Union paper. Oh, this is so much like spring it makes us feel right to hear the birds singing and see the violets blooming. Mrs. W. A. Riggins visited Mrs. C. L. Sorrell Friday. Little Luther's curls are looking sweet, but mamas says they must be taken off. Mrs. H. C. Maddox and sister spent Sunday with Mrs. Frances Riggins. Succes to the dear Union and its many readers. PAPA'S PET.

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your paper for a few words from our community, it being my first attempt at writing to a paper. I am a little girl of 14 years of age, and my papa takes The Union, and I do like to read it. We have a nice Sunday school, and are doing fine with our Sunbeam Band, having about twenty-five members now. We had a nice singing Sunday evening. Our regular singing is on the fourth Sunday in each month. Mrs. Horseley and daughter, Miss Addie, of Jemison, visited our Sunbeam Band Sunday evening, and we were very glad to have them with us. I've written enough for this time, but trust to come again.

STATE BAPTIST ORPHANAGE.

Evergreen, Ala., March 28, 1906.

To Whom It May Concern:

Having received complaints in regard to the "Orphans' Call" not being sent in, I take this means of letting the cause be known. The editor not being able to secure a printer, and some damage done by fire to the office, has rendered it impossible to get out paper yet, but, however, you will receive it one year (that is the subscribers). But if you desire your money refunded, just drop Rev. John W. Stewart a card saying, "Please refund my subscription," and he will without delay. Fraternally,

E. L. BARLOW,
tf Sol.

LOMAX.

Health of community is good, but farmers are badly behind with their work, and a few days of sunshine would be very acceptable. Elder John Dykes preached at Jackson's Chapel Sunday to an attentive congregation. Elder Sam Crumpton will preach at the same place on the next fourth Sunday and Saturday before. He is an able minister and a good school teacher. The patrons of our school would do well if they could secure him for the next school if he would accept. We learn that there is more machinery to be put in at Lomax in the near future, and from all signs it will be a town yet. Best wishes to The Union and its readers. OBSERVER.

MARS HILL.

Dear Editor:

Our little Sunbeam Society is getting along well. Miss Addie Horseley came from near Jemison and helped us out in our society. I think she did all she could to help us, and thank her very much for her assistance. We have twenty-six members and are looking for more pretty soon. F. M. Langston and wife dined at A. J. Scott's Sunday. Martin Langston visited Johnson's Sunday. MAMA'S PET.

SONG OF THE POLICY-HOLDER.

Come, give me the gaff—I'm a policy-holder;
Come, give me the gaff and add to my joy.
Though furrowed my brow, till you'd think me much older,
In knowledge I feel I'm the veriest boy.

An agent once came to my neat little dwelling
And sang me a song full of love for the poor:
The story is old and not worth re-telling.
Yet sadder than e'en the "last sigh of the Moor."
He had me afraid to go forth to my toiling
And leave my good wife and the chicks that are ours;
Behind ev'ry bush was the death-serpent coiling—
I smelled the pine-coffin and waxy-white flowers.

He told of a plan by benevolent persons
To care for my loved ones when I should be gone.
His story had surely had lots of rehearsin's—
Since then I have learned 'twas a bundle of con.
The charges, he said, for this kindly protection,
Were scarce what it cost the good men in the scheme—
Of late I've been reading of certain detections
That rudely awakened me out of my dream.

I find that my money's been paying for yachtes
And horses and homes and champag ny galore;
I find that I've made millionaire-men in batches,
And plutocrats, too, by the dozen and score.
I find I've invested in things never heard of,
Contributed much to the boodle campaigns—
With other such things that I knew not a word of,
And now I am getting the laugh for my pains.

Come, kick me around—I'm a policy-holder;
Come, gull me and skin me and heighten my joy.
Though ashen my cheek till you'd think me much older.
In verdancy still I'm the veriest boy.
—Strickland W. Gillilan, in Puck.

Old Time Ways.

The soldiers were on the war-path in a flash, and there was a regular mix-up. I saw one of the haymakers draw a murderous-looking knife, and before I could get to him he plunged it into the back of one of the cavalry men. I went for him, and as I reached and grabbed him by the collar, two or three of his friends ran toward me and one of them yelled, "Cuss you, take your hands off my pard." I said nothing but kept moving out of the crush still holding my man. The soldier he had knifed lay quite still with wide open, staring eyes. He was stripped naked to the waist, having gotten ready to fight a fellow soldier with his fists. The blood from the knife-cut nearly covered his whole back and breast. He lay half on his back with his face turned to the sky. I noticed all this, for he presented such a revolting sight.—W. J. Carney and Chauncey Thomas, in "Kit Carson Town in the Early Seventies." From Outing.

A Sordid Match.

Sums of money have relative value. To the man who has nothing $1000 looks like a neat little pile, while to the man who has just failed for a million it is not a drop in the bucket.

A traveler from one of the rural countries in Europe where the people live simple lives and seldom see the color of money tells a story of a husband and wife who were always quarreling. Getting on confidential terms with the man, the traveler asked him why they didn't make up.

"I don't want to make up," declared the man frankly. "I never did care anything for her. I only married her for her money."

"I didn't know she had money."

"Yes, she did. She had forty dollars."

Evenfall.

Come, heap the logs, and send the blaze up higher,
And make good cheer about the roaring fire—
Nay, but the bluebird's here! Or, stay, I think
I heard the laughing of the bobolink!
Was that the ash upon a coal took shape,
Or is 't the blue bloom of a pulpy grape?
Within my chimney-corner's happy gleam
A cloud of wizard sprites the seasons seem,
And all the year a many-colored dream!

Can I mistake, or was 't but yester eve
I saw the firefly-dance the fairies weave?
Was it this morn that from his sphere of flame
Love stooped, deific, uttering my name?
Surely no music or of flute or bird
Like the child's voice this afternoon I heard!
Through what meridians of light you fare,
Oh, lovely Life, and through what stress you bear
My wondering soul to this serener air!

—Harriet Prescott Spofford in The Century.

SAVED BY HIS DOG

Last summer, while on a trip through the White Hills, it chanced one night that, sitting out on the veranda of the modest little hotel that nestled at the foot of a high mountain, the conversation turned upon dogs, and the sagacity they had been known to exhibit on very many occasions.

Among the little group we formed there was an old man, whose home was in the valley some half a mile away. For some time he had taken no part in the conversation, but had puffed away at his pipe with apparent enjoyment.

At length there came a pause in the conversation, and after it had continued for a minute or more, the old gentleman removed the pipe from his lips and gave utterance to the following remarks:

"There isn't a critter living that knows so much as a dog. Leastways, I had one once that knew nigh about as much as a human being. I've seen a good many people in my day who hadn't the common sense he had."

"I don't doubt that you are right," said I. "Dogs know a great deal, and I've seen some people who knew very little. They are about as good friends as we have among the brute creation. There is no creature who will stick by a man like them."

"I know that," he answered. "The one I speak of did as much by me as a man could. He saved my life."

"How was that?" I asked; and in response he told the following story:

"It was in the summer several years ago," he began. "It was in that year, you know, that the great slides took place among the White Mountains, by which the Willey family were destroyed. The morning on which it happened I left my home, which was down yonder, in the exact spot where I live now, to get to the settlements at Conway. In those days there was no store nearer than there at which we could get the things we needed in the house.

"I was a young man then, and had a wife and two small children. We lived in a stout cabin, about half a mile from my father's, and the only brute things that I owned were a cow and my dog, Nero. It was seldom when I went away that I allowed Nero to go with me. The wild beasts were pretty plenty in those days, and I wanted him to stay and keep them away from the cabin. I was afraid they might venture too close sometime, and carry away my children, who might be playing about the door. But I had little fears of this so long as Nero was there to guard them.

"When I set out that morning he wanted to follow me badly, and I had to speak twice to him before he would remain behind. Sitting on the doorstep, he watched me until I entered the woods and was concealed from his sight. Much as he wanted to go, I had no fears of his following. He knew too much for that. He always seemed to understand almost as well as a human being.

"I went on foot, and all the way down to Conway I could not help looking at the sky. It seemed as though I had never seen it threaten rain so before. The clouds came so low that they covered the mountain tops, and appeared ready to sink down into the very valley itself.

"I got to Conway a little before noon, and hurried to get through with my business as soon as I could. I knew that a fearful storm was close at hand and unless I hurried up I should catch a wetting. Before I was through the rain came down in torrents. The people at the store tried to prevent me from going home, but it was no use. Somehow or other I never felt so worried in my life. My mind was made up that I would go home to Mary and the children if it was possible for me to get there.

"I never saw it rain so before or since as it did that afternoon. Instead of coming down in drops, it seemed to pour by the bucketful. The clouds, which had been low and dense all the forenoon, now sank lower, and as I went onward it seemed that I would soon get to a place where I could touch them with my hand.

"The streams I crossed seemed to rise even as I looked upon them, and before I was half way home, some of the smaller bridges were swept away, and I formed some difficulty in getting across the raging torrents. I knew that the branch stream which crossed the road about half a mile from my house must be rising fast, and I was fearful that the bridge across it would be swept away before I could get safely to the other side. If it was, I knew that it would be impossible for me to reach home, for fording would be out of the question.

"I made the best time I could, and just before nightfall I came in sight of the branch. It was bankful and running like a mill race. Great trees and other driftwood were borne along on its surface as swiftly and easily as though they had been straws.

"The bridge was still there, but it was trembling and insecure, and each moment the angry water threatened to take it along. For a minute I hesitated about crossing, for it seemed that I was tempting fate to do so. But I thought of my wife and children, and of the prospect that the stream might rise enough to sweep my cabin away, and this decided me. Giving a leap, I sprang upon the bridge and landed toward the other side.

"I had not reached the center before I felt it moving beneath my feet. Another instant and it started from its foundation, and was being swept along with terrible swiftness down the stream.

"A human being could not stand the current for a moment, and therefore it was no use for me to leap into it and endeavor to reach the shore. I must go with the raft and share its fate, whatever it might be.

"But it was not long that I was left to cling to it. It struck upon some rocks in the bed of the stream and went to pieces.

"A part of the wreck hung to the rocks, and to this I clung. It saved me from death for that time, but it was only postponing the fatal moment. The fast-rising water would soon dislodge my frail support.

"I was not more than a dozen feet from the bank, to reach which I would have given all I possessed. But no man could withstand the rushing torrent that I was passing through. On the bank one of the planks of the bridge had caught, and I gazed wistfully upon it. It was long enough to bridge the space between me and the shore. If a man was there he could thrust it out to me, and I would be saved.

"Although I felt sure that I should be swept away by the angry flood before any one could succor me, I shouted for help at the top of my voice. I hardly expected to be heard in the howling of the storm, but my voice did reach the ears of a friend.

"In less than three minutes from the time I first cried out, my dog Nero stood upon the bank, looking out at me.

The motion of my frail support warned me that it was going. Was it possible for me to make Nero understand what I wanted? He was strong enough to seize the end of the plank, which was the farthest up the stream, and bring it out to me. I hardly thought I could, but there was nothing like trying. Drowning men, you know, catch at straws.

"The dog stood uttering low whines as though he comprehended my situation. Taking my knife from my pocket I threw it so that it hit the end of the plank. With a bound Nero sprang to the spot, and taking the end of the timber in his mouth, swam boldly out to me.

"It was hardly a moment before the swift current brought the dog and plank within my reach. I caught the end of the plank, and by a great effort raised it upon the timber on which I stood. The other end rested upon the bank. There was not an instant to spare. Springing upon it, I landed over the narrow bridge, with Nero at my heels.

"I was not a moment too soon. My feet had hardly touched the land before the flood carried everything away. Nero had saved my life by a hair's breadth.

"I reached my home in safety. My wife had not heard me call, but the dog had demanded to be let out into the storm, and she had opened the door for him. Had his quick ear not caught his master's voice then, he would never have heard it again.—New York Weekly.

ANIMAL DOUBLES OF HUMANS.

Everybody Said to Resemble Creature of the Lower Life.

"All of us have our counterparts in the animal world," began the man. "Some animal we resemble in manners and looks. Of course the counterpart of many is the ape, the monkey, the baboon. That is only in the order of things; but a lot of people look like birds and animals you see about the house. I have seen women who looked like wrens and behaved like them, little brown, sputtering, chattering, fussy things. And there are others who look like fish. Haven't you seen old maid parrots? I knew an old maid once who looked so much like her parrot you couldn't tell them apart, except that one sat on a perch.

"Go down to little Syria if you want to see people who look like dragons. The heads, I mean. There is one woman there whose head is such a perfect counterpart of the dragon head, square jawed, bulging eyes, flat forehead, you expect her every moment to develop iridescent wings and fly."

"I wish you'd hush," begged the woman. "You have spoiled the looks of every friend I have for me. There's Smith. Since you called him the mouse, it is all I can do to keep from gathering up my skirts, screaming and jumping on a chair whenever he comes around. His ears, the shape of his face. I never saw anybody look more like a mouse, but I should never have thought of it if you hadn't said it. And there's Carlston with the face of a pig. I used to like him. Now when I look at him I expect him to grunt. I used to think he was bright. Now I can't see anything in his face but the stupid look of that terrible animal. Tellme. You have seen Katie What animal does she look like? a kitten?"

The man occupied a moment in thought.

"No," he answered then. "She looks like a little Japanese poodle."

"It's true," assented the woman. "All she needs is a few bangs over her eyes and a collar. Now tell me what animal I look like. Tell me quick without taking time to think. You must have decided long ago, you are so good at detecting."

The man put his hands over his eyes for a second, then looked brightly up.

"You look like a gazelle," said he, "with your big brown eyes."

"For once," said the woman gravely, "you have done yourself proud."—New York Press.

STATIONERY CLOUDS.

Curious Formations on the Windward Sides of Meuntain Crests.

Swiss meteorologists have often noticed a phenomenon in the neighborhood of Alpine crests that for a time provoked their curiosity. It was the continued existence of a small cloud above or on the windward side of a ridge, when the air elsewhere was clear. The explanation which has now been adopted is this: The atmosphere contains a good deal of invisible vapor. The quantity is so large that a little chilling will cause it to condense, for the amount of water vapor the air can hold in suspension depends on temperature. Ordinarily, as one ascends the temperature falls, the average being about 1 degree Fahrenheit for every 300 feet. If, therefore, a barrier be interposed, a current of air will be forced upward in order to pass over it. The air cools, and if the moisture in it is near the saturation point enough condensation will occur to make a cloud. After the current reaches the other side of a ridge it descends, the air grows warmer and its ability to hold the vapor increases. The conditions that cause condensation cease to exist, and on the leeward side of the mountain the cloud disappears. Though the same thing has been observed in other countries than Switzerland, it is of infrequent occurrence, and only within a few years has this type of cloud been reported in the United States.

One of the first observers of it was Professor William M. Davis, of Cambridge, Mass., who is an enthusiastic mountain climber, and also a high authority in meteorology. He told a geographical society in Philadelphia in 1903 of an observation of a single "helm" cloud by him in the mountainous districts of North Carolina. For a time it was believed that he was ahead of every one else in noticing the phenomenon. Frank W. Proctor writes to "The United States Weather Review," however, to say that the sight is common at Waynesville, N. C., and that he witnessed it as long ago as 1897. He describes two or three specimens which he has observed over two ranges in that vicinity. He adds that on the sides of the mountains facing the valley what might be called dynamic fog is frequent. That is to say, after rains, or when there is much dampness, the wind blowing up these mountain sides forms fog sheets on the windward slopes, when no fog is to be seen in any other direction.

A Man of Many Friends.

It was characteristic of the late Sir Henry Irving to make friends of Americans whom he met in London, and to show his appreciation of the esteem and admiration in which he was held here. But it would have been asking too much to expect him to be familiar with each person's claim to his recognition. A contributor to the New York Sun says that it was often a case of "going it blind" on the part of the actor.

A certain New Yorker arriving in London found an invitation from Sir Henry to one of the famous suppers in the Beefsteak Room of the Lyceum Theatre. He accepted the invitation with delight, had as good a time as the guests at these gatherings invariably did, and ultimately became a close friend of the actor.

But neither at that first supper nor at any time later did his host say a word to explain how he happened to invite a man he had never met before. So at last his American friend decided to question him on the subject.

"Tell me, Irving," he said, "how did you happen to ask me to take supper with you ten years ago in London I've often wondered why you did it."

"So have I," answered the actor, blandly, "and to save my life I was never able to recall what the reason was. But I'm sure it was a good one!"—Youth's Companion.

CANCER RESEARCH.

Valuable Discoveries Being Made Regarding This Dread Disease.

The origin and nature of cancer, with a view to the discovery of means for its prevention or cure, are being studied at this time with unprecedented thoroughness and care, and while success has not yet been achieved, some results of promise and importance have been attained. It is said that more has been accomplished toward the solution of a problem which has heretofore baffled the medical science of the world during the last two years and a half than in all the preceding quarter of a century, and conservative students and observers are confident that the light is breaking and that in a relatively brief period the mastery of this dread disease will be accomplished.

In the meanwhile some points of an encouraging character have been determined with a high degree of certainty.

It has for one thing been ascertained that there is no good reason for believing that the occurrence of the malady is increasing in frequency. This has frequently been asserted by men who spoke with some authority, but their statement is now declared to be inaccurate. It is based upon statistics which examination has proved to be untrustworthy, and it is now the better opinion, it is the opinion of the highly-trained experts who are carrying on the studies of the London imperial fund, that cancer is no more prevalent to-day than it has ever been.

Another point which has been pretty well if not absolutely settled relates to the question of heredity. There are probably few families in which some case of cancer has not occurred more or less remotely. The circumstance is usually as far as possible concealed, but to many of those who become aware of it the anxiety which it occasions is none the less distressing because it is likely not to be disclosed. They worry about the possibility of their meeting the same fate as some one or other of their relatives, and this is the very worst thing they could do.

The whole subject is so obscure that one hesitates to speak of any phase of it with any assurance, but the observation that the occurrence of cancer is often connected with prolonged mental anxiety may not be without some some significance. It is therefore gratifying to note that the researches of the imperial fund, while not absolutely disproving, very seriously discredit the prevailing belief about the hereditary nature of the affliction.

They are also reassuring in a third direction. They show that the disease is not in the slightest degree infectious. It can be communicated from one person to another, but only by means of a surgical operation of the utmost delicacy and difficulty, and so for all practical purposes it is no more infectious than gout. This means that a patient may be visited without the least risk and there are many to whom this will be welcome information. These are valuable discoveries and it may fairly be supposed that they will lead to others. Already the investigators are on the verge of the great secret. That they will presently apprehend it need not be doubted.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Pure Air Devices in Demand.

Hard apace after the water filter and distiller in the race for hygiene comes the ventilator. A Boston builder says that ventilation is, in effect, the process of dilution, and that when the vitiation to be maintained in apartments is decided the necessary constant supply of fresh air to maintain this standard may be calculated. The average production of carbonic acid by an adult at rest is 0.6 cubic feet per hour, the proportion of this gas in the external air being four parts in 10,000. The 0.6 cubic feet of carbonic acid produced per hour by a single individual will require for its diluting 3000 cubic feet of air per hour. But the absolute air volume to be supplied cannot be specified without a thorough cannot be specified without a thorough knowledge of all the conditions and modifying circumstances—the climate, construction of the building, size of the rooms, number of occupants, their healthfulness and activity, together with the time occupied, all must be considered.

Ring-Tailed Wild Cat.

A ring-tailed cat, an animal decidedly rare in Northern Michigan, has been caught by Herman Thiele, a Negaunee man, in a trap set at Goose Lake, five miles distant. It was the first specimen ever captured by either Mr. Thiele or his father, and together they have been engaged in trapping for the last forty-five years.

The animal has fine, silky gray fur. Though there are some black stripes down the back, the most striking characteristic is a series of black rings around the bushy tail. In this appendage it differs radically from the ordinary wild cat. The wild cat, like the lynx, is possessed of a bobtail, while the ring-tailed cat has a tail more than a foot in length and very bushy.

A Schoolboy Ghost.

While staying at a friend's house in India, which had formerly been a boys' school, a little girl was surprised on the first night of her visit to see a fair-haired boy, clad in bathing costume, walk through her room into the dining room beyond. Thinking it was the son of her hosts, whom she had not yet seen, she rushed after him, but was greatly surprised when told that no one answering her description of the boy had been seen.

It was not till some years later that she learned that what she had seen was the ghost of one of the schoolboys, who had been drowned in the swimming bath, which adjoined the room where she had slept.—London Referee.

MIDDLE LIF

A Time When Women Are Susceptible to Dread Diseases—Intelligent Women for it. Two Relate their Experiences.

The "change of life" is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

Every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active—and with a host of nervous irritations make life a burden. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness, inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system.

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and it will be furnished absolutely free of charge. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, her assistant before her decease, and for twenty-five years since her advice has been freely given to sick women.

Read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with displacement of the organs for years and was passing through the change of life. My abdomen was badly swollen; my stomach was sore; I had dizzy spells, sick headaches, and was very nervous.

Mrs. A.E.G. Hyland

"I wrote you for advice and treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, happy to say that all those distressing symptoms left me and I have passed safely through the change of life, a well woman, recommending your medicine to my friends."—Mrs. Annie E. G. Hyland, Hagerstown, Md.

Another Woman's Gratitude.

"During change of life words cannot express what I suffered. My physician said I had a cancerous condition of the female organs. One day I read some of the testimonials of women who had been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it and to write her for advice. Your medicine made a new woman, and all my bad symptoms disappeared.

"I advise every woman at this period of her life to take your medicine and write to you for advice."—Mrs. Lizzie Hinkle, Salem, Ohio.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Hyland and Mrs. Hinkle it will do for other women at this time of life.

It has conquered pain, built up health, and prolonged life in cases utterly baffled physicians.

Freak of Lightning.

Detective Delahay, of the Southern Rhodesia constabulary, was struck by lightning in a recent storm. He was hurled to the ground insensible and when he had recovered consciousness made his way home in a dazed condition, all the damage that he noticed being a burned mark on his trousers. Next morning he was unable to attend to his duties and felt generally unwell. A colleague then discovered that the two outer fingers of the officer's right hand were fleshless, the bones having been burned bare.

Under the auspices of the Central Association For Stopping the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors on Sunday a day of prayer and intercession was observed at Exeter hall, London. The proceedings lasted without intermission from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m. The time was passed with prayers and hymns interspersed with speeches.

FOOD HELPS

In Management of a R. R.

Speaking of food a railroad man says:

"My work puts me out in all kinds of weather, subject to irregular hours for meals and compelled to eat all kinds of food.

"For 7 years I was constantly troubled with indigestion, caused by eating heavy, fatty, starchy, greasy, poorly cooked food, such as are most accessible to men in my business. Generally each meal or lunch was followed by distressing pains and burning sensations in my stomach, which destroyed my sleep and almost unfitted me for work. My brain was so muddy and foggy that it was hard for me to discharge my duties properly.

"This lasted till about a year ago, when my attention was called to Grape-Nuts food by a newspaper ad. and I concluded to try it. Since then I have used Grape-Nuts at nearly every meal and sometimes between meals. We railroad men have little chance to prepare our food in our cabooses and I find Grape-Nuts mighty handy for it is ready cooked.

"To make a long story short, Grape-Nuts has made a new man of me. I have no more burning distress in my stomach, nor any other symptom of indigestion. I can digest anything so long as I eat Grape-Nuts, and my brain works as clearly and accurately as an engineer's watch, and my old nervous troubles have disappeared entirely." A Noted Briton.

Mr. John Morley—Honest John Morley, as somebody has nicknamed him—is a good speaker. He is, however, so ready a speaker as one might suppose who has only delivered speeches and not actually heard delivered. There are always a literary flavor and form about Morley's public utterances—no matter what the subject may happen to be. He has a quiet and unassuming manner when upon his feet, and his sentences are almost as eloquent as his silence, for they light up and "catch fire" easier, as it were.

New Cure for Seasickness.

The ship physician of the American liner Patricia publishes an account of a new method for preventing seasickness by means of an electric vibration chair. Six of these chairs were placed aboard the Patricia and connected with the electric light circuit. The sedative effect of the chair upon a patient when vibrated in the chair is noticeable, reducing the patient's nervous excitement. The use of these electric chairs will be extended to other steamers.

THE PULPIT.

EARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. L. L. TAYLOR.

"Square Deal in Religion."

Yonkers, N. Y.—As the subject of the early Sunday the Rev. Livingston Taylor, pastor of the Puritan Congregational Church, spoke on "The Square Deal in Religion." He took his text from Proverbs xii.::22: "They that deal truly are His delight," and Psalms cxlv.::17: "The righteous Lord loveth righteousness." Mr. Taylor said:

"The kingdom of heaven is a square deal on earth. From the night visions of Jacob speeds to the day dreams of Zechariah it is peace and good will on earth among men, which the hosts of heaven have been bestirring themselves to bring about.

"And He who came from heaven lived brother to all men, that they might ever after dwell as brethren.

"But there can be no kingdom of heaven on earth with any square deal unless men on earth with any square deal in heaven. The square deal has its horizontal lines as well as its vertical lines as well as its horizontal.

"The horizon never limited Christ's vision. He lived for the day when men would treat God right. In the kingdom no man will have anything to fear from any other man. The square deal in the world is coming around more and more to Christ's estimate of religion, the power that must set things right among men. But in His day and among men the problem of the square deal was religion itself. It has always been hard to get a square deal for religion. It has always been hard to get a square deal in presenting the claims of religion. It has always been hard to keep a square deal at the bottom of religion. These things should be borne in mind by us all as we enter upon the special religious activities and exercises of the Lenten season.

"A square deal in religion involves a square deal for religion. And this involves two things: first, a fair-minded attitude toward religious phenomena, institutions, doctrines and persons, and second, a determination to deal fairly with our own religious nature, a determination to give the soul a square deal.

"A square deal more fairly with the fact of religion than they used to. They are settling down to the conclusion that the human race is "incorrigibly religious." They are beginning to understand that the world's history could not have been written as it has been if men had no capacity and need for religion. Religion must be recognized as a legitimate human interest unless we want to throw out of court the most persistent of all the facts of facts. Religion must be recognized as one of the great human interests if we are to maintain any sort of proportion in our view of human life as a whole. Religion must be recognized as the supreme human interest if it would be consistent with any reasonable definition of religion. If religion is an affair of the soul in its relations with the infinite nothing short of the most reasonable or right. We should expect to see men, as we do, striving to make religion supreme, not content with anything short of the religious interpretation of the universe and of human life, determined to have some sort of religious system, spending and being spent in the service of religious institutions, their churches, their missions. They should deal as fairly with these things as we do with the facts which convince us that it is natural for men to have music, that it is natural for them to express themselves and to find pleasure in the varied forms of art. It is natural for men to concern themselves with the right and wrongs things and of their own lives. It is not fair dealing with the fact of religion requires that we should recognize the limitations and the inevitable imperfection of all the forms in which religious aspirations of men find expression. It is nothing to the discredit of religion if our best efforts to embody it fall short of those visions of glory with which our souls are obsessed. It is no less a treasure because we have it in earthen vessels. Religious systems are confessedly imperfect. Religious persons are full of faults. But they exist. They are facts. And they are as good evidence of man's religious nature as they are of the imperfection of all things human. But how about our own religious nature, yours and mine? Have we been treating it fairly? In 1876 George Romanes, a brilliant young British scientist, came to the conclusion that he had no right to a soul or a God, and that it was his "obvious duty to still his belief" and to "discipline his intellect with regard to this matter into a state of the purest skepticism."

"I am not ashamed to confess," he wrote at the time, "that with this virtual negation of God the universe to me has lost its soul of loveliness." And he was impressed by "the appalling contrast between the hallowed glory of the creed which was once mine, and the lonely mystery of existence as I now find it." A little less than twenty years later George Romanes became convinced that in seeking to deal unflinchingly with the facts of physical science he had ignored the most significant of all facts, the most direct known, the most completely attested of all facts, the facts of his own religious nature. He came to recognize that it was "reasonable to be a Christian believer." Before his untimely death he returned "to that full, deliberate communion with the church of Jesus Christ which he had for so many years conscientiously compelled to forego." In the multitude of his thoughts within him he had secured a square deal for his soul.

"Our difficulties may not be his, but we have them. The things which make it hard for us to secure our souls their chance may be very different from the things which made it hard for him. Scientific men of to-day have ways to make them feel as the seemingly triumphant materialistic of the last century made young Romanes feel about having a God and a soul. But our difficulties may be of another class entirely. Perhaps they are far less creditable to our intellectual sincerity, less creditable to our moral purpose, than declinations and the multiplied opportunities for gratifying them that make it hard for their souls to get fair hearing. "The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life are not of the Father," John tells us. But something more is true. They out-Herod Herod in their conspiracy against the

It has always ...hard to keep a square deal at the ... of religion. These things should ...one in mind by us all as we enter ...the special religious activities and ...leges of the Lenten season.

"...e square deal in religion involves ...are deal for religion. And this in ... involves two things: first, a fair... ...ed attitude toward religious phe... ...ons, institutions, doctrines and per... ...; and second, a determination to ... fairly with our own religious na... ...a determination to give the soul a ...re deal.

"But for dealing with the fact of re... ...on requires that we should recog... ...e the limitations and the inevitable ...perfection of all the forms in which ...religious aspirations of men find ...pression. It is nothing to the dis... ...it of religion if our best efforts to ...only it fall short of those visions of ...glory with which our souls are ...ssed. It is no less a treasure be... ...use we have it in earthen vessels ...religious systems are confessedly im... ...erfect. Religious persons are full of ...uits. But they exist. They are ...rs. And they are as good evidence ...man's religious nature as they are ...the imperfection of all things human. ...But how about our own religious na... ...e, yours and mine? Have we been ...eating it fairly? In 1876 George Ro... ...anes, a brilliant young British scien... ...st, came to the conclusion that he ...ad no right to a soul or a God, and ...at it was his "obvious duty to stifle ...s belief" and to "discipline his intel... ...t with regard to this matter into an ...ttitude of the purest skepticism." "I ...m not ashamed to confess," he wrote ...at the time, "that with this virtual ne... ...ation of God the universe to me has ...ost its only loveliness." And he was ...pressed by "the appalling contrast ...tween the hallowed glory of that ...reed which was once mine, and the ...onely mystery of existence as I now ...ead it." A little less than twenty ...ears later George Romanes became ...onvinced that in seeking to deal un... ...flinchingly with the facts of physical ...cience he had ignored the most signifi... ...ant of all facts, the most directly ...known, the most completely attested of ...all facts, the facts of his own religious ...nature. He came to recognize that it ...as reasonable to be a Christian believ... ...r." Before his untimely death he had ...returned "to that full, deliberate com... ...union with the church of Jesus Christ ...which he had for so many years been ...conscientiously compelled to forego." ...In the multitude of his thoughts with... ...in him he had secured a square deal ...for his soul.

"Our difficulties may not be his, but ...we have them. The things which ...make it hard for us to secure our souls ...their chance may be very different ...from the things which made it hard ...for him. Scientific men of to-day have ...less to make them feel as the seeming... ...ly triumphant materialistic of the sev... ...enties made young Romanes feel about ...having a God and a soul. But our diffi... ...culties may be of another class entire... ...ly. Perhaps they are far less credit... ...able to our intellectual sincerity, less ...creditable to our moral purpose, evil ...inclinations and the multiplied opper... ...tunities for gratifying them that make ...it hard for their souls to get fair hear... ...ing. "The lust of the flesh, the lust of ...the eye and the pride of life are not of ...the Father," John tells us. But some... ...thing more is true. They out-Herod ...Herod in their conspiracy against what is heaven-born in us. They are not only "not of the Father," but they are the deadly foes of all that is of the Father. Happy are the souls in which the flight into Egypt comes out as it does in Matthew's Gospel of the Infancy. Let us not hesitate to play Joseph to our threatened soul. All the dreams and angels that we need will be forthcoming if we are faithful, and we shall get back to Nazareth. Somehow Herod will be circumvented. And though it be neither scientific doctrines nor evil propensities which do most to make it hard for our souls, but just the petty preoccupations and the daily burdens and the round of more or less irritating duties of our common life, we are under the same sacred obligation and have the same encouragement to secure for our souls the square deal God means them to have. Let us never forget that Jesus Christ is the great champion of a square deal for every soul, and that that means ours.

"A square deal in presenting the claims of religion should be religiously maintained. God is eternally against anything else. Jeremiah never said anything which bears more unmistakably the seal of a divine ratification than when he called it "a wonderful and horrible thing" that had come to pass in the land; that "the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so." But a square deal in presenting the claims of religion rules out, not merely wilful falsification and perversion of the truth, it rules out intolerance and demands a square deal for the religious convictions of other people. It rules out dogmatism and demands a square deal for whatever new light may break forth. It rules out the insinuation of doubt and demands a square deal for the feeblest and most unintelligent faith. It rules out insincerity of whatever kind. But it does not rule out loyalty to deep convictions, nor definiteness of teaching, nor the replacing of the broken reed of an outworn doctrine with the strong staff of a living truth. To be absolutely loyal to the truth, and yet deal fairly with all the spiritual interests affected by the manner in which the claims of religion are presented, is no light thing to achieve. But of one thing, those to whom we go with the call of Christ must be left in no doubt, and that is that, so far as in us lies and God gives us light upon our way, we mean to be square with them. God made our ears so that they instinctively protect themselves against cant. They close as quickly as the threatened eye.

"The square deal in religion involves a square deal at the heart of religion. The central doctrine should be the righteousness of God, the righteous dealing of God with men, a square deal and nothing less for all men, a square deal and nothing more for "the saved." Paul never gets tired of telling us that God does not save us by doing anything wrong. He is continually declaring God's righteousness in His way of saving men, that He is at once "just and the justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus." Paul proclaims the triumph of the square deal in Christ. In Him "mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other." All that God offers to us in Christ He has a right to offer. He comes before the bar of our conscience with His great gospel of forgiveness. If it is not ratified there it can never give us peace. It is not the less sensitive consciences which have borne the most unequivocal testimony to the peace which God gives in Christ Jesus. But there should be nothing to settle between your conscience and your doctrine of salvation. We are not saved by dishonest bookkeeping. Nothing is credited to us which does not belong to us in God's sight. Every item which justifies God in His mercy toward us may not appear. But no scheme that could not pass muster with us in our dealing with men can represent the redemptive dealings of God with sinners. The man who finds peace with God through Jesus Christ just believes that whatever safeguarding of righteousness was necessary when God's mercy set out to save him has not been neglected.

"But while we need not fear that God will offer us more than He has a right to, we need have, on the other hand, no fear of giving too much to Him if we give all.

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all."

Negative Living.

Living to escape trouble is a poor kind of existence. The smaller animals in the forests and mountains have to give a large share of their attention to avoiding catastrophe, but man was made for another kind of life. "How are you?" a man called out to his friend in passing. "I can't complain," was the ready answer. Poor fellow! The best that he could say was that he was successfully dodging disaster for the moment! The present moment ought to make the highest point of joyous accomplishment our lives have yet known. God means that it should. We have more to be thankful for today than ever before since we or the world came into being. Even our unconscious habits of speech will indicate this if we are living abundantly.

God's Care.

People talk about special providences. I believe in providences, but not in the specialty. I do not believe that God lets the thread of my affairs go for six days, and on the seventh evening takes it up for a moment. The so-called special providences are no exception to the rule—they are common to all men at all moments. But it is a fact that God's care is more evident in some instances of it than in others, to the dim and often bewildered vision of humanity. Upon such instances men seize and call them providences. It is well that they can, but it would be gloriously better if they could believe that the whole matter is one grand providence.—George MacDonald.

All We Have to Do.

The discipline which we choose for ourselves does not destroy our self-love like that which God assigns us Himself each day. All we have to do is to give ourselves up to God day by day, without looking further. He carries us in His arms as a loving mother carries her child. In every need let us look with love and trust to our heavenly Father.—Francois de la Mothe Fenelon.

Buttons Made From Potatoes.

A large number of the buttons now in use, purporting to be made out of horn or bone or ivory, are in reality made out of the common potato, which, when treated with certain acids becomes almost as hard as stone. This quality of the potato adapts it to button-making, and a very good grade of button is now made from the well known tuber. The potato button can not be distinguished from others save by careful examination, and even then only by an expert, since they are colored to suit the goods on which they are to be used, and are every whit as good looking as a button of bone or ivory.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

In Russia and Saxony they are a little more sensible, for in both countries a youth must refrain from matrimony until he can count eighteen years and the woman till she can count sixteen.

In Switzerland the men from the age of fourteen and the women from the age of twelve are allowed to marry.

In Turkey any youth and maiden who can walk properly and can understand the necessary religious service are allowed to be united for life.

To go further afield, mere children of 10, 9 and even 8 years of age are, by Indian custom, often married. This applies to the girl only, although native boys of from 12 to 14 become husbands and the nominal heads of households.

In China, too, the cuseom is nearly as senseless. Boys and girls who ought to be on the school bench or playing battledore and shuttlecock set up their family gods.

It is curious to note the the "marriageable age" standard increases in cold or temperate latitudes and that the lowest point is touch in tropic latitudes, lack of civilization also having much to do with it.

What is believed to be the tiniest horse in the world is the property of an Italian nobleman who makes a specialty of breeding dwarf horses on his estate in Lombardy. The diminutive creature barely measures nineteen inches at the withers, scarcely the size of a large dog. The owner possesses many such equine dwarfs.

The law against smoking in theaters in the City of Mexico is so strictly enforced that recently the entire personnel of the actors in the Renacimiento theater were marched off to the comisaria and fined at the close of the performance for smoking on the stage in an act of "Zaza."

GREAT SCOTT.

The Biggest Man of Addison County, Vt., Tells an Interesting Story.

E. C. Scott, meat dealer, Vergennes, Vt., Past Commander of Ethan Allen Post, G. A. R., says: "A severe attack of typhoid left me with weak kidneys. Every night I had to get up frequently to pass the urine, which was ropy, dark and very painful to void. I had no appetite, but drank water continually without being able to quench my thirst. Terrible headaches and dizzy spells oppressed me and my back was lame, sore and stiff. A month's treatment with Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of this trouble, and now I am strong and healthy and weigh 230 pounds. I give the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Well Trained Horses.

The horses of the German cavalry corps undergo special training under the most scientific methods. All horses are bought at the age of three years and have to undergo a special "hardening" process, where their muscles are trained down to the exact limit of efficiency. They undergo one year's training before they are placed in the cavalry service, and they are not given their full activity until they are six years old. The German horse batteries are said to be the quickest and best trained in Europe. The gunners follow their guns on horseback and do not ride on the caissons, as with most other armies. This is said to save a great deal of time, and to aid in the quick manipulation of the weapons.

Covered With Crusted Scaly Eczema When One Month Old—Cured by Cuticura at Expense of $4.50.

"When I was one month old I was taken with eczema. After being under the treatment of two doctors for one month, and no improvement, my mother was advised by a druggist to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I was one crust of sores from head to foot. My mother could brush the scales off my body, and my finger and toe nails fell. After using six cakes of Cuticura Soap and about as much Cuticura Ointment I was completely cured. I am now seventeen years old, and my skin has not a scar. I am still finding wonders in Cuticura; after washing a fever blister two days it was completely gone. But fair dealing with the fact of re- on requires that we should recog- e the limitations and the inevitable perfection of all the forms in which religious aspirations of men find pression. It is nothing to the dis- it of religion if our best efforts to nbody it fall short of those visions of glory with which our souls are ssed. It is no less a treasure be- use we have it in earthen vessels eligious systems are confessedly im- rfect. Religious persons are full of uits. But they exist. They are cts. And they are as good evidence man's religious nature as they are the imperfection of all things human. But how about our own religious na- re, yours and mine? Have we been eating it fairly? In 1876 George Ro- anes, a brilliant young British scien- st, came to the conclusion that he d no right to a soul or a God, and at it was his "obvious duty to stifle ll belief" and to "discipline his intel- ct with regard to this matter into an ttitude of the purest skepticism." "I m not ashamed to confess," he wrote the time, "that with this virtual ne- ation of God the universe to me has st its soul of loveliness." And he was ppressed by "the appalling contrast tween the hallowed glory of that reed which was once mine, and the onely mystery of existence as I now nd it." A little less than twenty ars later George Romanes became onvinced that in seeking to deal un- anchingly with the facts of physical cience he had ignored the most signifi- ant of all facts, the most directly known, the most completely attested of ll facts, the facts of his own religious nature. He came to recognize that it as "reasonable to be a Christian believ- r." Before his untimely death he had returned "to that full, deliberate com- munion with the church of Jesus Christ which he had for so many years been conscientiously compelled to forego." In the multitude of his thoughts with- in him he had secured a square deal for his soul.

Our difficulties may not be his, but we have them. The things which make it hard for us to secure our souls their chance may be very different from the things which made it hard for him. Scientific men of to-day have less to make them feel as the seeming- ly triumphant materialistic of the sev- enties made young Romanes feel about having a God and a soul. But our diffi- culties may be of another class entire- ly. Perhaps they are far less credit- able to our intellectual sincerity, less creditable to our moral purpose, evil inclinations and the multiplied oppor- tunities for gratifying them that make it hard for their souls to get fair hear- ing. "The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life are not of the Father," John tells us. But some- thing more is true. They out-Herod Herod in their conspiracy against what is heaven-born in us. They are not only "not of the Father," but they are the deadly foes of all that is of the Father. Happy are the souls in which the flight into Egypt comes out as it does in Matthew's Gospel of the In- fancy. Let us not hesitate to play Joseph to our threatened soul. All the dreams and angels that we need will be forthcoming if we are faithful, and we shall get back to Nazareth. Some- how Herod will be circumvented. And though it be neither scientific doctrines nor evil propensities which do most to make it hard for our souls, but just the petty preoccupations and the daily burdens and the round of more or less irritating duties of our common life, we are under the same sacred obliga- tion and have the same encouragement to secure for our souls the square deal God means them to have. Let us never forget that Jesus Christ is the great champion of a square deal for every soul, and that that means ours.

A square deal in presenting the claims of religion should be religiously maintained. God is eternally against anything else. Jeremiah never said anything which bears more unmistak- ably the seal of a divine ratification than when he called it "a wonderful and horrible thing" that had come to pass in the land; that "the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so." But a square deal in presenting the claims of religion rules out, not merely wilful falsifica- tion and perversion of the truth, it rules out intolerance and demands a square deal for the religious convic- tions of other people. It rules out dog- matism and demands a square deal for whatever new light may break forth. It rules out the insinuation of doubt and demands a square deal for the feeblest and most unintelligent faith. It rules out insincerity of whatever kind. But it does not rule out loyalty to deep convictions, nor definiteness of teaching, nor the replacing of the broken reed of an outworn doctrine with the strong staff of a living truth. To be absolutely loyal to the truth, and yet deal fairly with all the spiritual in- terests affected by the manner in which the claims of religion are presented, is no light thing to achieve. But of one thing, those to whom we go with the call of Christ must be left in no doubt, and that is that, so far as in us lies and God gives us light upon our way, we mean to be square with them. God made our ears so that they instinctive- ly protect themselves against cant. They close as quickly as the threatened eye.

The square deal in religion involves a square deal at the heart of religion. The central doctrine should be the righteousness of God, the righteous dealing of God with men, a square deal and nothing less for all men, a square deal and nothing more for "the saved." Paul never gets tired of tell- ing us that God does not save us by doing anything wrong. He is continu- ally declaring God's righteousness in His way of saving men, that He is at once "just and the justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus." Paul proclaims the triumph of the square deal in Christ. In Him "mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other." All that God offers to us in Christ He has a right to offer. He comes before the bar of our conscience with His great gospel of forgiveness. If it is not ratified there it can never give us peace. It is not the less sensitive consciences which have borne the most unequivocal testi- mony to the peace which God gives in Christ Jesus. But there should be noth- ing to settle between your conscience and your doctrine of salvation. We are not saved by dishonest bookkeeping. Nothing is credited to us which does not belong to us in God's sight. Every item which justifies God in His mercy toward us may not appear. But no scheme that could not pass muster with us in our dealing with men can repre- sent the redemptive dealings of God with sinners. The man who finds peace with God through Jesus Christ just believes that whatever safeguard- ing of righteousness was necessary when God's mercy set out to save him has not been neglected.

But while we need not fear that God will offer us more than He has a right to, we need have, on the other hand, no fear of giving too much to Him if we give all.

"Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were a present far too small;
Love so amazing, so divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all."

Negative Living.

Living to escape trouble is a poor kind of existence. The smaller animals in the forests and mountains have to give a large share of their attention to avoiding catastrophe, but man was made for another kind of life. "How are you?" a man called out to his friend in passing. "I can't complain," was the ready answer. Poor fellow! The best that he could say was that he was successfully dodging disaster for the moment! The present moment ought to make the highest point of joy- ous accomplishment our lives have yet known. God means that it should. We have more to be thankful for to- day than ever before since we or the world came into being. Even our un- conscious habits of speech will indicate this if we are living abundantly.

God's Care.

People talk about special provi- dences. I believe in providences, but not in the specialty. I do not believe that God lets the thread of my affairs go for six days, and on the seventh evening takes it up for a moment. The so-called special providences are no exception to the rule—they are common to all men at all moments. But it is a fact that God's care is more evident in some instances of it than in others, to the dim and often bewildered vision of humanity. Upon such instances men seize and call them providences. It is well that they can, but it would be gloriously better if they could believe that the whole matter is one grand providence.—George MacDonald.

All We Have to Do.

The discipline which we choose for ourselves does not destroy our self-love like that which God assigns us Himself each day. All we have to do is to give ourselves up to God day by day, with- out looking further. He carries us in His arms as a loving mother carries her child. In every need let us look with love and trust to our heavenly Father.—François de la Mothe Fenelon.

Buttons Made From Potatoes.

A large number of the buttons now in use, purporting to be made out of horn or bone or ivory, are in reality made out of the common potato, which, when treated with certain acids becomes almost as hard as stone. This quality of the potato adapts it to but- ton-making, and a very good grade of button is now made from the well known tuber. The potato button can not be distinguished from others save by careful examination, and even then only by an expert, since they are col- ored to suit the goods on which they are to be used, and are every whit as good looking as a button of bone or ivory.

In Russia and Saxony they are a lit- tle more sensible, for in both coun- tries a youth must refrain from matri- mony until he can count eighteen years and the woman till she can count six- teen.

In Switzerland the men from the age of fourteen and the women from the age of twelve are allowed to mar- ry.

In Turkey any youth and maiden who can walk properly and can under- stand the necessary religious service are allowed to be united for life.

To go further afield, mere children of 10, 9 and even 8 years of age are, by Indian custom, often married. This applies to the girl only, although na- tive boys of from 12 to 14 become husbands and the nominal heads of households.

In China, too, the cuseom is nearly as senseless. Boys and girls who ought to be on the school bench or playing battledore and shuttlecock set up their family gods.

It is curious to note the the "mar- riageable age" standard increases in cold or temperate latitudes and that the lowest point is touch in tropic lat- itudes, lack of civilization also hav- ing much to do with it.

E. C. Scott, meat dealer, Vergennes, Vt., Past Commander of Ethan Allen Post, G. A. R., says: "A severe attack of typhoid left me with weak kidneys. Every night I had to get up frequently to pass the urine, which was ropy, dark and very painful to void. I had no appetite, but drank water contin- ually without being able to quench my thirst. Terrible headaches and dizzy spells oppressed me and my back was lame, sore and stiff. A month's treatment with Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of this trouble, and now I am strong and healthy and weigh 230 pounds. I give the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Well Trained Horses.

The horses of the German cavalry corps undergo special training under the most scientific methods. All horses are bought at the age of three years and have to undergo a special "hardening" process, where their mus- cles are trained down to the exact limit of efficiency. They undergo one year's training before they are placed in the cavalry service, and they are not given their full activity until they are six years old. The German horse batteries are said to be the quickest and best trained in Europe. The gun- ners follow their guns on horseback and do not ride on the caissons, as with most other armies. This is said to save a great deal of time, and to aid in the quick manipulation of the weapons.

THE MOON.

"Ah, they say the Moon is dead,
Life and joy from her long fled—
Bleak and barren stone, she dwells in awful space—
From her heart nor fountain flows,
On her breast nor flowret blows—
Never smile of verdure gladdens her grim face—
And a ghastly silence broods
O'er her dreary solitudes,
Where nor sound, nor ray of beauty lends a grace!

Yet she seemeth unto me
The same lovely maiden fay
She is still the fair Artemis of the skies,
Who doth earthly things compel,
By a weird and witching spell
Wooing, luring, beckoning enchantress-wise
Of whose love the Sea is fain
Till he frets and foams with pain,
Till he rises from his bed with sobs and sighs!

She is still the Huntress Maid,
In whose smile I basked and played—
Lilting childhood's song and laughter, glad and free,
While adown her silver beams
Pleated bevies of bright dreams,
Thrilling heart and brain to sweetest ecstasy—
Making fairest day of night,
Till I woke with strange delight
For the secret that was known to her and me!

Still upon the heavenly plain
I behold her wax and wane,
Still my soul with her weird beauty is possest—
And methinks that she somehow,
As I gaze upon her now,
Knows the rapture of a vision none have guessed
As upon her pallid beams
Come the faint—the far-off gleams
Of a radiant one who walks among the blest!

The Romance of an Apple-Dumpling.

By Olivia Lovell Wilson.

Mehitable Pettingill stood with her cookbook in one hand, the sleeves of her dainty pink gown rolled away from her plump wrists, and a little patch of flour adorning her pleasantly saucy nose.

She was not thinking of her cookbook, however, or her flour-adorned countenance. Her thoughts seemed even further than the plumes of the lilac bush toward which her eyes occasionally wandered. Mehitable was apparently in deep and not altogether pleasant thought.

Could I describe with due fairness the sweet proportion and general delectableness I thank the old poets for that goodly word—of Mehitable, I should not have commenced with the cook-book, although it has as prominent a place in all that follows as any charm exercised by sweet Mehitable.

Mehitable had inherited, with this trying name, her grandmother's fair skin and sunny hair, with the complexion of a rose-leaf—a richer inheritance, in fact, than many of her friends possessed, who delighted in names breathing of poetic fancy: Lily, Daisy, Birdie and Rose. Her uncle loves to call her "Dot," because she is so small, so sweet, so truly commendable, in her thrifty household.

But to-day Mehitable is in trouble, and the cook-book seems only to add to her perplexity. The sunshine dances in the kitchen doorway, through the vine-leaves merrily, smiling upon the rows of shining trees, and playing hide-and-seek in the shadows with the sportive kitten. The kettle boils gently on the stove, everything is neat and clean, waiting for her to make her dessert for their five o'clock dinner.

Annie, Mehitable's maid-of-all-work, not many years her senior, had left her dinner, a roast of lamb and roast potatoes completing their duty in the oven, and Mehitable hears the faint clatter of dishes as Annie makes ready the dinner-table.

Yet here she stands, with that frown between her sweet eyes, and stares at her recipe with eyes that only take in the words, without any idea of the sense of all she is reading. Mehitable is not one of those erratic cooks who can make a dish of nothing, adding a "pinch of this and a bit of that;" she is an order-loving cook, and her dessert is always a rare dish made with precision. But of all she creates, the acme of satisfaction is reached for Uncle Harvey when she turns her attention to apple-dumplings.

Uncle Harvey remarks with a twinkle in his eye, on these occasions, "Next to a clear conscience, is a good cook. Dot, my child, you are better than a clear conscience, if that is a possibility, because one may appreciate your thorough goodness without any selfish consideration of future reward."

"I fear your appreciation is confined to dumplings," Mehitable would reply, calmly.

But why should Mehitable stand staring, today, into her cook-book, as if she did not realize Uncle Harvey's utter content in her skill? She did not even heed the kitten—that, like the Lady of Shallot, grown tired of shadows, rubbed affectionately against her feet.

Let us look over her shoulder and read the recipe for apple-dumplings:

"One quart of flour, two tablespoonfuls lard, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in hot water, two cupfuls of milk, two teaspoonfuls of cream-tartar sifted in dry flour, one saltspoonful of salt."

So far, so good. But, as Mehitable goes on with the directions, she twists a gold ring upon her finger; and, strangely enough, the directions are interpolated, thus:

"Chop the shortening into the flour, after you have sifted (he said arguing would not help matters; I cannot see why.) this and the cream-tartar together. (It was just too much, for him to be jealous of such a trifle. I was so provoked.) Put the soda, and wet up quickly. (Then I had to break down and cry, and he walked off) just stiff enough to roll into a paste less than half an inch thick. (He never used to be so foolish. I know he will never speak to me again. Oh, dear!) Cut in squares, and lay in center of each (Harold Van Ausdell).

"Good gracious! what am I saying?" she murmured, suddenly conscious of her foolish wandering. "Here I stand reading over this recipe I know by heart, and reading it as if I expected to make a dumpling of Harold. I thought I knew him by heart, too," with a grim little smile. "However, it is all over now. I shall never be his wife. I wonder if he will come home to dinner with Uncle Harvey, to-night?"

With this rather inconsistent conclusion to her tragic cogitation, she commenced to sing a brisk tune, and, while the tears twinkled in her eyes, set to work about the dumplings without further delay; and, despite the trying fact that her first and violent quarrel with her lover had transpired the night before, she accomplished the task nobly.

It is a well-known truth that, often, when a woman's heart is heaviest, her biscuit and dumplings are lightest.

It is the poetical justice of human romance, we suppose, shaming the charges of delinquency ever brought against it, by meeting and supplying the practical demand.

It was a pretty sight to see Mehitable's dimpled hands chop the shortening into the flour, after sifting it with the cream-tartar, put in the soda and wet it with a deft hand, and roll into a paste about half an inch thick.

Then she carefully cut the pastry into neat squares, and laid in the center of each a juicy tart apple she had pared and cored. Alas! today, she had no desire to throw the long peeling over her shoulder, when she pared her apples, in order to read her marriage fate in the letter thus formed.

Then she brought the corners of the square dough neatly together, and gave them a slight pinch. Next, she got her buttered baking-pans, and, placing the joined edges downward, passed them into the oven to bake.

Once more she had time to return to her dismal meditation; which she did, resting her sunny head on her hand.

Harold Van Ausdell was Uncle Harvey's cousin's son. Uncle Harvey had been delighted at the idea of his niece's engagement. What would he say now?

Harold had been very harsh to be provoked over such a trifle. He always came home to dinner with Uncle Harvey, on Saturday evening. Would he come tonight? Would he be penitent, or expect her to be? He had been cruel in all he said and she would never, never, never—"

"Miss Pettengill, I am sure I smell something burning." Thus spoke Annie, hurrying in from the dining-room.

"Oh, dear!" cried Mehitable, in a vexed tone; but no harm was done, and, after a few moments, the dumplings came out of the oven, brown and tempting.

She heard her uncle's voice now, and her heart beat violently, as she recognized also the voice she hoped might prove penitent, since Harold came, as was his usual custom.

She barely had time to brush the dumplings with beaten egg, to give them a gloss, and then sift powdered sugar over them.

She then directed Annie, in a confused manner, to make a rich sauce for them, and then fled up the back-stairway to her room, leaving Annie to smile knowingly and take charge of the tempting beauties, little dreaming how precious a charge she undertook.

Mehitable and Harold met at the dinner-table, under Uncle Harvey's eyes, with great equanimity. Mehitable looked cool and fresh, in her pretty dress, with only a little heightened flush of her roses, to betray her agitation. But she noticed that Harold turned very white, as she glance fell upon her the second time. What could he mean? Her left hand went instinctively to her fair curls, as if they must be the cause—one of those silly, graceful motions girls will make. Then, as her hand rested on the table, a moment afterward, she saw her betrothal ring was gone.

Her eyes met his, a moment, in a startled glance, and then he looked away, to answer Uncle Harvey's question.

"So your are resolved to go, no matter what any of us may say? Even Dot cannot persuade you?" Uncle Harvey said.

"Dot has no desire I should remain," returned Harold; "we decided that matter last night."

"What?" demanded Uncle Harvey, while Mehitable forced herself to return Harold's glance firmly. He should not find her lacking in purpose, she said to herself, if he could speak thus cruelly, without striving to conciliate her. But where—where could she have lost her ring? And where was Harold going?

"May I ask what all this may mean?" once more demanded Uncle Harvey, leaning back in his chair.

"Only that my decision regarding my departure for the west has been hastened by the breaking of our engagement. It is as it should be," said Harry. "Remember, sir, I came under protest this evening, yielding because I saw Dot had not told you of the rupture. I hoped she had repented of last night's hasty decision. She has not, it seems. Since it is my last meal with you, let us forget this unpleasantness, and talk of other matters."

"Is this true, Dot?" asked Uncle Harvey, in despair.

"Yes, uncle," she replied, with greater calmness that Harold had struggled with his dignity and anger.

But oh! where was the ring? How could she have lost it? But, if Harold gave her no opportunity for explanation, she too would be inexorable, if it broke her heart.

So Harold chatted on with apparent ease, and made Uncle Harvey join him, albeit the latter was a little sulky.

Disappointment is the bane of a good appetite, and Uncle Harvey was sorely disappointed in the turn affairs had taken.

Even when his favorite dumplings appeared, he could not rally his spirits, in face of the two young people flashing occasional defiant glances at each other, across the table.

A silence fell as they ate the dainty dessert, when suddenly Harold choked slightly, and Uncle Harvey looked in surprise, as the young man deliberately took from his mouth a small gold circlet.

There was a mingling of amusement and gladness in Harold's face. He looked at Mehitable.

"You lost it? You did not discard it?" he cried, eagerly.

"I lost it in making the dumplings," she returned, shaken from her self-possession. "It must have slipped off, and fallen into the dumpling."

"Then you did not mean to give it back to me?" cried Harold. "You did not—"

"Oh! I had it on today. I never meant to—"

But Uncle Harvey burst into a roar of laughter.

"Why, Dot, you are not so cruel as to choke a man with his own engagement ring? I never asked you to flavor dumplings with love-sauce! That is 'ringing' the changes on a man," he cried, between gasps of choking laughter.

But Harold walked around the table with the ring, and took Mehitable's hand in his, and, while she blushed furiously, put it back upon her finger again.

"Forgive me, dear; and tell me you never meant to take it off and give me over," he said, looking so charmingly sincere and handsome in his penitence, that Mehitable uttered a demure little "Yes," and Uncle Harvey finished his meal alone, while they slipped back into the parlor.

Mehitable Pettengill is now Mrs. Harold Van Ausdell, and manages her household with excellent skill; but her husband often jocosely remarks, while he enjoys her heightening color, that there is no dish she makes with such singular success, as his favorite, the apple dumpling.—Good Literature.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

A Halifax oarsman has invented a machine for keeping in trim in the winter. It is a sled with a rowing seat. With the aid of steel-edged oars he rows over the ice at great speed.

The lightest of European crowns is the state crown of Great Britain, which was made for Queen Victoria. Although it only weighed two pounds and seven ounces, its value is £300,000.

A native Indian ruler owns a musical bed. The weight of the body sets the works in motion, and it plays half an hour, while life sized figures of Grecian maidens at its head and foot finger stringed instruments. Fans are waved by a concealed motor, which keeps them going the whole night long.

A story is told of a man who, crossing a distant used coal field late at night, fell into an apparently bottomless pit, and saved himself only by grasping a projecting beam. There he clung with great difficulty all night, only to find when day dawned that his feet were only four inches from the bottom.

An interview with the Sultan of Turkey has its amusing side. That monarch is not supposed officially to know any language but his own. An interpreter thunders his majesty's questions at the visitor, then cringes with awe as he listens to the words of his royal master. The contrast is close to the ridiculous. At the conclusion of the interview the Sultan rises and says quietly in the visitor's language or in French: "No that our business is over, will you join me in my study and have a cup of coffee?"

An emigrant's outfit, including a cow, was in a forward car of a Kansas train, the emigrant himself being in the caboose. The train was making average time when the man suddenly exclaimed, while looking out of the caboose window: "Why, there is my cow," pointing to an animal that stood grazing beside the track. The trainmen told him he must be mistaken, but he insisted that be was right, and finally succeeded in having the train stopped. Going forward the door of the car was found open and the cow gone. It was not injured in the least by the fall from the train and was grazing within a minute after the time it struck the ground.

The Value of the Submarine in Naval Warfare

By Lawrence Y. Spear.

PARADOXICAL as it may seem, the possibilities of the submarine are much better known than are the possibilities of a battleship. In a broad sense they are the least experimental type of warship. This will be readily understood when it is remembered that the submarine is the only type of vessel practically immune from gun-fire when in action. The effect of gun-fire upon a ship and its personnel is the most uncertain and difficult problem which the designer or tactician has to solve, as best he may, without experimental determination.

No amount of discussion can, in the end, obscure one great fact regarding the submarine—that is, her ability to approach a battleship in broad daylight and force the latter to retire, or accept disablement or destruction. This is the essence of the matter. All other considerations are by comparison non-essential. This limitation curtails the battleship's control. That, in a few terms, is what the submarine can do now, and that is enough.—Harper's Weekly.

Much-Needed Reforms in the Life-Insurance Business

By Louis Windmuller.

FURTHER disastrous shrinkages may be expected unless managers of life insurance companies take some such timely measure as the following to restore confidence and to attract new business.

1. Sell stocks and securities the values of which fluctuate, investing proceeds in first mortgages on improved city realty for two-thirds of its marketable value. Savings of the thrifty should not be exposed to the risk of speculation.

2. Dispose of superfluous buildings acquired in all parts of the world to advertise business, and invest likewise. Policy-holders call for absolute safety more than for marble halls.

3. Cut down salaries and other expenses. The measures taken by the Equitable do not go far enough; retrenchment should be instituted by every other company which does not want to become the target of criticism.

Owners of mutual policies are entitled to a yearly statement of the details and results of the business in which they are interested, just as much as holders of stock in banks, railroads, and industrials. Managers who fear disclosure of these details distasteful should quit the business.—Forum.

Dr. Cunningham Opens.

Birmingham, Ala.—The political talk of the state at present is the announcement that Dr. R. M. Cunningham, who has so far kept in the background in his race for governor, will next week begin an active and vigorous campaign against Hon. B. B. Comer, who has had the field largely to himself so far. Dr. Cunningham includes in his plans challenges for joint debates, etc. In view of his present reputation as one of the most forceful and logical speakers in the state, the announcement that he is to open his campaign of speechmaking and spell-binding has been greeted was acclaim, even by his political opponents. Dr. Cunningham still enjoys a reputation as one of the most generally liked and popular men in the State, and he will carry with him an immense vote, whether or not he wins in the race he is making.

Aside from this the political horizon is clearing, and there remains little of doubt in the state campaign, with the exception of the ultimate result of the election. Two more announcements for alternate senator (candidates in waiting in the event of the death of Senators Morgan and Pettus) are expected, those of Hon. Jesse Stallings and of Col. John W. Tomlinson, both of Birmingham. It is conceded that all the other announcements of importance from all over Alabama are now in, and that it will now be a straight-away race to the August 27 primary.

Hunt for Newland.

Gadsden, Ala.—J. W. Newland and Joe Thomas, brother and uncle respectively of Fred Newland, the young man who mysteriously disappeared in Gadsden the night of March 19, have given up all hopes of finding their relative alive and have set several men to work dragging the river. They believe that Fred Newland was drowned Whether he was killed or committed suicide they cannot say, but they do believe that his body will be found in the river if it is found at all.

Chief of Police White maintains that Newland boarded the Louisville and Nashville train at 7:09 o'clock Monday night for Anniston and that he reached that city.

Newland collected money loaned to railroad employes when he was here, and it is now known that he had several hundred dollars, whereas it was said at first that he had only about $10 expense money.

A search has been made of the river bank and no trace has been found of the missing man.

Parker for the Legislature.

Cullman, Ala.—George H. Parker, the present member of the legislature, has announced to succeed himself and will run in the democratic primary, which will be held the 14th of April. Mr. Parker did not announce until the last day given to candidates to qualify. The other parties in the race are Rev. J. N. Bright and Prof. James Kilpatrick. It is conceded, even by his opponents, that Mr. Parker will be elected.

Big Premiums in Alabama.

Montgomery, Ala.—The total insurance premiums collected in Alabama in 1905 were $7,300,487. Of that $2,628,704 was fire and $4,335,300 for life. The balance was miscellaneous.

The fire loss was 64.3, compared to 54 last year. The total losses in the state were $1,689,994. The average rate was $1.79, compared to $1.66 the year before and $1.64 for nine years. The life companies paid back only $1,629,209, which does not include matured and cancelled policies. There was a heavy loss in lapses. The net loss to the Equitable was 38.

Lee Cowan Held.

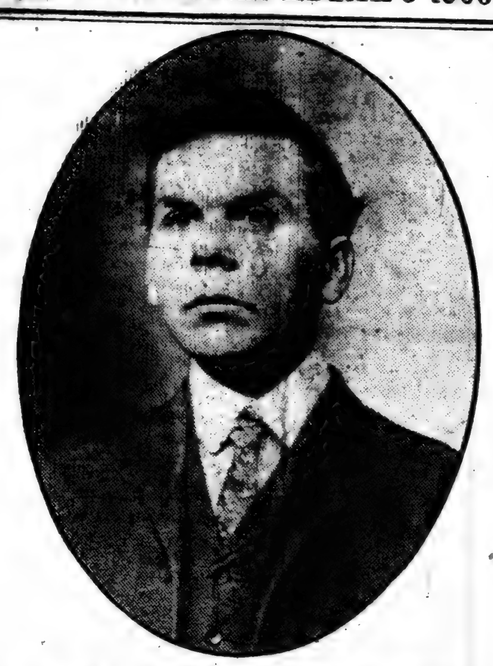
Montgomery, Ala.—A special to the Advertiser from Dothan says:

After a preliminary trial held before Probate Judge George Leslie, Lee Cowen, postmaster of Big Creek, was held to the next grand jury in $2,000 charged with the murder January 5 of Curtis Rogers.

Rogers was killed in the store and postoffice at Big Creek conducted by Cowan. There was no one in the building at the time except the two. The state claimed that the killing was done by Cowan and the defense averred Rogers was killed by the bullet from a pistol which became dislodged and fell from an upper shelf.

Fire in Cotton Mill.

Sylacauga, Ala.—Thursday fire was discovered in the picker room at the Central Mills. It was not an easy matter to get the fire under control, and the damage to the mill and machinery is said to be several thousand dollars, done by fire and water.



LEE T. VICKERS.

This is the winner of the First Prize offered by THE UNION November 16, 1905, to the one who brought in the largest number of PAID subscriptions to THE UNION by April 1, 1906. Mr. Vickers had 22 to his credit. He has been a loyal friend to this paper from its start, and can directly be credited with about 100 subscribers in the past 3 years, thus "showing his faith by his works." Mr. Vickers is a young man of sterling qualities and habits, and is well known in this part of the county for his frank and outspoken adherence to the "people's cause." There is no need to ask "Where does he stand?" He has the courage of his convictions and "speaks right out in meeting." Even it makes some people get red in the face. We expect to see Mr. Vickers go up higher yet.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE AT JEMISON.

On March 23d at the appointed time Supt. J. W. Moore called the institute to order. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. J. A. Beal. Mr. W. R. Jackson gave the teachers a hearty welcome to Jemison. J. T. Williams responded. Next in order came the enrollment of teachers. The attendance was very good, though several who were on the program were conspicuous by their absence. The following teachers were enrolled Misses Ada Askins, Julia Parrish, Yula Stricklen, Mienchen Foy, Mary Gallagher, Ella Williams, Em. Smith and Jessie McGee, Mrs. Curry and Mrs. Mullins Messrs. J. H. Anderson, Adin Batsin, W. T. Bean, E. B. Calloway, W. J. Harwell, H. L. Hicks, E. W. Miller, J. W. Moore, W. A. McCreless, J. M. Parrish, W. M. Sorrell, R. E. Sessions, R. A. Smith, W. J. Stoudenmire, St. Clair Thornton, J. O. Williams and J. T. Williams. Rev. R. G. Maness being absent, Rev. J. A. Beal was entreated to discuss "Ethics of School Training." He gave an interesting and timely talk on the subject, some one said "If he can do that well without any preparation, I'd like to hear him when he has prepared to speak." Mrs. Curry also gave some good thoughts on the subject. A valuable addition was made to the program when Mrs. Curry read an excellent paper on "Elocution in the schools," the subject was also discussed by Prof. Sessions and others. Off we go to enjoy a bounteous dinner. The first thing in the afternoon session was a good paper on "The teacher's present opportunity of improving country life." Profs. Sessions, Beal and others gave short and pointed discussions of the subject under consideration. "How to teach English grammar' was given thorough consideration by Prof. Harwell. This discussion was heard with much interest by the teachers, for it is a subject in which all are interested. Misses Stricklen and Fay read excellent papers on "Supplementary reading." The papers were evidence that they have studied and understand the subject. Adjourned till Saturday morning. Supt. Moore was kept away from the Saturday session by urgent business. The institute was called to order at 9:45 by Prof. Sessions, and Prof. Strock was elected chairman pro tem. After devotional exercises Prof. H. L. Hicks thoughtfully compared the teaching profession with other professions. Profs. Sessions and McCreless followed. It was said that in the estimation of the world the teaching profession occupies a low place in the scale of professions, but now everything seems brighter for the profession than ever before. Profs. R. E. R. Hicks and C. J. Eiland being absent, Profs. McCreless and others discussed "The Importance of Regular Reviews and Examinations." A paper on "School Incentives and How to Use Them" read by Miss Em. Smith was listened to with much pleasure. Messrs. G. L Speer and B. J. Sessions being absent, J. T. Williams talked for a few minutes on the subject assigned them, "How May Play Time Be Used to the Best Advantage?" The committee on resolutions made the following report: "We, your committee, beg leave to submit the following resolutions to the institute:

"Resolved 1, That we tender our sincere thanks to the citizens of Jemison for their unlimited hospitality to us during our sojourn with them. 2d, That the good people of Jemison have been very kind to us and have taken great pleasure in royally entertaining us. 3d, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the institute. 4th, That a copy of the same be printed in the county papers.

H. L. HICKS,
A. L. BENTLEY,
J. O. WILLIAMS,
Committee."

The institute as a whole seemed to be enjoyed by teachers and visitors, and goes down in the history of Chilton county teachers as an occasion to be given a place among pleasant memories.

ACTIVE.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to drop a few lines, though this is my first attempt, but I've not seen anything from this part of the county. Our laughter is turned into mourning, caused by the death of Mr. Richard Hicks. He died on last Wednesday and his remains were interred in Rehoboth cemetery on Thursday last, funeral services being conducted by Rev. Mr. Harris, of Randolph. Of course, we all hate to part with our loved ones, but he has paid the debt we all have to pay sooner or later. We have a very nice Sunday school at Rehoboth every Sunday. Preaching every second Sunday and Saturday before. Singing every first and third Sunday evening. They have succeeded in organizing a lodge of the F. E. and C. U. of A. at Rehoboth at last. O. P. Scott recently made a trip to Mars Hill settlement. J. D. Scott is repairing his dwelling. The young people enjoy themselves from one to two nights out of every week in a good singing. Now as this is my first attempt, I guess I'd better ring off or the waste basket might catch this. Yours for success to THE UNION and its many readers,

CORA SCOTT.

S. C. A.

Clanton, April 2, 1906.

Don't forget the called meeting of the S. C. A. for Saturday, April 7th. Come and bring one of your neighbors along with you, as I am sure Pres. Gulledge has a surprise for you on that day. Just think what you would be taking for your cotton today without organized effort upon the part of southern people. Come and let us do our part.

Yours truly,
J. N. DENNIS.

Blown From Cab.

Cleveland, O.—While a west-bound Lake Shore freight train was speeding along near Amherst, O., the crown sheet of the locomotive exploded and blew the fireman and head brakeman out of the cab. They were badly scalded and otherwise injured, and the fireman, A. C. Stage, of Toledo, will probably die. The train ran for a quarter of a mile before the engineer, who escaped injury, could bring it to a halt.

ELECTIONS A FARCE.

Thousands Refuse to go to The Polls in St. Petersburg.

CANDIDATES ARE ARRESTED.

One Man in Prison and Another Refuses to Accept Office for Fear of Persecution.

St. Petersburg.—The elections of workmen within the limits of St. Petersburg proper were held April 1st, preceding the elections to the municipal convention here, which in turn will elect six members to the lower house of parliament.

The balloting of the workmen, however, was almost a complete farce, as were the elections of a fortnight ago in the bigger factories outside the city. The latter representatives will participate in the provincial convention and the former take part in the St. Petersburg municipal convention. Out of 67 establishments the workmen of 29 boycotted the elections, and of the remainder only the minority voted, and of those elected about half were constitutional democrats and the other half conservatives, or members of the 'black hundred," as they are now popularly termed.

One man elected is now in prison and another declined to accept election for fear that it would subject him to persecution. M. Oushakoff, one of the delegates chosen, is superintendent of the state printing office and chief of the "independent workmen's party," which, like the famous Zahatoff organization, is considered to be a creature of the minister of the interior. The delegates of the workmen outside of the city who had previously been elected simply went through the form of selecting candidates for the provincial convention. A number of them had been arrested since the elections and only 72 appeared at the meeting. They chose four progressives and four conservatives.

The edition of The Russ published Monday was confiscated by the police owing to the publication of a sacrilegious travesty of Lenten prayers, written by M. Ambitiatroff, the famous feuiletonist, who was exiled to Siberia in 1902 owing to his publication of a pamphlet reflecting on the imperial family, and who was subsequentyla amnested. One line of the Lord's prayer, supposed to be offered by the imperial family, was made to read:

"Let the people pay our debts, but not as we pay our creditors."

RED BADGE OF ANARCHY.

Memorial to Johann Most Brings Out Fiery Speeches Denouncing the Press, Civilization and Capitalists.

New York.—The Grand Central Palace was crowded Sunday with anarchists and sympathizers, gathered to commemorate the life of the late Johann Most.

Lucy Parsons, widow of Albert Parsons, one of the executed Chicago anarchists, was present and spoke. The speakers were many and of many languages. Red banners, red feathers and red hats of many women, red neckties and red badges for the men and the blue coats of more than a hundred policemen gave color to the assemblage. The reporters were denounced as the hirelings of the capitalistic element. Abraham Isaacs presided, and in his opening address declared:

"Most loved justice and truth, and for no other reason he was hounded and persecuted. Had he lived two thousand years ago he would have been crucified. As it was he only got ten years in prison."

Emma Goldman, wearing a black gown, bareheaded and barefooted, denounced the press.

Lucy Parsons referred to the bomb throwing in Chicago as an "explosion which rent this capitalistic country."

"They hated Most," she said, "because he tore the veil of hypocrisy from society with ruthless hand and said to the proletariat, 'Look behind the veil and see the devils bred in hell with hearts of stone.'

"We have burned our bridges behind us. I despise the civilization which sends 1,700,000 children to work in the factories. But the spirit of liberty is abroad. There never has been a time when there was so much unrest in the world, and from this unrest will be born the sturdy child of liberty."

A collection was taken up for the fund to educate Most's children.

The Dream and the Reality.

THE great ocean liner had entered Southampton docks hard upon sunset, too late to enable him to reach her that night.

A thousand times during the long journey from the South American State in which he had spent his exile, Mansfield had read her letter. He not only knew the wording backwards, but he had fully succeeded in shaping the rather prim phrases to the white heat of his own ideals.

She recorded the death of her husband; and how could he expect so noble a woman as Coralie to regard that event as he did? The late Mr. Brooke ought to have died ten years earlier; indeed, he ought never to have lived. No doubt, he had treated her kindly, although he could never have understood her.

Worldly parents had persuaded her to marry the fellow. Mansfield had long ago accepted the inevitable, though at the time life had been robbed of all sweetness for him and the future without her had seemed entirely void.

He had never reproached her. He had replied in simple, manly words to her hysterical letter announcing the parental decision. True, he had urged her to defy conventions and to face possible poverty with him. Coralie replied that such was her overmastering desire, but that her sense of duty held her bound as in chains.

Thus they had drifted apart—she marrying Brooke, he seeking distraction in South America, starting life anew, shaking the dust of civilization from his feet. A very ordinary affair, you will perceive.

But the death of Brooke had changed for Mansfield the gray hue of life. In these ten years of strenuous work he had grown moderately rich. No other woman had ever attracted him for an hour, except one or two who regilded some memory of Coralie.

Then the craze for motoring set in, and Brooke obligingly broke his neck on a dangerous hill. Mansfield read of the accident in an old newspaper, but exactly twelve months elapsed before Coralie wrote to him herself.

She wrote guardedly, but he read between the lines of her conventionality—or fancied that he did. Leaving his affairs in the hands of a friend, Mansfield at once started for England.

* * * * * * *

Next morning the early train from Southampton brought him to the nearest town by 8 o'clock, and thence he drove to Eggbottle in a fly. He had shaved off his beard on the previous night. Also he had sent her a telegram. About 8.30 a. m. the fly entered the village. Mansfield's heart beat fast.

The village was wholly strange to him, but he knew that she lived in a house called "The Laurels," and thither the cabman had been directed to drive. It may have been 8.45 when the cab stopped at the door of a prim cottage drive, flanked at mathematically exact intervals by prim shrubs. A solemn butler, looking unaffectedly hostile, opened the door.

"Mrs. Brooke at home?" gasped Mansfield.

"Mrs. Brooke does not breakfast till 9.30," was the chilling reply.

"I—I'm an old friend," said Mansfield. "I'll wait."

"I will take your card up if the business is urgent," said the butler.

Mansfield affected to search for his card. He had long ceased to use such things, but the butler, he felt, would not have condoned such a breach of fashion.

"I have no card with me," he explained. "Say Herbert Mansfield."

"The mistress never receives in the morning," objected the butler.

"The 'at home' days are the second and fourth Tuesdays, between 4 and 6 p. m."

Mansfield took a half crown piece from his pocket and the butler yielded.

"Well, sir, if you'll wait in the cab for a few minutes, I'll send your name up," he said.

After a long delay the butler returned.

"The mistress will see you, sir, in half an hour, unless you prefer to return to luncheon.

The message chilled him, but to postpone the meeting till luncheon time was unthinkable. He followed the butler to a large drawing room, and was left alone with yesterday's paper and a view of the prim front garden.

The room was crowded with furniture, nick-nacks, framed photographs, frail tables, footstools and fully draped statuettes. Some amenable water color drawings (in gilt frames) and a bad portrait of the deceased in oils represented art. There was too much upholstery, too much of everything except literature, which was represented by four new novels from Mudie's library.

Accustomed to the simplicity of a semi-tropical land, the crowded, ugly room jarred upon Mansfield. He laid the blame upon the deceased. Coralie must have retained the furniture out of respect for the dead man's mid-Victorian tastes.

Thus waiting, while she made an elaborate toilet, he vividly recalled all the qualities of heart and mind that had lifted her so high above her sex and held him constant to her. Her splendid freedom from conventionality and her bright humor had been, in his eyes, her greatest charm.

He tried, but rather unsuccessfully, to remember definite instances of her breadth of mind. But she had often expressed her impatience of those conventions that hedge the freedom of young Englishwomen, and once, as he distinctly recalled, she had allowed him three dances in succession.

Another proof of her originality was her contempt for her own sex. She had gloried, he remembered, in her lack of women friends.

Then he tried to recall, but with curious lack of success, examples of her rich and original humor. Well, it must have been her quaint way of saying things—the bright little touches, no doubt, that evade the memory. Yes, and he clearly recollected her appreciation of good puns, and of jokes from the comic which she used to retail to him.

Thus, time might dim her beauty, but the clever, merry girl of twenty would most surely have developed at thirty into the ideal comrade of his dreams.

Then, at last, the door opened, and they stood face to face. The lonely years fell away and were forgotten as he looked upon her untarnished beauty.

There was no change, save that she had grown a little thinner. The color mantled her cheek and her bright eyes sank modestly under his eager gaze. He tried to speak her beloved name, but emotion held him speechless in this supreme moment of ecstasy upon which he had counted for more than a year. His ecstasy lasted some five seconds at most; but emotion is not to be measured by time or weighed like so much bacon.

She came forward briskly, offering him her hand, at arm's length, just as if he had been some rather unwelcome acquaintance. Simultaneously a chilling torrent of words poured from her red lips. "How d' you do, Mr. Mansfield? I'm so glad to see you again. I'm afraid I've kept you waiting quite a long time; but, you see, I'd no idea you would come so early, and I seldom have breakfast before half-past 9."

"Why, yes," he said, drearily, feeling as if he had lost his individuality. "Yes, I'm afraid I'm too early."

"I'll tell Harris to have something cooked at once," she said. "You must be famished after your journey. They seldom prepare anything but an egg or two for me."

"Pray, don't trouble," he said, trying to hide his disappointment. "I'm not hungry."

Silence fell upon them for a moment, but she cloaked her embarrassment, as before, with a rush of empty words. He could not tell whether or not she felt any real emotion, but it was wholly evident she wished to display none. She asked the usual questions about his voyage, spoke of the defects of the local train service, keeping him rigidly in the conventional rut.

She had a great deal to say to him about a local bazaar in aid of some deserving mission, and he could not tell whether any of the old love lay hidden beneath this flood of foolish words. It was at least certain that she meant to avoid a scene, and he could not battle against her volubility.

He found himself lying in wait for some indications of her bright humor or of the breadth of mind that he had so confidently looked for. And, at last, she did say something which might have amused him from a girl of twenty. He responded to the poor little jest with a ghastly grin and a sinking heart.

The butler announced breakfast; Mansfield followed her to the breakfast room. He would not admit to himself that he was disillusioned.

"Coralie," he whispered, fervently, as he walked after her through the long, slippery hall. She did not hear him, because she was talking fast over her shoulder. Even the bald name now seemed cheap, inwdry, theatrical.

Mansfield seated himself at the table—their places had been laid many feet apart—and tried manfully to eat the [illegible]. She, sitting at the head of the table, behind a barricade of jugs and plated ware, talked on incessantly. It required some effort on his part to follow what she said.

The human interest was wholly lacking until, at the close of the meal, she blundered upon something which gave him the clew to his disillusionment.

"Mrs. Huntley?" he said, "I seem to remember that name. Is she a friend of yours?"

"Oh, no," she answered plaintively; "a mere acquaintance. I don't get on with women, as you may remember."

"I remember," he said; "but I supposed you would outgrow that little prejudice."

"Women are so jealous and spiteful to their own sex," she replied, with an air of profundity.

He remembered that she had expressed the same generality in the very same words at the age of twenty. It dawned upon him that Coralie's mind had aged as little as her body.

"You have not changed at all," he said, wistfully, as he looked at the foolish, girlish face above the barricade of jugs.

"I'm so glad you think so!" she said, and a slight blush confirmed her pleasure. "But perhaps you only say it as a compliment, Herbert?" she added, softly.

"No," said Mansfield; "it is the literal truth."

Half an hour later he caught a train to Southampton. Coralie never fully understood why he returned to South America.—London Sketch.

The Trained Nurse.

The girl who is slovenly about her person or her clothes need not waste money for car fare to the city where the hospital school is located. Untidiness clips the wings of a probationer as quickly as a physical defect. The strong, straight limbed, full chested girl who carries herself well, and whose skin is clear and well kept, whose clothes are immaculate, whose every movement is alert, is the girl the superintendent is looking for.

The girl that is given to violent quarrels is not fitted for this work. The trained nurse must be self-contained to the point of being secretive. She must study the art of keeping to herself and her work. Neither is the training school for nurses the place for the high-strung, emotional girl who overestimates her importance. The path which leads to a diploma holds for you absolute self-effacement. You are but part, and a very small part at that, of the great hospital system with which you have cast your lot. Your personality is merged into but one word—"Duty."—Woman's Home Companion.

Man vs. Beef.

The lunch counter man walked in airily, took his usual place, and gave his customary order. "Fine day, gentlemen," he said gaily. "I've got a poser for you to-day. See who'll guess first. Why is a man like beef?"

"Always wanted," panted the waiter, slapping down the portion before him.

"And wanted worst when it can't be had at all," added a young man who had several maiden aunts, and whose recollections of the strike menu were vivid.

"Generally tough," growled a man with his elbows in the air as he struggled valiantly with a refractory stew.

"Often gets too much done," ventured the dude, hunting in all his pockets for a coin to match his check.

"Variable in price," offered the politician.

"Greatly improved by a good roast," laughed a stout farmer who was rapidly disposing of a huge red slice.

"Very ingenious, gentlemen, all of your answers, but not quite right. My answer is a good one—roast, steak, or man—is very rare."—Miss M. C. Kittredge, in Lippincott's.

One Way Round.

An old man who sells produce in the towns near Lowell, Mass., has his share of the best kind of wit—the unexpected. Not long ago, according to a writer in the Lowell Citizen, he delivered a pair of dressed chickens to one of his customers. She was in the kitchen when he brought them in, and, woman-like, shivered a little when she saw the headless fowls.

"I should think you'd simply hate to cut off the heads of those innocent chickens," she exclaimed, involuntarily.

"I do," replied the old man, "and so I never do it. I manage to get round it."

"How?" the housewife demanded, with eager interest. "The heads of these chickens are gone."

"Oh, yes," said the old man, cheerfully. "I chopped the chickens off."

Degraded Animal Performers.

Performing lions and tigers ought to be abolished. Performing seals do not matter: they do not injure any ideal, they merely surprise and delight. But the lions and the tigers—the king of beasts and the terrible ravener of the fores,—these we are accustomed to think of with respect and awe, and it is wrong and atheistical to make them jump through hoops and ride on a see-saw.—London Sphere.

Scuttled by Muskrats.

The steamer Swan sank at her pier here as a result of a leak caused by muskrats. The rodents gnawed a hole through the hull near the water line, and the boat settled until she rested on the bottom.

The craft was successfully raised with the assistance of a tug, whose pumps were employed. The muskrats that caused the trouble were killed.—Portland Oregonian.

The coffee crop of Sumatra has become almost equal to that of Java.

WOLF-SKIN GARMENTS.

The Popular Coat in the Northwest and How It Is Made.

If those big wolf and coyote skin overcoats such as are now being worn to Kansas City by Northwestern stockmen and farmers could talk many thrilling and interesting hunting yarns would be added to hunting lore. In the Dakotas, Nebraska and Wyoming, especially, where coats of this kind are a winter's necessity for men out of doors, trapping and killing wolves and coyotes for their skins is quite an industry and is followed with profit by hunters. Many of them are Indians who are skilled in the use of the needle and scissors and realize the full profit on the garment by making it themselves to the customer's order. The best wolf-skin coats sell for $150 and none for less than $100. The legs of the pelt cannot be used and for a large coat ten skins are required. Extreme care must be taken of the coats in summer, however, to keep the moths out of the fur. They are heavier than any sort of an ulster of cloth and remain rain-proof even after days of exposure.

E. W. Hart, of Brock, Neb., who was at the Blossom House one night recently, had one of those coats with a story, or rather with twelve stories, for there was one attached to each of the many skins it was made up of.

"I am not much of a hunter," said Mr. Hart, "and was six years in killing enough wolves to make this coat. It is a homemade affair and a bit rough on the edges, but good enough for a stockman. The skin from which the sleeves are made was obtained with difficulty. This wolf was the largest of the lot, a female, and half starved at the time I captured her. I jumped in among the hounds after she was down to keep them from tearing her throat, but before I could get a firm hold upon her jaws she slipped loose and fastened her teeth in my coat sleeve. I was compelled to let her go, shake her off and let the dogs again catch and kill her. I must have chased, shot at and tried to trap fifty of the beasts before I killed enough to make the coat. They are popular out our way and the greatest garment of their kind, but hard to get."—Kansas City Star.

The Salesman's Creed.

Possibly the Salesman's Creed has not been read by all the world. The drummer who is not on the square and on the level, whose ways are not upright, soon goes to the gutter of commercial life. If a man on the road can live up to the following he will certainly succeed:

I believe in the goods I am selling, in the firm I am working for and in my ability to get results.

I believe that honest goods can be sold to honest men by honest methods.

I believe in working, not waiting; in laughing, not weeping; in boosting, not knocking, and in the pleasure of selling goods.

I believe that a man gets what he goes after; that one order to-day is worth two orders to-morrow, and that no man is down and out until he has lost faith in himself.

I believe in to-day and in the work I am doing; in to-morrow and the work I hope to do, and in the sure reward which the future holds.

I believe in courtesy, in generosity, in good cheer, in kindness, in friendship and honest competition.

I believe there is an order somewhere for every man ready to take one. I believe I'm ready—right now!—New York World.

A Word to Young Men.

So live that your afterself—the man you ought to be—may in his time be possible and actual. Far away in the twenties, the thirties of the twentieth century, he is awaiting his turn. His body, his brain, his soul are in your boyish hands. He cannot help himself. What will you leave for him? Will it be a brain unspoiled by lust or dissipation, a mind trained to think and act, a nervous system true as a dial in its response to the truth about you? Will you, boy of the twentieth century, let him come as a man among men in his time, or will you throw away his inheritance before he has had the chance to touch it? Will you let him come, taking your place, gaining through your experiences, hallowed through your joys, building on them his own, or will you fling his hope away, decreeing, wantonlike, that the man you might have been shall never be? — David Starr-Jordan.

Quick Tunnel Work.

Improved machinery has greatly facilitated tunnel work. The Mt. Cenis tunnel in France, the first to be excavated, is nearly eight miles long, and was fourteen years in construction—the digging being completed on December 25, 1870. The St. Gothard tunnel, nine and a quarter miles long, was pierced through on February 29, 1880, after nine and a half years of work. The Arlberg, six and a half miles long, celebrated the end of its excavation on November 19, 1883, three and a half years after the work was begun. The Simplon, twelve and a half miles long, was pierced on May 4, 1904, after five and a half years of work, and it is expected to be ready for trains next April, or after six and a half years of tunneling.

Albumen in Food.

The amount of albumen necessary in man's food has been proven by French physiologists to be much less than has been supposed. From three to five ounces daily was once thought to be required, but later investigators found that two and a half and even one and a half ounces would suffice. In the new experiments, continued for thirty-eight days, the real need was shown to be less than an ounce per day.

Although the goldfish occurs in a ld state in Japan, it is probable at China some four hundred years go, furnished the stock from which e wonderful varieties of Japanese oldfish have been bred. The demand present appears to be without limit d the output shows a substantial in- reases each year. Many thousand eople make a living by growing gold- sh for the market, and hundreds of oldiers carry the fish through the treets and along the country roads in ooden tubs suspended from a shoul- r bar.

MUCH BETTER THAN CASCADE.

Farmer Knew of More Interesting "Show" Than the One Sought.

Several years ago William L. Douglas spent a short vacation with some friends in New Hampshire. The first morning there found him taking his usual long walk. He had heard his friend talking of Wilson's Cascade just four miles from there, so he decided to walk in that direction. He had gone about two miles when he saw an old man sunning himself in the doorway of a great barn which stood near the road.

"Can you direct me to Wilson's Cascade?" he inquired of the old man.

The old man squinted his eyes and took an exhaustive survey of the question before he spoke. "Take your first right and follow it till you come to a fork where there's a clump o' blackberry bushes," he said, slowly, "then strike off to the left. Go on till you come to the next crossroad, and then bear off to your left again. When you've gone a piece on that road you'll come on Abe Simmons' house. You'll know him, because he wears plaid overalls, green and blue plaid, and she makes 'em for him. You can't keep from laughing when you set eyes on 'em, I'll wager.

"Excuse, but I have only so much time," said Douglas; "will Mr. Simmons direct me to the cascade?"

"I presume to say he can," he answered, "but after you've seen those plaid overalls a little mess o' water running over a little mess o' rocks will seem mighty tame to ye."—Boston Herald.

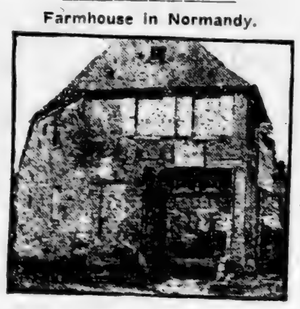
Dust on the Ocean.

"To talk of a 'dusty' ocean highway sounds absurd, but the expression is perfectly accurate," states a writer. "Everyone who is familiar with ships knows that, no matter how carefully the decks may be washed in the morning, a great quantity of dust will collect by nightfall. You say, 'But the modern steamship, burning hundreds of tons of coal a day, easily accounts for such a deposit.' True, but the records of sailing vessels show that the latter collect more dust than a steamer. On a recent voyage of a sailing vessel—a journey which lasted ninety-seven days—twenty-four barrels of dust were swept from the decks! The captain was a man of scientific tastes and made careful observations, but could not solve the mystery. Some, no doubt, comes from the wear and tear on the sails and rigging, but that accounts for only a small portion. To add to the mystery, bits of cork, wood and vegetable fiber are frequently found in this sea dust. Where does it come from?"

Thimble Collecting.

One of the queerest fads among the upper classes is the collecting of the thimbles of women celebrities. One of the finest of these collections is that of a London society man, who has a cabinet full of the dainty finger-shields of the maidens he has loved and lost; while Mrs. Vanderbilt rejoices in the possession of a veritable thimble of that excellent needlewoman Queen Elizabeth. This is the gem of her collection, although the latter contains a solid silver thimble worn by our queen when a girl of fourteen, and a substantial "finger-shoe" of no less a person than the mother of our king.—London Tit-Bits.

Farmhouse in Normandy.



Near Rouen, in Normandy, France, stands a curious old farmhouse built with a porte cochere. Great gates are closed at night to keep intruders out.

A Ferocious Fish.

The post surgeon of Colastine, Santa Fe, Argentina, writes:

"I was called to attend the steward of the Norwegian barque Turist, then loading quebracho wood in this port, who had had his index finger bitten off by the head of a 'bacu' fish, which had been severed from the cleaned and gutted body for a space of two hours previous to his picking up the head to throw it overboard. This is a fact."

Crow Has Learned to Talk.

George Noyes captured a young crow about a year ago. He clipped the bird's wings and gave it to his daughter for a pet. Recently the bird began uttering single words like "papa," "mamma" and "Goldie." His sole effort at forming sentences consists of "George, get up."

CHARM BROUGHT SNAKE DOWN.

Captain of Sailing Vessel Spins a Little Yarn.

This tale has to do with the mishaps of the sailing vessel Indrasahma, Capt. W. E. Craven, who says he is in nowise related to Munchausen, says the New York Times. The Indrasahma got into port yesterday from Singapore, the Philippines, Japan and other far eastern points with a cargo of hemp, oriental curios and tea.

"We left Singapore about two months ago with our cargo and with a supply of snakes, monkeys and other tropical beasts, which we intended to dispose of to menageries in America," said the captain. "Among them were five big snakes, weighing 250 pounds each, and thirty-nine monkeys. When off Singapore the snakes woke up and got out of their cage. One of them sneaked up the foremast to the crow's nest and stayed there for a week. I put Abdul Vin Jangin—not Jaggin, mind ye—upon the job, and told him to watch. He sat down in front of the mast and did a charm song or chant until the mesmerized snake came to and sneaked down again. With a flourish of the tail he gave his four companions the high sign and led them back to their box again."

WORSHIP BISMARCK AS A GOD.

African Tribe Has Made Deity of Great Chancellor.

A missionary who recently returned from South America discovered on the route to Orurotutofagosta a tribe of fetish redskins worshiping Bismarck as a god. Last year, when the drought threatened their harvest, they offered up prayers to their usual idols, but all to no avail. Their chief, having seen at an emigrated farmer's hut the picture of the Iron Chancellor cut out from an illustrated German paper, asked the farmer to make him a present of the print, which request was willingly agreed to. Thereupon the Indians brought the picture in great procession to their temple, and strange to say a welcome rain watered the lands of the tribe. Since that time the deity of the Chancellor, whom the Indians call Bimbarko, is firmly established, and all kinds of reptiles are offered up to him in sacrifice.

Hens All Ready to Move.

This story is told of "Ike" Morse, who once lived in West Campton, N. H. He was noted for his witty sayings and his numerous movings.

The year he lived in West Compton he had already moved eleven times,

He Moved Twelve Times a Year.

when one morning a neighbor who chanced to pass found him packing up to move again.

"What!" exclaimed the neighbor; "moving again, Ike?"

"Yes," answered Ike; "got so used to it the hens are all lying on their backs now ready to have their legs tied."

Four Bears in Two Minutes.

Samuel Kerstetter, while making a call at the Democrat office the other day, gave us an account of four bears being shot by his son Samuel in the mountain north of Laurelton, which is a record worth noting.

The animals were killed in about two minutes' time, and it only took five shots from Samuel's gun to do the work.

The lot consisted of a she bear and three cubs. The mother bear weighed 261 pounds, the cubs weighed, one 110, one 77 and the other 51 pounds.

The old bear was sold for $35, and each of the cubs $10, making a total of $65 for the lot.—Center Hall Democrat.

Spanish Cannon 200 Years Old Found.

While plowing on his father's ranch near Oxnard, Cal., Peter Donlon unearthed an old cannon of Spanish origin and probably 200 years old. This land has been plowed over and over again, but the cannon was found only fourteen inches below the surface.

It was dug up immediately and hauled to Mr. Donlon's home. It is about five feet in length, has a bore of three inches, and weighs between 1,000 and 1,500 pounds. The inscriptions on it are illegible, but enough is visible to make its Spanish origin indisputable.

Home of Artificial Plants.

There are 430 manufactories of artificial flowers, leaves, plants and fruits in the district of Dresden. The largest manufactories employ from 250 to 1,000 persons, and the total number of persons engaged in the trade is estimated at 10,000, the larger proportion being women and girls.

Vitality of Frog's Heart.

There is no living creature, according to a Pennsylvania surgeon, that has a heart with so much vitality as that of a common frog. Late experiments have shown that the heart showed valvular motion for a full day after it had been severed entirely from the body.

BILL WANTED TO SAVE LABOR.

Had Better Scheme Than Lugging Bear Into Camp.

During one of my camping tours with the boys in Maine my brother Bill accompanied us. I might here state that Bill was the laziest fellow I know, says a writer in the Boston Herald.

One afternoon we returned from a fishing trip and found Bill asleep and the fire out. I told him that if he didn't kill something besides time I would ship him home. Bill didn't say anything, but next morning he took my rifle and trod off up the mountain.

An hour later we saw Bill running down the mountain as fast as he could come, and close behind him was a large brown bear. We watched them draw near with loaded rifles ready. On reaching camp Bill turned and killed the bear.

Why Bill Put on Speed.

When we could control our mirth I asked, "Bill, what on earth possessed you to run that distance, with the bear so close, when you might have killed him in the mountains and save—y breath?"

Bill looked at the bear and then at us and drawled, "What's the use of killing a mear in the mountains and lugging him in when you can run him in?"

DOCTOR HAS OFFICE IN JAIL.

Patients Call There, and His Business Is Growing.

Dr. Gustav Krauss, who was extradited from New York on a criminal charge preferred against him by Mrs. Thomas Rutledge and now locked up in the county jail at Jersey City on a civil suit brought by Mr. Rutledge, is allowed to practice his profession in the jail.

As he had given bail on the criminal charge before his arrest on the civil process he is not regarded as a prisoner in the ordinary sense of the term, and is merely confined in the detention room set apart for witnesses.

Here all who choose to call are allowed to consult him professionally. Some days he is visited by a dozen patients, and he says it is a dull day when he has only two or three visitors.

"Not only that," he added, "but my business is increasing. If it keeps on growing at the same rate that it has for the last ten days my income will more than cover the expenses of my trial."—New York World.

Owns Wooden Legged Chicken.

Young John Farley, who lives with his father in St. Paul, Minn., is the proud possessor of a bantam rooster that has the distinction of being, probably, the only chicken in St. Paul that owns and uses a wooden leg.

The rooster got caught in a cold snap this winter and froze off the lower portion of one of its legs. Young Farley sorrowed over his pet for a while, but later, when the leg healed, he bethought himself of a wooden leg.

He cut out an artificial limb and put it on the rooster. The result was that now he can whip any chicken in the barnyard.

No Money in Frost Fish.

Thomaston, Me., fishermen, who thought there must be money in shipping frost fish to the New York market, got a serious jar the other day when the returns from their commission merchants came in. One man was informed that he had one cent to his credit, and the company generously enclosed double that amount in stamps. Another was less fortunate, being obliged to send four cents to his New York agents to balance the account.

Queerly Placed Milestone.

The first milestone out of the city of London on the Great Eastern road to Colchester is to be found in the tap room of a beerhouse in the Whitechapel road. Probably the house was built over the stone.

DEIFIED BY CHINESE

REMARKABLE HONOR PAID TO AMERICAN CITIZEN.

Services of Major Frederic T. Ward, Commander of the Ever Victorious Army, Recognized in a Peculiar Manner by the Celestials.

To live on after his mortal death, as a deity, one of the worshiped gods of 400,000,000 people, has been the remarkable fate of one American citizen, Major Frederic T. Ward of Salem, Mass.

The story of this man's invaluable services to the Chinese government as commander-in-chief of the imperial forces which suppressed the famous Taiping rebellion after a twenty years' campaign, is fairly well known, but probably few Americans are aware of the almost unprecedented honors that have been paid to his memory since Major Ward fell, while leading a charge by his Ever Victorious army near the city of Ningpo, Sept. 19, 1862.

It is pleasant to realize that the memory of this illustrious Massachusetts soldier is so securely enshrined in the hearts of China's millions that nothing short of an entire change of faith on the part of that great nation can ever dim its luster.

When Major Ward fell before Ningpo, to be later succeeded in command of the army by the noted "Chinese" Gordon, his body was committed to earth with honors that have never perhaps been equaled in China, save at the death of an emperor.

This, however, was not sufficient to show the veneration in which he was held by the Chinese, for in 1871, the late Li Hung Chang of illustrious history memorialized the throne that Ward should be deified and a temple erected where he might receive sacrifices.

The throne was responsive and in the tiny village of Soong Kong, situated about 100 miles up the river from Shanghai, the necessary arrangements were later carried out.

Not many American tourists and comparatively few of the business men of Shanghai find their way to this remarkable shrine of an American-Chinese god, but a few months ago a well-known Boston merchant made a pilgrimage thither, spent several hours at the temple.

"Thither I went," says this gentleman, "one beautiful day in September, to search out the place where an American citizen is held as a god.

"The main room of the temple is perhaps twenty feet square, and in the center stands the pedestal or dais on which rests the tablets which are the material manifestation of Ward's deity.

"There are a number of tablets about the shrine. Above all and the most prominent one has these words in Chinese characters, 'Sacred Seat of Major Ward.' Two others which were presented by the Taotai of Shanghai read as follows: 'A wonderful warrior; he was from beyond the seas, whose deeds spread through a myriad miles, and whose name is retained in stone and blood.'

"Near the rear of the temple stands the grave. It is a large mound possibly eight feet in height. Around its base are a half dozen tall poplar trees. It is just such a grave as may be seen anywhere in China by the hundreds of thousands.

"In no other place in the world would the grave of a foreigner receive such homage as does this one of the leader of the 'Ever Victorious army.'"

It is a remarkable story how Ward, who without military training and while comparatively a mere boy should seek such a commission. He with his followers were playing for big stakes. Many hundreds of them fell on the field and received but the scant honor of an unknown grave in an unknown land.

Others, more fortunate, as officers, have their names engraved upon the brass tablets which adorn the sides of a granite monument which stands upon the public bund in Shanghai.

Ward's name heads that list. Every morning a coolie burnishes the tablets on the monument, but he cannot read.

Two foreigners have been received into the Chinese government, and have been claimed and held as if they were God-given benefactors to the Chinese people. One was Ward, whom the Chinese have thus deified; the other is Sir Robert Hart, who is the most powerful personage to-day in the Chinese empire, an Englishman who is virtually the dictator of Chinese policy under the guise of a public adviser.

PLACE TO LOOK FOR SHOWING.

Was There, but Not Where Captain Would Have It.

Thirty years ago, in Concord, N. H., Capt. Dan B. Newhall, now department commander of the G. A. R. of New Hampshire, was the owner of a billiard parlor, which will be remembered by all the old "boys" and some of the younger ones.

There came an evening when, as assistant chief of the fire department, he was obliged to attend a meeting at headquarters. His regular clerk was under the weather, and, thinking he would be away but a short time, one of the members of Kearsarge steamer 2 was put in to do the work, and, as he was very popular business was good.

The captain did not return until Every Table Was in Use.

nearly time to close, but when he did every table was in use, with "wet" games the rule, and some "wets" with no game. As he looked the place over a broad smile lit up his face, and he made his way to the till to see the receipts. The smile suddenly faded away, and, turning to the man behind the bar, he said: "Ned, where is all the business? Not much of a show here."

With all the dignity his "load" would allow, "Ned" replied: "Never mind the till, Capt. Dan; just look at the slate."

Spools Made of Sawdust.

William L. Williams of this city has been at work on a process of making a fiber spool for several years. At first the attempt was made to make the spools from pulverized newspapers, this being done by incorporating a substance with the paper which, when heated, united it into a solid mass, but later experiments disclosed the face that common sawdust and leather chips and shavings produced a much stronger spool. The ordinary large 12,000-yard spools are made in four pieces, the heads being solid and the barrel being divided in halves lengthwise.

Timber for wooden spools has become very scarce, and it is believed that the fiber spool can be made much more cheaply than the wooden one.—Willimantic correspondence Hartford Courant.

Tortoise Ends Long Span of Life.

Just about the time that the Galapagos islands were discovered by the Spanish, not quite 400 years ago, a bright young elephant tortoise was born there. When mischievous his grandfather prophesied that he would come to a bad end. He died last week in the zoological gardens at London, England.

Though, comparatively speaking, he was but a newcomer at the gardens, he used to give himself airs, claiming to be a personal friend of Sir Francis Drake. When in good health he would eat as much green food as an average cow. His assumed age, 350 years, was painted on his shell, but he claimed to be fifty years older.

Chew to Build Church.

J. P. Withrow, a merchant of Hollis and Ellenboro, N. C., has a novel plan in behalf of the interdenominational church he proposes to build in Hollis. Tobacco tags, if this plan does not miscarry, are to serve as the financial foundation of the new place of worship. Already the tags are pouring in upon the devoted collector from many sources. Mr. Withrow hopes before long to have the building of the "tobacco tag church" under way.

Big Wolf Caught by Children.

Emmette Coylem, aged 10 years, and his sister, aged 8 years, a few days ago ran down and killed a large gray wolf without assistance. The youngsters had set traps for the pests.

One animal was caught, but snapped the chain and started off with the trap on one foot. The children followed and killed the wolf with a .22 calibre rifle.—Newcastle correspondence Denver Republican.

THE PRIZE WINNERS.

The result of the contest as shown by our books and approved by Judge L. H. Reynolds was:

Lee T. Vickers	22
W. O. Rich	3
Rev. S. Smitherman	2
James A. Thomas	2

And then follows a host of friends with one each. None but PAID UP subscribers were counted in the contest. The tie between Rev. S. Smitherman and James A. Thomas will be decided in favor of that one of them who sends in the largest number of paid subscribers by May 1st next. We tender our hearty thanks to all who participated and venture to express the hope that they will "not weary in well doing" but "keep up the good work." The one way to win is to "keep everlastingly at it."

Clanton, April 3, 1906.

Editor Union:

I was glad to see in your last issue of THE UNION that you had finished your third year in the newspaper business. We republicans and populists know what a hard time you have had since you have been in the newspaper business. The democrats have fought you with all the means that they could think of, and some who claim to be Republicans are guilty of the same crime; but nevertheless you have stood your hand, and have been of much help to the cause of the common people of Chilton county. I, for one, wish you much success in the future. I'll not say much about the Smith brothers turning Republican, for as you know, Col. A. C. Smith is one of Clanton's best lawyers, and his brother, J. W., is one of Clanton's leading merchants. And there is Mr J. O. Middleton, another fine lawyer, who has lately turned Republican Now, have not we Republicans got something to rejoice about? Two good Republican lawyers to work for us when we need them, and we must call on them instead of a democrat. We must also think of Rollins, Littlejohn Smith and Foshee when we want to buy goods. They are all good Republicans. Mr. Editor, if the best people of Clanton keep turning Republicans and good Republicans keep moving in, you all can elect your mayor in a little while. Mr. Editor, I hope that every person that wants to see Chilton county ruled by the common people will set in now to roll the subscription list of THE UNION to 1,500 by July 4th. Very truly yours,

A REPUBLICAN.

COUNTY COURT.

County Court was in session Monday and Tuesday morning, Judge Reynolds presiding. The Collins chapel imbroglio was gone into at length and the defendants, Rosco, Mims and Collins, were acquitted. Ben Tyus, accused of assault and battery, was discharged and the prosecuting witness, R. L. Wright, was taxed with the costs. Ben Tyus, charged with "selling whisky to minor" and "selling whisky without license" was acquitted in both cases. Fred Baker, charged with "selling liquor without license" and "selling whiskey to a minor" was fined $50 in each case, but took an appeal to Circuit Court. Another case against Fred Baker, "assault and battery," was waived to the grand jury. Mack Baker, who had three similar charges; Hiram Busby, "non-support;" Monroe Cleckler, "abusive language," and "assault with a weapon," all waived to the grand jury. J. T. Thompson, "allure to work public road," acquitted. Missouri Irwin, "petit larceny," continued.

Tuesday afternoon Judge Reynolds held the preliminary examination in the case of the negro, Jeff Shelton, charged with the murder of Ashley Goodwin, also colored, on March 16th last. Hon. Fritz Thompson, of Centerville, solicitor of the 4th judicial circuit, appeared for the prosecution, having been retained by the murdered man's relatives. Shelton was bound over in the sum of $1,000 to await the action of the grand jury.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Commissioners' Court was in session the forepart of this week, looking after the county's business. Commissioners Moses Robinson, W. H. Conway and Alex Glasscock were present; R. P. Kendrick was absent, being seriously ill at his home. Many expressions of regret as to his illness were heard, but all hope he will soon be out again. The routine business as to roads, paupers, etc., was attended to also checking up Contractor Dobson on the court house; the jail is finished and accepted by the Board.

THORSBY LETTER.

Mr. John Hawkins left last week for Madison, Ala., where he will visit a while before going to his home in Indiana. Mr. Kings family have moved into S. A. Thorson's house.

Mrs. P. K. Villadsen entertained a number of her lady friends last Wednesday afternoon. Mr. P. Olson and family, who have been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. G. Berlin, left last week (Wednesday) for Carbon Hill. We hear the Hedberg place has been sold to Rev. Fogelstrom. Dr. L. V. Stabler and J. Bice drove to Clanton Monday. T. J. Hubbard, of Jemison, was in Thorsby Friday. Martin Sorrell returned from Coleanor Friday evening. A. L. Tornblom returned to Chicago Thursday. Ben Robinson was in Birmingham Friday. Chas. A. Peterson and son Arthur, who have been working in Anniston, came home the latter part of last week. Mrs. H. H. Groethe is back from a visit at Calera. The many friends of Arnold Franzen will be sorry to hear of his death. His death occurred this past week at the home of his father near Roswell, New Mexico. Messrs. Lien, Larson and Feast were visitors to our county seat Monday. The Ladies' Society of the United Protestant church will hold a seed exchange social at the home of Mrs. Snyder Thursday afternoon. Scott Caverino made a business trip to Clanton Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Gerald celebrated their fifteenth anniversary Wednesday, March 28th. Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Peterson are the proud parents of a baby boy. Mr. Thomas has opened up a stand in the front part of the postoffice, where he will sell lemonade, soda water and confectionery. Mrs. P. C. Smith and Miss Maud Gerald visited with Miss Muse, of Clanton, Monday. Mrs. Twenquist visited with relatives in Calera last week. It seems quite a treat to have sunshine again after last week's rainy and cloudy weather. The Thorsby boys had a game of ball Saturday afternoon. The score was 13 to 20 in favor of the O. A. B. boys. The Ladies' Auxiliary met with Mrs. G. C. Michelson Friday afternoon. The ladies are very busy working for a bazaar which they will hold later on. Through the efforts of these ladies a traveling library has been secured for our city. At present Mrs. Norton has charge of the books. Clarence Bice came up from Montgomery Tuesday evening, returning Wednesday. Mrs. Schafer returned from a visit to Wetumpka the first of this week. A large crowd of young folks attended the Swedish Young People's Society last evening at the home of Miss Nellie Malmquist. Messrs. Lindquist and Witt are on the sick list. A car load of strawberry crates was unloaded here Friday. The Ladies' Aid of the Swedish church meets with Mrs. J. L. Foss Thursday, April 13th. Mr. Ben Olson spent Tuesday in Calera. Mr. G. H. Gerald was in Clanton on Wednesday between trains. The Misses Cline were visitors to the capital city Wednesday.

ANON.

A NOTABLE CONVENTION.

The time draws near for the annual convention of the Alabama S. S. Association. It is to be held in Montgomery April 24-26. A splendid program has been prepared and everything indicates that it will be largely attended. The Sunday school workers of Montgomery are preparing to entertain the delegates and it is expected that there will be more than 600 in attendance upon the convention. For the convenience of the delegates a lunch will be served at the church in which the convention meets at noon each day. The superintendents are requested to send the names of delegates to Mr. R. O. Blakey, chairman of the entertainment committee, Montgomery, Ala. All ministers of the gospel are ex-officio delegates and each S. S. can send its superintendent and two other delegates to represent it in the convention. The railroads of the State have granted a rate of one fare, plus 25 cents, for the round trip.

tf

A PLEASANT OCCASION.

Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Gerald, of Thorsby, invited the ladies and gentlemen of the "Commercial Club" and the ladies of the "Auxiliary" to help them celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage, Wednesday evening, March 28th. Most of the members were present and spent an unusually pleasant evening. As a slight token of the regard in which Mr. and Mrs. Gerald are held, the gentlemen of the "club" presented Mr. Gerald with a German student lamp, and the ladies presented Mrs. Gerald an elegant cut glass berry bowl.

ONE OF THE GUESTS.

A MESSAGE TO SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS.

It is earnestly desired that every Sunday school in Chilton county elect delegates to the State Sunday School Convention to be held in Montgomery April 24-26. Especial attention is called to the following facts which have been furnished by the state officers: The convention will be held in the First Presbyterian church on Adams street between Court and Perry streets The railroads have given a rate of one fare plus 25 cents for the round trip. The delegates will be entertained in the homes of the Montgomery people.

As it is very important for the entertainment committee to know how many delegates to prepare for, each superintendent is requested to send, as soon as possible, the names of the delegates, expecting to attend the convention, to Mr. R. O. Blakey, Montgomery, Ala., the chairman of the entertainment committee.

The basis of representation is five delegates at large from the county, to be appointed by the county president Mr. Crumpton. All ministers of the gospel, the superintendent and two other delegates from every Sunday school.

During the convention, Miss Kennedy, the state primary secretary, will hold two separate meetings for the primary teachers and as we expect to pay special attention to primary work in the county this year, it would be a good thing, when practicable, to elect the primary teacher as one of the two delegates.

It is very important for Chilton county to be well represented at this convention. To most of us the association work is comparatively new and this is the best opportunity we will have to become familiar with the work, methods and plans of the state organization, of which our county association is a part. It will do us good to meet and mingle with Sunday school workers from all over Alabama; it will do the schools good to have the new interest and fresh enthusiasm which we will gain at a state convention, so let every superintendent try to have his school represented in Montgomery April 24-26.

SECRETARY.

DEBATE AT MT. PLEASANT.

On the night of April 14th (Saturday) there will be a debate at Mt. Pleasant school house (near J. Wiley Foshee's). The subject will be: "Resolved, That the wage system is worse slavery than the chattel system was." Speakers in the affirmative will be C. N. Eiland and L. B. Pounds; in the negative, L. D. Riggins and Howard Roper. Everybody is invited to come.

CEDAR GROVE.

Dear Editor:

Our community has had so much rain in last week or so that we farmers have not done anything in the way of farming, but when it does clear up we'll make things hum. We organized a Sunday school the fourth Sunday in March and today it is one of the best in the county. I'm proud to say that some of the parents have seen the good of a S. S. and are trying with all their might to push it along, and I hope all will fall in line with us, for a good S. S. is the life of a community. C. R. Childress has had to work his road again on account of wash outs. Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Barrett spent a few days last week with her parents near Dixie. J. M. Poole went to Clanton Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Lije Burnett spent Sunday with Mr. W. L. Collins and wife. Lee T. Vickers spent Saturday and Sunday on a visit to Mr. Joe Logan's. The new woven wire fence which has been placed around Cedar Grove cemetery adds greatly to its appearance. J. M Littlejohn, Jr., and wife spent Sunday with Frank Price's family. Alfred Collins has had his house painted and other work done, which makes his residence an ornament to our neighborhood. We're glad to see so many letters from various parts of the county in our county paper. We're going to give a young man who rides a high-headed horse a write up soon. W. R. Pate is very proud of his new barn and well he may be.

TOBY.

REHOBOTH.

Editor Union:

Just a few words from this part of the Soap Hills. Health in general is very good in spite of the rainy weather, but am sorry to say we've had one death. Mr. Richard Hicks, after a long spell of sickness, passed away on Wednesday, March 28th, and was laid to rest in Rehoboth cemetery the following day at 4 p. m. Bro. Harris, a Methodist pastor at Randolph, preached the funeral sermon which greatly interested all who heard it. Mr. Hicks leaves a wife and 11 children and many warm friends who mourn his loss. Well, the people here have woke up at last and are putting their shoulder to the wheel of the great farmers' organization, called the F. E. & C. U. of A. and are going to "do business" at once, and will be represented in the county meeting at Antioch on Wednesday of this week. G. W. Scott spent two days with O. P. and J. D. Scott at Active this week on a horse trade at Centerville. J. N. Scott, of Mars Hill, passed through here this week on his way to Perry county to organize locals of the Farmers' Union. There was a big all-day singing at Friendship church in Perry county last Sunday. Mr. Moore was there and reported a nice time. The singing on Sunday night at L. J. Moore's was enjoyed by all present. Rehoboth has the largest S. S. it's had for years and it hopes to grow still larger. The S. S. is planning to buy an organ soon to be used for the benefit of both the church and S. S. Rev. J. H. Thomas fills his regular appointment here every second Sunday and Saturday before. Singing every first and third Sunday evening.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, the Father of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

STATE BAPTIST ORPHANAGE.

Evergreen, Ala., March 28, 1906.

To Whom It May Concern:

Having received complaints in regard to the "Orphans' Call" not being sent in, I take this means of letting the cause be known. The editor not being able to secure a printer, and some damage done by fire to the office, has rendered it impossible to get out paper yet, but, however, you will receive it one year (that is the subscribers). But if you desire your money refunded, just drop Rev. John W. Stewart a card saying, "Please refund my subscription," and he will without delay. Fraternally,

E. L. BARLOW,
tf Sol.

OUR SPRING GREETING

To the Citizens of Clanton and Chilton County

Spring in all its beauty has arrived and with it we are pleased to announce that we have received and have now on display the largest and best selected stock of that we have ever shown. We have taken special pains this season to select what we deem the prettiest as well as the best merchandise that money could buy, and with the ready cash we have been enabled to get all our goods at the lowest prices. No advance on any goods you buy from us.

Dry Goods, Clothing, Millinery, Men, Ladies' & Children's Shoes

We have the choicest line of new and fresh Groceries

Our Millinery Department opens up with a beautiful display of

New Spring Millinery

Two experienced milliners have the superintendence of this department.

Last year our gift of a $60 suit of furniture was so much appreciated that we have decided to give our customers this year an $80 Rubber-Tired Buggy.

With every 50c purchase we give our customers a ticket entitling him to one chance for the beautiful buggy.

We Pay Railroad Fare.

Our friends who will come to trade with us from Ocampo, Jemison, Thorsby, Lomax, Cooper, Verbena, Mountain Creek or Marbury, who spend $5.00 with us, we will pay one-half their railroad fare; if they spend $10 with us will pay their railroad fare both ways. Very respectfully,

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

I see Mars Hill is pretty well wrote up in our last paper, but I can't help all of that, and will drop you a few lines myself. Health of our community good, but a lot of our people have got the blues on account of so much rain, and their lands are badly washed, as the old saying: "It has washed gullies where there never were gullies before." Some corn has been planted and some guano has been put out, but the great majority have done neither. Some are selling cotton and some are holding. Boys, feed the market only when it gets hungry. J. N. Scott has received his commission as organizer of the F. E. and C. U. for Perry county, and is out at work. Of course, we hope he will have a grand success. Brother Thomas filled his regular appointmnet Sunday, but owing to circumstances he could not be with us on Saturday. A. J. and D. W. Scott visited G. W. Scott Sunday evening. J. R. Marlowe, of Jemison, was with us Sunday. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the faithful care of J. M. Gothard. The Sunbeam society has a large and regular attendance. Watch out, Judge, somebody is crossing the creek very often. We know he is young, but even young men go to Clanton sometimes. Success to THE UNION and its readers.

THE OLD MAN.

MT. PLEASANT CHURCH.

Editor Union:

Health of our community is not very good, several having the mumps, but we hope for their speedy recovery. This wet weather is putting us farmers behind with our work. Our Sunday school is doing nicely, improving right along, and our singing was a decided success. Brother Archie Glasscock failed to come, but Brother A. E. Glasscock knows no such thing as fail. Brother Albert is one of our music loving men, so he led the class, assisted by Brother J. B. Northcutt, and we sure had a good time and splendid behavior. We were glad to see so many friends from Rocky Mount and Shiloh and Jemison. We all say welcome and come again. We are keeping an eye on some of our young folks and will post Judge Reynolds, so he can have his pen ready, even in the dark, still hours of the night, for "We know not at what hour." B. T. Robinson has nine milch cows and has bought six stands of bees and it carries our mind back to that story of old "A land that flows with milk and honey." Brother Robinson also killed four fine fat hogs Friday, and that means plenty of gravy. We thought the fruit, especially the peaches, was a goner, but there is plenty yet. A. J. Glasscock, W. V. Northcutt and J. A. Green all have new mail boxes on No. 2, and H. G. Gentry has one on No. 4. We hope THE UNION will make its weekly visit to those boxes. Brothers, remember the bridge that carries us over, THE UNION, has stood the test. Let's stand by them that stand by us and support THE UNION. Success to THE UNION and its host of readers.

STUMP HILL.

ROCKY MOUNT NEWS.

Health is good except we have a heap of mumps, and we've had a lot of rain, but the sun is shining now. We are fencing in our cemetery and it will be up to date. Many of our folks went to Mount Pleasant Sunday to singing and report a nice time. Our Union is doing well at present and shows up fine. The young man that goes up on the big road will soon give Judge L. H. R. a job to write out a license.

DRY VALLEY.

Dear Editor:

Will you give me a little space to say a few words about Dry Valley, as they call it; but it don't look much like a dry valley no wafter all this rain. General health is good. Rev. Connell filled his regular appointment at the Baptist church Sunday. Had a large attendance. Our school closed Friday and we all bid our teacher goodby, but we hope to get her again. Well, it looks about time for "Just a Voter" to come again. I always like for Friday to come so that we can get the good paper, THE UNION. Well I'll ring off and if this gets in print, I may come again. Success to THE UNION and its many readers.

DRY VALLEYAN.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Editor Union:

We wish to congratulate you on the phenomenal success with which you have met in establishing THE UNION, Chilton's searchlight; long may it shine. It is such a welcome visitor, eager hands are ready to grasp it and peruse its pages soon as it arrives. If you wish to hear from Lomax, Bessie, Maplesville, Center Point, Macedonia, Wylam, Thorsby, Mars Hill, Mims' Saw Mill and other points read THE UNION.

As spring comes on we naturally, in harmony with the songsters of the forest, let our thoughts dwell on music. The all day singings will soon be here and vast crowds will meet on those occasions, for which I think our county might be entitled proverbial.

Thinking of vocal music carries our thoughts back to the seventies, when a great wave of song swept over this section of country, when vast crowds would assemble at Providence, Macedonia, Rehoboth and other places and hear or sing such compositions as "Sherburn," "Pacolet," "Home," "Easter Anthem," etc. Why, we imagine we can almost hear now the voice of the Fountain brothers, G. W. Gothard, Enock Hayse, Wash Houlditch, John Lowery, S. N. Waldrup and others. Prominent among those who engaged in that song movement, but are gone from the walks of men, we can well remember the voices of Misses Sarah Houlditch, Sidera Palmer, Malida Belvin, John Brantley and John Fountain. Alas! we hear them no more; their voices are hushed in their last sleep. But in hope we think of them in the glorious resurrection granted to us by our Redeemer's sacrifice.

The success of this work of sacred music was largely due to the faithful work of R. M. Honeycutt. The law of harmony might not have been so well observed then as now, but doubtless the spirit of reverence made up for that deficit. We remember some in that work whose voices were too young to be steady; some of them, too, have fallen victims to death, the leveler of all distinction. Sacred music is elevating and aids in lifting us up to the plane described by C. E. Orr:

"Thinking of thee, O Lord, of thee.
Musing on things above,
Till every chord within my soul
Is tuned with Heavenly love."

MT. PLEASANT HAPPENINGS.

Oh, my! but it did rain a sight, but we're having some nice days now, which looks good and the farmers of this district need several good days to work. Health of the community is fairly good, there being no serious sickness reported. John W. Harris and wife paid our country a visit last Saturday and Sunday. James A. Thomas, of Clanton, was at our union Saturday, and we understand he resigned as secretary of that local. We suppose that Mr. Thomas made a good officer, for we know that he was amply qualified to attend to the business all right. We think the lodge got a good man to take his place in the person of T. J. Baxley, who recently moved into our settlement from Coosa county. J. Wiley Foshee still talks business for his union, and there must be good in it because Mr. F. generally knows a good thing when he sees it. Rev. W. P. Lowery says his young "Newt Gresham" is doing fine and promises to make a good "Newton." Our Sunday school is on the move with a fairly good attendance, considering the weather. The patrons of the literary school at this place met last Saturday night to formulate plans for a summer school, also to elect a teacher. We've not heard what they done, but guess that they "agreed to disagree" as usual and dismissed in order to meet again soon. It does look as if we could have a good school, as the children are here and the house is here, and the teacher can be got, so I see no reason for a failure. A. A. Ayers is building and repairing things in general around his place this spring, which improves the general appearance very much. With best wishes to THE UNION and its many readers,

GUESS WHO.

Editor Union:

People in this community are getting badly behind with their work on account of so much rain. Am sorry to say that Mrs. F. M. Green is on the sick list, but hope to see her up soon. Her little girl fell and broke her arm last Sunday, but we hope to see her recover speedily. The F. E. and C. U. of A. at county line is progressing nicely. We are growing right along. Let the good work go on. Organizer J. N. Scott was with us last Saturday and we had a good meeting.

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

I see Mars Hill is pretty well wrote up in our last paper, but I can't help all of that, and will drop you a few lines myself. Health of our community good, but a lot of our people have got the blues on account of so much rain, and their lands are badly washed, as the old saying: "It has washed gullies where there never were gullies before." Some corn has been planted and some guano has been put out, but the great majority have done neither. Some are selling cotton and some are holding. Boys, feed the market only when it gets hungry. J. N. Scott has received his commission as organizer of the F. E. and C. U. for Perry county, and is out at work. Of course, we hope he will have a grand success. Brother Thomas filled his regular appointmnet Sunday, but owing to circumstances he could not be with us on Saturday. A. J. and D. W. Scott visited G. W. Scott Sunday evening. J. R. Marlowe, of Jemison, was with us Sunday. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the faithful care of J. M. Gothard. The Sunbeam society has a large and regular attendance. Watch out, Judge, somebody is crossing the creek very often. We know he is young, but even young men go to Clanton sometimes. Success to THE UNION and its readers.

THE OLD MAN.

MT. PLEASANT CHURCH.

Editor Union:

Health of our community is not very good, several having the mumps, but we hope for their speedy recovery. This wet weather is putting us farmers behind with our work. Our Sunday school is doing nicely, improving right along, and our singing was a decided success. Brother Archie Glasscock failed to come, but Brother A. E. Glasscock knows no such thing as fail. Brother Albert is one of our music loving men, so he led the class, assisted by Brother J. B. Northcutt, and we sure had a good time and splendid behavior. We were glad to see so many friends from Rocky Mount and Shiloh and Jemison. We all say welcome and come again. We are keeping an eye on some of our young folks and will post Judge Reynolds, so he can have his pen ready, even in the dark, still hours of the night, for "We know not at what hour." B. T. Robinson has nine milch cows and has bought six stands of bees and it carries our mind back to that story of old "A land that flows with milk and honey." Brother Robinson also killed four fine fat hogs Friday, and that means plenty of gravy. We thought the fruit, especially the peaches, was a goner, but there is plenty yet. A. J. Glasscock, W. V. Northcutt and J. A. Green all have new mail boxes on No. 2, and H. G. Gentry has one on No. 4. We hope THE UNION will make its weekly visit to those boxes. Brothers, remember the bridge that carries us over, THE UNION, has stood the test. Let's stand by them that stand by us and support THE UNION. Success to THE UNION and its host of readers.

STUMP HILL.

ROCKY MOUNT NEWS.

Health is good except we have a heap of mumps, and we've had a lot of rain, but the sun is shining now. We are fencing in our cemetery and it will be up to date. Many of our folks went to Mount Pleasant Sunday to singing and report a nice time. Our Union is doing well at present and shows up fine. The young man that goes up on the big road will soon give Judge L. H. R. a job to write out a license.

DRY VALLEY.

Dear Editor:

Will you give me a little space to say a few words about Dry Valley, as they call it; but it don't look much like a dry valley no wafter all this rain. General health is good. Rev. Connell filled his regular appointment at the Baptist church Sunday. Had a large attendance. Our school closed Friday and we all bid our teacher goodby, but we hope to get her again. Well, it looks about time for "Just a Voter" to come again. I always like for Friday to come so that we can get the good paper, THE UNION. Well I'll ring off and if this gets in print, I may come again. Success to THE UNION and its many readers.

President's Income.

A correspondent says: "Is the president able to save anything out of the mere $50,000 a year salary he receives?" Many people believe that the $50,000 a year which the president gets as salary is the sum total of his official income. It is a mistake. This is how he is paid: Thirty-six thousand and sixty-four dollars is given him, in addition to his salary of $50,000 to pay the salaries of his subordinates and clerks. His private secretary is paid $3,250, his assistant private secretary $2,250, his stenographer $1,800, five messengers (each) $1,800, a steward $1,800, two doorkeepers (each) $1,200, four other clerks at good salaries ranging from $1,500 to $2,500, one telegraph operator, two ushers, $1,200 and $1,400; a night usher $1,200, a watchman $900, and a man who takes care of the fires, who receives $864 a year. In addition to this there is given him $8,000 for incidental expenses, such as stationery, carpets and the care of the presidential stables. And under another heading there is given him nearly $40,000 more. Of this $12,500 is for repairs and refurnishing the White House, $2,500 is for fuel, $4,000 is for the green-house, $15,000 is for gas, matches and the stable. The White House, all told, costs the country, in connection with the president, considerably over $125,000 a year. The president is also well-to-do in his own right, having inherited a competence from his father. Add to this the royalties he has received from his books, his income from magazine work, and it will be seen that the expenses incident to the marriage of Miss Alice will by no means pinch the purse of the house of Roosevelt.—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Woman Politician.

The considerable part which English women play in politics is well expressed by the London Mail in an article upon the recent death of Lady Grey, wife of Sir Edward Grey, secretary of state for foreign affairs. It said in part: "Even apart from her devotion to her husband, she was the keenest possible liberal politician, though the daughter of an old Tory squire, Maj. S. F. Widdrington (whose ancestor is mentioned in the ballad of Chevy Chase), and her personal popularity in the Border county was responsible for much of its liberalism. For Sid Edward she worked incessantly and brilliantly, from his first political campaign two months after his marriage in 1885, down to the late battle, from whose triumph she has been so tragically called away." Lady Grey had a large desk at Falloden devoted to political papers, answered many of Sir Edward's letters, and throughout his five campaigns frequently took notes at his opponents' meetings of points in the speeches which she thought needed reply.

At a recent meeting of the French Women's Rights League in Paris a resolution was passed unanimously calling for the wiping out of all laws which relegate the wife to legal inferiority. A commission has been appointed recently to revise the civil code, and there was a strong expression on the unfairness of excluding women from this body.

A COLD BROUGHT IT ON.

Severe Congestion of the Kidneys Soon Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

Richard M. Pearce, a prominent business man of 231 So. Orange St., Newark, N. J., says: "Working nights during bad weather brought on a heavy cold, aching of the limbs and pain in the back and kidneys. Severe congestion of the kidneys followed. Besides the terrific aching there were whirling headaches, and I became exceedingly weak. My doctor could not help me, and I turned to Doan's Kidney Pills, with the result that the kidney congestion disappeared, and, with it, all the other symptoms. What is more, the cure has lasted for 8 years."

The Smallest Watch.

There are plenty of small watches in the world, and many ladies wear them, with faces no larger than a silver dime, in their bracelets. But Earl W. Eckel, who was found encamped at Eighteenth and Market streets when that region was first discovered, and has been identified with the neighborhood ever since, has the smallest affair yet. He wears it as a lapel button.

The face of this tiny watch is much smaller than a dime. The back of it, which is about as large as a 5-cent piece, contains the works. It is a splendid little timekeeper, and ticks away the hours without making any fuss about it.

It is, says the Earl, the greatest bore discourager in the world. The novelty of it directs attention to it, and no one can impose upon its wearer and forget the flight of time. It stares him in the face and conveys hints that are unmistakable and which he meegly heeds.

Echel picked it up in his travels, and has never seen another like it. The little watch was made in Switzerland, and is a remarkably fine piece of work.

Underground Telegraph.

There is now underground telegraphic communication between London and Scotland. Germany's underground system dates from 1870. France followed suit in 1879, as the result of a great storm that isolated Paris in 1875. Up to date her system has cost $36,000,000, but it is believed to have more than paid for itself. Lines constructed in 1880 are still in excellent condition.

The Coffee Debate.

The published statements of a number of coffee importers and roasters indicate a "waspy" feeling towards us, for daring to say that coffee is harmful to a percentage of the people.

A frank public discussion of the subject is quite agreeable to us and can certainly do no harm; on the contrary when all the facts on both sides of any question are spread before the people they can thereupon decide and act intelligently.

Give the people plain facts and they will take care of themselves.

We demand facts in this coffee discussion and propose to see that the facts are brought clearly before the people.

A number of coffee importers and roasters have joined a movement to boom coffee and stop the use of Postum Food Coffee and in their newspaper advertisements undertake to deceive by false assertions.

Their first is that coffee is not harmful.

We assert that one in every three coffee users has some form of incipient or chronic disease; realize for one moment what a terrible menace to a nation of civilized people, when one kind of beverage cripples the energies and health of one-third the people who use it.

We make the assertion advisedly and suggest that the reader secure his own proof by personal inquiry among coffee users.

Ask your coffee drinking friends if they keep free from any sort of aches and ails. You will be startled at the percentage and will very naturally seek to place the cause of disorder on something aside from coffee, whether food, inherited tendencies or something else.

Go deeper in your search for facts.

If you have had a occasional neuralgia, rheumatism, heart weakness, stomach or bowel trouble, kidney complaint, weak eyes, or approaching nervous prostration induce him or her to make the experiment of leaving off coffee for 10 days and using Postum Food Coffee, and observe the result. It will startle you and give your friend something to think of. Of course, if the person is one of the weak ones and says "I can't quit" you will have discovered one of the slaves of the coffee importer. Treat such kindly, for they seem absolutely powerless to stop the gradual but sure destruction of body and health.

Nature has a way of destroying a part of the people to make room for the stronger. It is the old law of "the survival of the fittest" at work, and the victims are many.

We repeat the assertion that coffee does harm many people, not all, but an army large enough to appall the investigator and searcher for facts.

The next prevarication of the coffee importers and roasters is their statement that Postum Food Coffee is made of roasted peas, beans or corn, and mixed with a low grade of coffee and that it contains no nourishment.

We have previously offered to wager $100,000.00 with them that their statements are absolutely false.

They have not accepted our wager and they will not.

We will gladly make a present of $25,000.00 to any roaster or importer of old fashioned coffee who will accept that wager.

Free inspection of our factories and methods is made by thousands of people each month and the coffee importers themselves are cordially invited. Both Postum and Grape-Nuts are absolutely pure and made exactly as stated.

The formula of Postum and the analysis made by one of the foremost chemists of Boston has been printed on every package for many years and is absolutely accurate.

Now as to the food value of Postum. It contains the parts of the wheat berry which carry the elemental salts such as lime, iron, potash, silica, etc., etc., used by the life forces to rebuild the cellular tissue, and this is particularly true of the phosphate of potash, also found in Grape-Nuts, which combines in the human body with albumen and this combination, together with water, rebuilds the worn out gray matter in the delicate nerve centres all over the body, and throughout the brain and solar plexus.

Ordinary coffee stimulates in an unnatural way, but with many people it slowly and surely destroys and does not rebuild this gray substance so vitally important to the well-being of every human being.

These are eternal facts, proven, well authenticated and known to every properly educated physician, chemist and food expert.

Please remember we never say ordinary coffee hurts everyone.

Some people use it regularly and seem strong enough to withstand its attacks, but there is misery and disease in store for the man or woman who persists in its use when nature protests, by heart weakness, stomach and bowel troubles, kidney disease, weak eyes, or general nervous prostration. The remedy is obvious. The drug caffeine, contained in all ordinary coffee, must be discontinued absolutely or the disease will continue in spite of any medicine and will grow worse.

It is easy to leave off the old fashioned coffee by adopting Postum Food Coffee, for in it one finds a pleasing hot breakfast or dinner beverage that has the deep seal brown color, changing to a rich golden brown when good cream is added. When boiled long enough (15 minutes) the flavor is not that of rank Rio coffee but very like the milder, smooth and high grade Java, but entirely lacking the drug effect of ordinary coffee.

Anyone suffering from disorders set up by coffee drinking (and there is an extensive variety) can absolutely depend upon some measure of relief by quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee.

If the disease has not become too strongly rooted, one can with good reason expect it to disappear entirely in a reasonable time after the active cause of the trouble is removed and the cellular tissue has time to naturally rebuild with the elements furnished by Postum and good food.

It's only just plain old common sense.

Now, with the exact facts before the reader, he or she can decide the wise course, looking to health and the power to do things.

If you have any doubt as to the cause of any ache or all you may have, remember the far reaching telegrams of a hurt nervous system travel from heel to head, and it may be well worth your while to make the experiment of leaving off coffee entirely for 10 days and using Postum in its place.

You will probably gather some good solid facts, worth more than a gold mine, for health can make gold and sickness lose it. Besides there's all the fun, for it's like a continuous internal frolic to be perfectly well.

There's a reason for

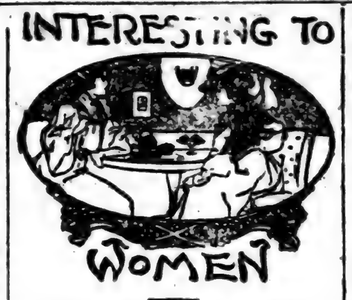
INTERESTING TO WOMEN



THE FASHIONABLE FABRICS.

There is always some material which dominates the fancy of the Parisienne in the spring and which is promised a large measure of success during the warm months of the year, says the Philadelphia Record.

Last season the chief preference was given to ninon, which has triumphantly held its place in the affections of the fashionable world ever since, and this year the material which is to be raised to the giddy heights of Parisian popularity is "marquisette." This, according to the London Express, is a compromise between a very fine open voile and a silk gauze, and can naturally only be made up over a good silk or satin foundation on account of its transparency. Lovely shot effects in this fabric are produced by the manufacturers, the favorite being a blue shot with green. A gown of this description is trimmed with Persian embroidery in a commingling of blue, green and red to match the colors included in the gown and its foundation.

For morning gowns, when the weather permits, natural-colored Shantung of a very fine make will be very much favored. Curiously enough, in spite of the fact that the bolero and corselet skirt resign supreme in the world of fashion, many of these morning costumes will have three-quarter coats, while in the case of some of them the coats will almost reach to the ground. They will be trimmed with thick white or self-colored guipure and gold buttons, one of the smartest of these costumes having the lace introduced round the neck in lieu of collar and revers, the coat being pleated from the top and belted in at the waist. In many cases, however, the coat is made in the Newmarket style, with pocket flap adorned with small gilt buttons, while the skirt is elaborate with what are commonly known as "pils religieux."

Cinnamon brown and peacock blue is a very favorite millinerial combination in Paris, and hats of brown tulle trimmed with peacock-colored Paradise plumes or vice versa are looked upon as a very smart and effective form of headgear for early spring. As a matter of fact, peacock will be immensely popular this year for entire gowns in fine faced cloth or cashmere, which is by no means a satisfactory outlook, peacock blue being, of all shades, one of the most trying to an ordinary complexion. As a trimming, however, it is very effective lovely evening dresses of white soft silk or moire being embroidered round the hem and on the corsage with a design in peacock shades.

SMART HALF MOURNING.

For half-mourning is a very smart French model. The new flounced skirt, of which, by the way, there are so far very few examples, but which promises to become popular at a later date, is in black crepe de Chine, embroidered with chenille and roses, picked out with silver. A wide draped sash of black chiffon-velours gives a becoming outline to the waist, and the dainty little bolero is also embroidered in the same way as the skirt, with raised design of jet roses and chenille, softened with black velvet, with a yoke of very fine d'Alencon lace.

There is no doubt that several of the leading Parisian houses will bring the flounced skirt to the fore. It is a little early to predict anything very definite in fashion for the summer, but somehow this style is most suitable for muslins and other summer fabrics, or, indeed, for beautiful embroideries such as in this gown.

Foulards and alpacas will be shown with these flounced effects, and will be, of course, in direct contrast to the long flowing corselet skirt and the princess robes, which on account of their individual beauty hold a prominent place in spring fashion. Still, it is predicted that it is to be a season of trimmings, all of the most beautiful and gorgeous order.

This tendency in fashion makes for a revival of a very important industry. All these beautiful models, of course, only show the very best hand-made embroidery, and are copied from the old French and English patterns, added to which there are some wonderful specimens of Italian embroideries, and, of course, later on we shall see examples of Japanese skill.

HAVING A RENEWED VOGUE.

The new princess, or corselet, skirt is having a renewed vogue, and fancy suspenders are to be worn. A gown of deep-blue cloth with a high corselet has braces and a girdle of gold and bronze braid and a blouse of Irish lace.

Another frock was in pink and gray, with a skirt of soft gray cloth, silver braces, and a blouse of shot pink moire; and yet another appeared in black cloth, with a black velvet waistbelt and braces to match, and blouse of cream-colored Irish lace, adorned with dainty knots of pale-blue ribbon.

This revived fancy for skirts and bodices of different sorts may mean disaster to a short, stout figure, that shows to far greater advantage in long lines of the same color and material.

Among other styles may be mentioned a charming frock in black and white voile, made with a wide, full skirt, a deep-pointed bodice, and waistband and skirt trimmings of black moire silk; a lainage gown in a small check of white and mauve, with trimmings of mauve and green shot glace silk; and a smarter gown in Wedgwood blue cloth, trimmed with fine silk braid to match, and that had a vest and under sleeves of white Indian muslin exquisitely embroidered.

HER GEOLOGY PAID.

The Woman's Journal notes the fact that a young Minnesota school teacher, Miss Gwendoline Murphy, has lately made a fortune by her knowledge of geology. Close to the village of Mentonne lay a great, worthless marsh, covering a square mile, but so surrounded by elevated plains on every side that it would cost thousands of dollars to drain it. Miss Murphy had made a special study of geology, geography, mining, and allied sciences. She astonished her friends by using an inheritance of about $1,000 that had come to her in buying the square mile of marsh. As soon as winter had frozen the swamp she began the digging of a great well, six feet in diameter and 107 feet deep, down through the strata of solid yellow clay and blue clay stratum of sand and coarse gravel which her studies had led her to hope to find at about that distance below the surface. When spring came again the entire marsh drained perfectly dry; and Miss Murphy has now sold the whole of this formerly worthless land for $50 an acre.

CREEPING-DRESSES.

The advantage of letting a child creep on the floor, thus strengthening its limbs by exercise, has already been urged. Many mothers object to the practice, because the baby dirties and crushes his little dresses so completely when he thus disports himself.

The difficulty may be overcome by providing the small athlete with a couple of creeping-dresses, and keeping one of these at hand, ready to slip on over the other garments when baby is put down, taking it off when his time for exercise is passed.

Creeping-dresses are simply straight slips made of rather dark calico. The skirt is about a yard long, and is finished with a broad hem, in which is to run a wide, flat elastic.

When the baby is about to creep, the skirt is put on, and the elastic is brought up under the petticoats, so that the skirt encloses the latter, as it were, in a bag. Thus the baby's clothes are kept perfectly clean.

MOTHER TO BLAME.

Nowhere does human nature reveal itself so thoroughly as in the shops, and one of the painful revelations which strike the average shopper, that is, if she has eyes for aught but bargains, is the shabby manner that so many girls treat their mothers. This is particularly true of girls of from fourteen to seventeen. It may be a hat that is being selected or a coat to be bought; the mother's advice in the one case will be treated with contemptuous scorn, and in the other with absolutely no respect. Mrs. Craigie declares that this lack of consideration which young girls show their mothers is due to the over-indulgence of children by their parents in this country, and unless a wiser course is substituted, American mothers are laying a lot of trouble up for themselves in the future.—New York Telegram.

OVERDRESSED CHILDREN

An overdressed child is to be pitied. Because you have money, do not inflict the burden of too much dress upon your little girl. The wife of a doctor who has money is the subject of great and unfavorable comment because of the manner in which she dresses her little daughters. They look like walking advertisements for some child's furnishing department, says the Brooklyn Times. It is a great mistake, since it displays neither good taste nor good judgment. If you have money, dress the children well. If you would manifest good taste, dress them simply, as becomes little children, and teach them to forget they are wearing fine clothes, even while you cultivate the proper pride for neatness and cleanliness.

PRETTY FASHION FOR THE MISS.

A pretty fashion adopted by the jeune fille is that of wearing with her evening gown—in lieu of jewelry—a band of white or colored tulle tied round the throat, and finished with a large bow or chou behind.

This simple form of adornment is particularly becoming to the French girl with her demure manner and shy grace, and for the moment has quite usurped the place of the erstwhile popular pearl necklace or art nouveau pendant. In some cases, however, the supplementary addition of a pearl slide through which the tulle is drawn is adopted, while in not a few cases the tulle itself is sewn with artificial pearls.

HORSE MEAT.

Germany Now Eating Large Quantities of This Type of Food.

The Consul-General of the United States at Berlin, Germany, is evidently getting used to foreign habits, for he says: "Apart from the very general sentiment of respect for the horse as an animal too noble and useful for the degradation of the slaughter-house, there is perhaps no good reason why its flesh is not as clean and nutritious as that of horned cattle, and aside from its far greater cheapness in a country where all meat is so costly as now is in Germany, makes the well-regulated system of horseflesh production and supply in Berlin a real boon to a large class of people."

Thus we learn that the choicest cuts of this class of food sell in Berlin for from eight to ten cents per pound. "Meat from the forequarters or from any part of poor, old or inferior animals sells as low as three cents per pound. The liver is considered a delicacy and brings ten cents per pound.

"The inferior pieces go mainly for the manufacture of those highly spiced garlicky sausages that are a favorite food of many people in Germany. In the better grades of sausages pork is mixed to give the requisite fatness. When sold as such in Berlin they must be plainly labeled horseflesh.

"But outside the municipality regulation is not enforced, and large quantities of sausages made of horseflesh, with only a small percentage of pork, veal or other than horse meat in their composition, are sold to the country districts and exported to neighboring countries as ordinary pork sausages."

When a Doctor Was Good Company.

A certain country minister was the owner of a swift and spirited horse. On one occasion, while he was driving through the village, he overtook a medical physician on foot.

"Jump in, doctor," he said, pulling up. "I've got a horse here that can go pretty well."

The doctor jumped in and the minister drove off. The horse did not appreciate the sense of speed, but in a short time it began to behave badly, and finally ended by tipping over the carriage and spilling out both the occupants. The minister jumped to his feet and felt his way over to see if he were injured. The doctor also got to his feet.

"Look here," exclaimed the minister, "what do you mean by inviting me to ride behind a horse like that?"

"Well, you see," gasped the doctor, "luckily this time there are no bones broken, but I always like to go motoring with me when I drive that horse."

Wanted "Glory Divine."

"I want four cents' worth of glory divine," said a flaxen-haired little boy, looking intently at the clerk of a Fifth avenue store. Everybody within hearing of the infantile voice either laughed or smiled, while Mr. Grey, the clerk, looked serious, and appeared to be thinking. "Are you sure it is glory divine you want?" he asked the little one. "Yes, sir," was the prompt response. "For what does mamma want it?" was the next question. "She wants it around the room and in the yard," said the little tot, positively. "Isn't it chloride of lime she wants?" asked the drug man. The little one nodded her assent, and soon was on her way home to mamma.

Jersey City's "Flatiron."

Over in Mayor Fagan's town of Jersey City, N. J., a miniature flatiron building is nearing completion. When this edifice is dwarflike alongside the massive freak structure looming in the centre of Manhattan, yet the former is unveiled in the front elevation as a counterfeit is more acute than that accomplished in the metropolis. The construction, and the triangular property equals about half the space devoted to Gotham's architectural show. The property is owned by an estate of which John Carroll, former chief deputy chieftain, is interested.—New York Press.

Solid Air the Latest Marvel.

The San Francisco Bulletin says: Professor A. L. Metz of the State University, has, through experiments with liquid air, succeeded in solidifying air that a sledge hammer in the hands of a strong man can break a piece no bigger than a walnut. The thing in itself is marvelous, but the statement that its temperature is within reach, by close estimate of, 390 degrees below zero is even more so. Solid air is said to look like ordinary ice. If this story is true it opens up a field of scientific research stupendous in its possibilities.

printing was discovered in Germany in 1436 by John Gutenberg. He went to John Fust, a rich goldsmith, and to Schoffer, a professional copyist, to get help. Schoffer was to design the letters, and Fust agreed to furnish the funds necessary to carry out the project. In 1457 the first printed book, the Latin Psalter, was issued, and five years later the first printed Bible. But as soon as Fust learned the secret he demanded that Gutenberg should pay back at once the money which he had advanced, and when the impoverished inventor was unable to do so, Fust seized his printing press and blocks and with the aid of Schoffer continued to print the Bible. The rapidity with which copies were turned out and the exact resemblance one bore to another aroused the suspicions of the superstitious populace, who believed Fust was in league with the devil. Thus came the legend of Fust who sold himself to the devil for wealth, a story used by Goethe as the theme of one of the finest poems in the German language.

When a Doctor Was Good Company.

A certain country minister was the owner of a swift and spirited horse, which he was wont occasionally to drive somewhat recklessly through the village. He overtook one day a friend of his driving a horse and gig at a moderate pace, and, drawing up alongside, he exclaimed: "Dear me, doctor, I'm afraid you're getting old. You've lost all your love of speed, but in a little while you'll begin to behave badly, and be driving over the carriage and horses of the townsmen." The doctor replied by asking the minister to get out and see if he were injured, as he had fallen on his feet and felt himself to be quite unhurt. The minister also got to his feet.

"Look here," exclaimed the doctor angrily, "what do you mean by inviting me to look behind a horse like that?"

"Well, you see," gasped the minister, "it's likely this time there are no bones broken, but I always like to have company with me when I drive that animal."

Wanted "Glory Divine."

"I want four cents' worth of glory," said a flaxen-haired youngster impatiently at the clerk of a candy store. Everybody within hearing of the gentle voice either laughed or looked serious, and appeared puzzled. While Mr. Grey, the clerk, looked serious, and appeared puzzled. "Are you sure it is glory you want?" he asked the little one. "Yes, sir," was the prompt reply. "For what does mamma use it?" was the next question. "To flavor the custard," answered the little tot, innocently. "Oh, chloride of lime she means," said the drug man. The clerk got her assent, and soon the little miss was on her way home to mother.

Jersey City's "Flatiron."

Under Mayor Fagan's name Jersey City, N. J., a manufacturing and shipping community of considerable importance, is dwarfish alongside of Gotham's architectural structure locally. The Flatiron building, which is more acute than the Flatiron in the metropolis, and the triangular piece of land on which it is erected, is about half the space of the Flatiron. Solid Air the Latest Marvel.

The San Francisco Bulletin says: Professor A. L. Metz, of the State University, has, through experiments with liquid air, succeeded in producing air that a sledge hammer in the hands of a strong man cannot break, a piece no bigger than a walnut. The thing in itself is marvelous, but the statement that its temperature, by close estimate no less than 300 degrees below zero is even more marvelous, for air is said to look like water at ordinary ice. If this story is true it opens up a field of scientific research stupendous in its possibilities.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. DR. LYMAN ABBOTT.

Subject: "The Spirit of Christianity."

Brooklyn, N. Y. — At Plymouth Church, the Rev. Lyman Abbott, D. D., occupied his old pulpit in the absence of the present pastor, the Rev. N. D. Hillis. Dr. Abbott's subject was "The Essential Spirit of Christianity." He chose for his text the passage Matthew xx:27-28: "Whosoever will be chief among you let him be your servant, even as the Son of Man came, not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many," and said:

What do we mean by Christianity? What is its essential, specific spirit? It is the spirit of the Christ who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." The spirit of the Christian is to be like the Christ. It is to get back of all that is injurious and all that is valuable; all the accretions that are injuring and all the additions which have been made in the growth of Christianity, doctrine, ritual and institutional; to get back to the time of Christ Himself, and, if we can, see what Christianity meant then and there, in order that we may get at the essential spirit of it.

There appeared at the beginning of the so-called Christian era a religious teacher in a province of Palestine. He was certainly for that age and for all ages a singular man. The things we care for most He seemed to be indifferent to. He did not care for pleasure, but He was not ascetic. He did not hide Himself from the world. There is no instance in which He refused an invitation to a feast. He began His ministry by creating wine to prolong the festivities at a marriage feast, and yet He did not care for what men call pleasure. He said Himself that He "had not where to lay His head." He often laid down to sleep with only the stars overhead. He lived on the simplest food. He did not care for wealth. He never called a man a fool but once, and that was the man who spent all his life in accumulating and then did not know what to do with the accumulations. He did not care for power, for when He was offered a crown He refused it. One day they gathered about Him, waved palm branches and shouted "Hosannah!" and amid all the joy and acclaim He stopped and wept as He remembered the sorrows which were to come upon Jerusalem.

Ambition did not appeal to Him. He was willing to preach to 500 or to 200 or to twenty-five or thirty, or to sit down with one poor wretched woman and talk to her by the well; and it did not make any difference. What did He care for? For service—to go about among men and make them happy. That was what He cared for. He cared for all sorts of men. He was equally willing to serve the Greek or the Jew. If He lived now, He would be as willing to serve the Jew as the Christian. He was willing to save the poor and the rich. He was not a poor man's prophet, nor a rich man's prophet. He was willing to minister to the ignorant, and just as willing to minister to the wise. He would talk with the peasant, or spend an evening with one of the great rabbis at Jerusalem. Character or past conduct did not separate men from His sympathy. It did not make any difference how badly a man had lived or how rotten was his character, He was ready to help him. He came into Jericho one day and the people crowded round Him. It was a city of priests and corrupt politicians. The politicians were more corrupt than in this day, and that is saying a great deal. It was a city of priests and politicians, and one of these latter, who had made money by squeezing the public, was a little man, who climbed into a tree, because he wanted to see this strange man pass. This strange man passed the priests and the orthodox religious people and looked up at the little man and said: "Come down; I am going to dine with you to-day." He sought out the bad man because He thought He could do something for him. He was equally ready to minister food to the hungry, healing to the sick, comfort to the afflicted, wisdom to the ignorant, inspiration to the depressed or succor to the simple and the burdened.

The only question with Him was: "Is this man in trouble?" What kind of trouble? "It does not matter what kind of trouble, I want to help him." That was absolutely His only question. And yet this man saw that the deepest troubles of men are the troubles that come upon them because of their wrong doing. In His first great sermon He gave the secret of happiness when He said: "Blessed are the pure in heart" and "Blessed are the poor in spirit," etc. The secret of happiness is what you are, not what you have. So the thing He wanted to do was to change men's characters, to get them out of sin and lead them in the paths of virtue and truth and good will. He wanted to lift off the burden of their sins and make them healthy, normal, holy men and women. To this He gave His life. He did not do this incidentally, as it chanced Him; there was something more. He said: "That is what I am here for. That is what God put Me into the world for; it is the mission He has given Me." He belonged to a nation that had been taught to look forward for the golden age, not backward. They thought the good time was yet to come. Their prophets had told them so. They thought it was to be brought about, some said, by the nation, by a series of prophets, or by a single man, a conqueror. And this man Jesus said: "This kingdom of God is at hand. This good time is already here, and I am the one to bring it about." The first time He preached was at Nazareth and then He told them this. Then He gathered a few disciples about Him and after a year with them He asked: "Whom do men say that I am?" They said: "There are many different things said. Some say a prophet; some a great teacher; some one thing and some another." And He said: "But whom say ye that I am?" One can imagine the moment of silence and hesitation and uncertainty that followed. And then one, an impulsive one, said: "You are the Messiah." He replied: "Yes, I am; that is right."

The mission of His life was to bring about the kingdom of God on the earth and He said, "The way to do it is to help every one in need. No matter what the character—to help one another, that is the way." The Jews wanted it another way. Queer people, these Jews! They thought they were the great people, which was very like the Anglo-Saxons of to-day. They thought there were no other people who were religious or civilized or who had the secret of great progress. They said the kingdom would come to Jerusalem, not to Rome, and that not the Romans, but the Jews, would be dominant. But Christ said, "No, that is a mistake. The kingdom of God is not in Jerusalem or Rome or Athens. It is in a spirit of universal helpfulness." That is the kingdom of God, and the kingdom will come when every man helps his fellow man out of every kind of need, whatever it may be. He was finally arrested and put upon oath and asked: "Are You the Messiah?" "I am," He said. He claimed to be the Messiah and He claimed to bring about the kingdom of God by diffusing the spirit of hope and faith and good will. The apostles went forth and preached—what? Not the Ten Commandments or the Sermon on the Mount, but "This is the Messiah. The Deliverer is come." In the nature of the case He could not do it alone. If it were to be some sudden upheaval, some cataclysm, some march of armies, it could be done in a single period, but if good will, peace and universal helpfulness were to be brought about, that would take generations. That must go from kingdom to kingdom, from city to city and nation to nation. And so He called a few men to carry the message—first twelve, then seventy. Then He died. Then, after His resurrection, He sent others. He sent them in the spirit of good will and helpfulness, to heal the sick, cleanse the leper and restore comfort to the sorrowing. To minister to everybody, rich, poor, wise, ignorant, to the Jew and the Gentile.

There was something more. In all ages men have believed in some great occult power lying back of the phenomena of nature. The Jews thought there was one great God who inexorably demanded righteousness of His people, and Jesus said, "God is such a one as I am, actuated by the same spirit. In My life and teachings I am interpreting this great Infinite Power, this just, wise God, this eternal Infinite Presence." And He illustrated His meaning by the parable of the king whose subjects rebelled against him; by the parable of the lost sheep and the parable of the prodigal son. "That is the kind of Father that God is," said Jesus.

There is still more in Christ's message. In all ages men have been trying to get to this unknown God. They have said: "We have done wrong, we have aroused the wrath of this God. He is right to be angry with us. How shall we appease His anger? We will offer sacrifices." It is difficult in this twentieth century to realize what worship was twenty centuries ago. Picture the temple, the altar, the white-robed priests. All around in the outer court the cooing of doves, the bleating of sheep, and within, by this altar, a butcher's shop, a shambles. Priests cutting the throats of lambs and cattle and the blood flowing in great rivers out from under the altar. Why? Because these people thought God had a right to be angry—and they were right. He had a right to be angry—and they thought He was angry—and they were half right in that—and they thought the way to peace was by sacrifice, and they were wrong in that. Jesus never offered a sacrifice, so far as we know, or told anybody else to offer sacrifice.

This world is God's reformatory and what He has done is this: His Marshal has come for you and me. Has He come in power, with greatness of riches or wonderful display of intellectual wisdom? No. Come how? In sympathy, in tenderness, in love, in purity and truth and righteousness. We can see no way to happiness save by endowing with truth and purity and righteousness. He has come to us—to you and me.

He says, "You can do the same thing." You say: "I have no power." "Neither had I." "I have not wealth." "Neither had I." "I was not an ecclesiastic." "Neither was I." "Come to Me; get My spirit; live as I lived; be willing to lay down your life for others, as I was for you."

I have tried this morning to get behind all definitions, all creedal statements, not because I think they are bad, but because I am sure the spirit of Christ transcends all definitions and creedal statements. Christianity! What is it? It is the new doctrine of God. It is the new faith in God. It is the faith of God, who is in His world as He was in Jesus Christ, comforting the sorrowing, helping the tempted, instructing the ignorant. It is the new hope, the hope of the kingdom of God that is coming. There is coming the time when men will give to their fellow men fair, honest, generous measures and will "do unto others as they would be done unto." That is righteousness. There is coming a time when there will be peace in every heart because it is at harmony with itself, and peace in the whole world between man and man, nation and nation. And it is a new hope that Christianity brings when it says: "Now, you can work for that because you are working in the spirit of the Eternal, and it is the spirit of good will, of service, of sacrifice, of laying down our lives for others as He laid down His life for us."

Christianity! What is it? It is that "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." That is the theology of Christianity. "The kingdom of God is at hand." That is the hope of Christianity. "A new commandment give I unto you: that ye love one another as I have loved you." That is the law of Christianity.

Where Love Is, There God Is.

Thoughts that disturb and trouble us seldom come from God. It is generally best to put them away, and throw ourself, with increased trust in Him and mistrust of self, at His feet. And never forget, amid whatever may befall you—dryness, coldness, desolation and disappointment, consciousness of many faults, and of great weakness, and want of faith—that where love is, there God is sure to be. He never yet has suffered any soul to fall wholly from Him which, amid all its frailities and falls, clings to Him in love.—H. L. Sidney Lear.

With Irritating Skin Humor—Hair Began to Fall Out—Wonderful Result From Cuticura Remedies.

"About the latter part of July my whole body began to itch. I did not take much notice of it at first, but it began to get worse all the time, and then I began to get uneasy and tried all kinds of baths and other remedies that were recommended for skin humors, but I became worse all the time. My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch, and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to my whole body, and it kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured and my hair stopped falling out. Doctor Brigham Says

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructor ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures and physicians who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience it can be relied upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it.

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to say that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and often prescribe it in my practice for female difficulties.

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for a female trouble some time ago, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female weakness, and is surely gaining in health and strength.

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all diseases to which women are subject, and give it honest endorsement."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, bloating (or flatulency), weakness of organs, displacements, inflammation or ulceration, can be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If advice is needed write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. No other living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice if she wants to be strong and well.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happenng throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

"God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life." That is the theology of Christianity. "The kingdom of God is at hand." That is the hope of Christianity. "A new commandment give I unto you: that ye love one another as I have loved you." That is the law of Christianity.

Where Love Is, There God Is.

Thoughts that disturb and trouble us seldom come from God. It is generally best to put them away, and throw ourself, with increased trust in Him and mistrust of self, at His feet. And never forget, amid whatever may befall you—dryness, coldness, desolation and disappointment, consciousness of many faults, and of great weakness, and want of faith—that where love is, there God is sure to be. He never yet has suffered any soul to fall wholly from Him which, amid all its frailities and falls, clings to Him in love.—H. L. Sidney Lear.

God's Errands.

Difficulties are God's errands, and when we are sent upon them we should esteem it a proof of God's confidence.—Beecher.

Plot Against Spanish Rulers.

Madrid.—The Spanish authorities have discovered an anarchists' plot at Lebrija, twenty-nine miles from Seville, the notorious center of the black hand, to assassinate the royal family during the visit of King Alfonso, the dowager, Queen Christiana, and the sister of the king, the Infanta Maria Teresa, to Seville, during holy week.

The censorship prevented the sending of details regarding the conspiracy.

GREAT OIL INQUIRY ENDED

Hadley Gets Long-Sought Evidence of a Gigantic Combine.

ARCHBOLD STANDARD'S HEAD

Outcome of Investigation in New York City a Feather in the Cap of the Young Missouri Official—Rockefeller Escapes—Trust's President Agreed to Testify in Private—Offer Refused.

New York City.—Attorney General Hadley, of Missouri, brought his proceedings against the Standard Oil Company to a close with the examination of H. M. Tilford, supposed to be the best posted man in the Standard on the corporation's affairs in the West and Middle West. He announced that he would no longer bother John D. Rockefeller with subpoena servers, having obtained the evidence he wants, and that Mr. Rockefeller could come and go as he pleased. He said:

"I feel that I have accomplished everything I came to New York for and something more. Not only have I forced the admission that the stock ownership of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, the Republic Oil Company and the Standard Oil Company, of Indiana, is vested in the Standard Oil Company, of New Jersey, but the testimony has shown that the respondent companies have been managed by big Standard Oil officials located at 26 Broadway. The hearing will be resumed at St. Louis and among the witnesses to be examined will be H. C. Pierce, of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company.

"Then when the hearings are ended, I will apply to the courts, and of course will rest with them the contention that I have made that the respondent companies have been doing business in the State of Missouri in violation of the anti-trust laws of our State.

"I want to say that what made it possible for me to secure the evidence I was successful in bringing out was due to the decisions of the United States Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of Missouri."

The disclosures brought out through Mr. Hadley's questionings of witnesses have been the reigning sensation since the closing of the insurance inquiry, and the youthful Attorney-General of Missouri is one of the most talked of men in the country. His success in the face of what at first appeared to be unsurmountable odds has excited the admiration of the legal fraternity all over the United States, and to-day he is hailed as a champion of the people's cause.

One of the most important facts disclosed by the inquiry has been that John D. Archbold is the real head of the Standard Oil Company, and not John D. Rockefeller. The latter has been in practical retirement for the last ten years, and has not been actively engaged in any business. His failure to subpoena Mr. Rockefeller to appear at the inquiry was the only failure which Mr. Hadley met with, and withal he received an invitation from the president of the Standard to meet him in private, an offer which he refused. The offer was made while Mr. Archbold was on the stand.

That the Standard Oil Company is on the verge of a reorganization of its business methods was clearly indicated by testimony produced at the hearing and a statement made by one of its leading counsel. The long established policy of secrecy seems to have been almost entirely abandoned.

It seems reasonably certain that hereafter no attempt will be made to operate through subsidiary companies which purport to be independent, but are, in fact, owned outright or controlled by the Standard.

TEXAS AFTER OIL TRUST.

Aroused to Action by Admissions Gained in Missouri Inquiry.

Austin, Texas.—Dispatches stating that counsel for the Standard Oil Company has admitted that the Standard Oil Company, of New Jersey, holds in trust the stock of the Standard Oil Company, of Indiana; the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, of St. Louis, and the Republic Oil Company, have aroused considerable interest here in view of the fact that the Waters-Pierce Oil Company is doing business in Texas, and in view of the affidavits which were made when its permit to do business in Texas was issued, it is stated that the Attorney-General's department proposes "taking up the matter of enforcing the anti-trust law of Texas" as soon as pressing business now in hand can be disposed of.

SPENT $22,0000 TO GET $1500.

Farmer, Pauperized by Lawsuits, Asks State to Pay Costs.

Kansas City, Mo.—Gregory D. McLean, a farmer, testified in Circuit Court that in the past four years he had spent $22,000, every cent of his modest fortune, and now he is seeking permission to continue the suit as a pauper, the State to pay the costs. Judge McCune denied his petition.

Four years ago a neighbor of his shipped a carload of cattle to Kansas City and six of McLean's steers got mixed up in the bunch. McLean followed the cattle to the stock yards here and recovered three head. Then he sued the neighbor and recovered the value of the other three, $75, and later brought suit against the railroad for damages and expenses incurred in making the recovery. He asks for $1500.

Grasped Live Wire.

Geneva, Ala.—T. P. Welden, 34 years old, was electrocuted here by coming in contact with a guy wire. A broken telephone wire had fallen across the electric wires and was lying against the guy wire, transmitting to it a current of 2,300 volts. There were no witnesses to the accident, but the presumption is that Welden caught hold of the wire in passing and got the force of the current.

THE PLYMOUTH BURNED

Famous Fall River Boat Destroyed at Newport, R. I.

City of Lowell, Priscilla, Puritan and Nantucket Damaged and One Life Lost —Loss $1,500,000.

Newport, R. I.—The palatial steamer Plymouth, of the Fall River Line, was burned to the water's edge at the Fall River Line pier here, causing a loss of $1,500,000.

The whole city of Newport and Long Island Sound for a distance of many miles were lighted up by the flames, which leaped hundreds of feet in the air from the magnificent steamboat, one of the largest and finest in the world.

The Fall River passenger station and several other buildings at the wharf were destroyed by the fire communicated to them from the burning vessel.

The steamer City of Lowell, moored in the same slip, caught fire several times, and was only saved from complete destruction by tugs towing her out into the stream. She was badly scorched and was damaged to the extent of $10,000.

The steamboats Priscilla, Puritan and Nantucket were in danger also, and were towed out of range of the intense heat. The Puritan caught fire and the decks were scorched, but the damage was not great.

While the flames from the burning vessel and wharf buildings were lighting up the whole Sound, the steamer Pilgrim, from New York, passed on her trip to Fall River. The boat was due to stop at Newport, but a wireless message was sent to her from the United States Torpedo Station here directing her not to stop, and the vessel continued on her way to Fall River.

Four firemen were asleep on the Plymouth when the fire started. Three were rescued with difficulty. One man fell into the water, but was pulled out.

One life was lost, that of Louis LeMont, a fireman on the Plymouth, whose home is believed to be in New York. His partially charred body was found in the hulk.

The heat from the burning vessel was so intense that men were unable to venture near to fight the flames. Men on tugboats risked their lives when they attached lines to the other steamers and pulled them out of reach of the fire.

Above the doomed vessel to a height of 200 feet extended the great shears of steel, used for hauling machinery out of boats. The great heat twisted and melted the steel until the mass of metal bent, then fell into the water with a hiss that was heard above the roar of the flames, and sending up a great cloud of steam.

The Plymouth was moored at the pier at the end of the Long Wharf undergoing repairs preparatory to being placed in the passenger trade between New York and Fall River as soon as the spring season opened.

At 3 o'clock a. m. the Plymouth had burned to the water's edge, and the charred hull contained only a lot of smoldering embers, all that remained of one of the largest and most finely equipped steamboats in the world. How the fire started is not known.

DROPS THROUGH TRESTLE.

Ten Workmen Killed and Fifteen Injured on Chicago and Northwestern.

Casper, Wyoming.—A work train on a branch of the Chicago and Northwestern road dropped through a trestle near Natrona, killing ten men and injuring fifteen.

Of the dead Charles Moll and D. C. Blue were section foremen and the others were foreigners and laborers. The track was covered with water at the point and the train was proceeding cautiously. The engine passed over the culvert in safety, but the weight of the locomotive so weakened the structure that the first car following went through, followed by the others.

The caboose, in which the section men were riding sank in the mud, and the bodies were buried. Nine of them have been recovered.

MURDERED TWO SISTERS.

Mexican Attacks Texas Girls Who Were Driving on Public Road.

Kennedy, Texas.—Two young women, both daughters of Alex. McHamey, a well-to-do farmer, were riding in a buggy along the public road five miles west of here when they were attacked by a young Mexican. He climbed into the buggy from the rear and cut the throat of one of the girls. The horse started to run and the Mexican drew a pistol and shot the other girl through the head.

A little boy who was in the buggy with the girls escaped being murdered by the horse running away. The Mexican fired several shots at him. A posse of officers and citizens are searching for the Mexican.

NEARLY 700,000 PENSIONERS.

Roll Slightly Decreased by Deaths During February.

Washington, D. C.—Nearly 700,000 veterans are now on the pension rolls of Uncle Sam, according to the monthly report of the Commissioner of Pensions. This is a small decrease when compared with the report of the previous month. It shows that during February 2699 pensioners of the Civil War were dropped from the rolls because of death, but the net decrease of soldiers drawing pensions was only 1603, there being 1096 added to the roll during the month, thus making the total number of pensioners 673,035.

Death of W. W. Decker.

Albertville, Ala.—Mr. W. W. Decker, a prominent merchant of this place, died suddenly at his residence Friday afternoon. The trouble was heart failure. Mr. Decker was one of Albertville's best citizens. He leaves a widow, three children, a father, two sisters and three brothers. The interment took place Saturday at the Albertville cemetery.

PROFITABLE FARM FORESTRY.

Returns from Plantings May Be Had in Twelve or Fifteen Years.

The opinion is quite general among farmers, as well as men in other callings that forest trees cannot be grown with profit to the planter, and that future generations alone can reap the benefits. This opinion is based on the knowledge that our native trees require, under natural forest conditions, from fifty to seventy-five years to grow to marketable size. This is true of trees growing in the natural forest, where they are compelled to fight an unceasing battle, the result of which is "the survival of the fittest," but the time required to grow trees to a marketable size, is much shorter when the early struggle for existence is practically eliminated, as may be done in artificially planted forests.

There is at least one phrase of forestry which gives promise of good financial returns within a period of from twelve to fifteen years, and that is the growing of trees suitable for posts, poles and ties as a farm crop. In support of this statement, the following figures show what has been done, as indicated by careful estimates made by a representative of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station of the salable posts in several of the Catalpa speciosa and black locust groves which were planted in Ohio from fifteen to twenty-five years ago. In making these estimates a number of trees in each grove were carefully measured. In computing the value of the product an acre first class posts were estimated at 10 cents each and second class at 6 cents each. Eight catalpa groves from twenty-one to twenty-five years old, none of which had received careful attention in the way of pruning, cultivating or thinning, and most of which had been planted too closely, showed an average yield of 2,777 posts an acre, 63 per cent. of which were first class, valued at $238.08 an acre, or $10.30 an acre each year since the trees were planted.

Estimates were made of the product of one locust grove. This grove had not been seriously damaged by borers and the trees had grown under favorable conditions. The number of posts produced an acre was 3,560, 90 per cent. of which were first class, valued at $344.76 an acre, or $17.98 an acre a year, the grove being nineteen years old.

THE SLEEPING SICKNESS.

Prof. Koch on Its Origin, and Rapid Spread in Africa.

Prof. Robert Koch lectured in Berlin on the "Sleeping Sickness" which he investigated for several months in Equatorial Africa during the year 1905. Emperor William and a distinguished company were present.

The malady, said the professor, has been known on the west coast of Africa since the beginning of the century, and it had spread to the north shore of the Victoria Nyanza and threatened German-Africa. Probably two hundred thousand people had died from the disease. He had found whole villages on the shores of Victoria Nyanza to be empty, and the population of some groups of islands had died to the last soul. The infection was spread from human to human by the sting of a fly, the glossina palpalis, somewhat larger than an ordinary fly. The poison affected the usual health for several days, and then the sufferer was attacked with fever, became incoherent, the glands were swollen, the patient became feebled, and eventually was seized with the sleep mania.

Professor Koch knew of no remedy for this disease, but hoped that infection might be ended by the extermination of the insect which propagated it by slowly burning the bush growth at its favorite home.

The professor will return to Africa soon and continue his studies of tropical diseases.

Masons to Erect Temple.

Demopolis, Ala.—The Masons of this y are making preparations to erect handsome temple. A trade has just en consummated with Mrs. Ann G. on for one of the most desirable va-nt lots in the business district, on ich it is proposed to erect a two-

,500. The building committee is en-ged in securing plans. At present e plan is to have a two-story buildores and the second fitted up for a dge room.

Bonds Sold at Premium.

Gadsden, Ala.—Mayor Charles P. Smith, who returned from Cincinnati, where he has been for some days closing with the purchasers of the city's improvement bonds, in an interview with a reporter made the following statement:

"Yes, the bonds have been sold and delivered and the money is immediately available for pushing the work of improvements. Mr. Julian Kendrick, who has been in charge of the engineering work, has been instructed to proceed with the final surveys and estimates on the extension of our sewerage system and to advertise for bids on same, to be received up to April 15. Work on the streets will begin without any unnecessary delay, and unless some unforeseen complications arise the exact program in reference to the water works will probably be decided within the next sixty days. The whole improvement proposition will be pushed, and we hope to have work under way soon after the 1st of May.

"The bonds were sold to the A. L. Rich Company, bankers, of Cincinnati, and brought a premium of $1,000."

Heavy Bridge Tolls.

Sheffield, Ala.—For the month of March the Sheffield Company paid the Southern Railway Company $1,000 for its percentage of fares for crossing the bridge, a sum almost equal to the tolls for the best two months in the history of the bridge. The Sheffield Company, besides the freight percentage, pays to the Southern 2 cents of every 5-cent fare that crosses the bridge, and the sum paid for the past month gives some idea of the business intercourse between this city and Florence, both of which are growing and flourishing.

Roads Law Declared Illegal.

Montgomery, Ala.—The local roads law of Henry county has been declared unconstitutional by Judge Thomas G. Jones, of the federal court. It is declared that the illegality of the measure was committed in failing to state definitely what the bill contained in notice of its passage. The point arose in a case of the Good Roads Machinery Company against Henry county. Frank White, of Birmingham, appeared for the plaintiff, and William C. Oates and W. L. Martin for the defendants.

Salaries Subject for Teachers.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Jefferson County Teachers' Association will hold their regular meeting on April 21 at the city hall at 10 a. m. The following program will be carried out:

"The Great American Desert and Possibilities of Irrigation in the West"—J. Ellis Brown, Superintendent R. A. Clayton, Woodlawn.

"The Object and Attribute Complements and Their Uses"—Miss Ethel Harrison, Pratt City; Principal R. T. Pritchett, Woodlawn.

"Teachers' Salaries"—R. G. Hewitt, Birmingham; Principal C. B. Glenn, Paul Hayne school, Birmingham.

Office Sought the Man.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—At a special meeting of the city council Henry A. Rand was elected city clerk to succeed D. E. Woody, deceased. Mr. Rand, who was not a formal applicant, received the unanimous vote of the council. He has served Colbert county eight years as tax collector, in which office he made a record second to no other collector in the state.

To Make Iron Beds.

Birmingham, Ala.—Arrangements have been perfected and the money raised for the erection and operation of an iron bedstead factory by William M. Dow and local stockholders. The capacity will be 1,000 beds and pairs of spring per day. Proximity of the metal supply will, it is believed, make this manufacture cheaper here than elsewhere in the country.

Fair Association Incorporated.

Montgomery, Ala.—The Alabama Agricultural Association, which proposes to hold the state fair here October 22 to 27, has filed formal articles of incorporation, giving its capital at $50,000.

Kyle for Secretary of Senate.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Jas. A. Kyle, register in chancery at this place, will be a candidate for secretary of the state senate at the convening of the next legislature. Mr. Kyle has filled the position of assistant secretary for the last two sessions. He is a son of the late Judge Nelson Kyle, one of the most prominent men in north Alabama.

RAISE $750,000,000.

If Russia Gets This Sum Radicals Believe Parliament Endangered.

St. Petersburg.—The Rech says Russia hopes to get $750,000,000 from the loan the government is now negotiating and that the government has offered exceptional terms to the bankers in order to conclude the negotiations before the Russian parliament assembles. The radicals generally believe that if the government succeeds in filling the war chest with such an enormous sum it will be in a position to snap its fingers at parliament. Only by keeping the government in dire straits do they believe it will be forced to yield to the popular demands for reform.

Upon the request of the minister of the interior the council of the empire has increased the appropriation for the rural police by over $1,500,000.

Foraker Boomed for Presidency.

Washington, D. C.—According to reports from Ohio Senator Foraker's friends will formally open his campaign for the republican presidential nomination by seeking to get through the convention this year a resolution so endorsing him. It was the Foraker republicans in Ohio who in 1903 urged the republican state convention to adopt a resolution endorsing the administration of President Roosevelt and endorsing him as a candidate of the party for the presidency the following year. They are entirely consistent therefore in their proposition now to present a resolution to the republican state convention this year declaring for Senator Foraker for the republican nomination for the presidency in 1908. It is true that the presidential nomination is still two years in the future, but it is also true that Senator Foraker is an Ohio man, as President Roosevelt was not.

Ninety Per cent in Operation.

Pittsburg, Pa.—President Frank Feehan, of the United Mine Workers' district organization, announced that from the number of signatures to the agreement received up to noon Saturday mines producing fully 90 per cent of the tonnage in the Pittsburg district would be in operation on Monday. In addition to those already reported, the most important signature Saturday was that of the Youghiogheny and Ohio Coal Company and its allied interests, which produce over 1,000,000 tons annually. The signing of the agreement to pay the 1903 scale was interpreted by the independents to mean the granting of all concessions obtained by the miners during the last two years.

Fifty Bodies Buried.

Nagold, South Germany.—The burial of fifty bodies of those who perished April 5 by the collapse of the Hotel Zum Hirschen took place by twos and threes, so that the three pastors who came from the neighboring villages might read the services by the graveside at each interment. The pastor of Nagold is among the dead. The sorrowful scenes at the cemetery began at 9 o'clock in the morning, when the first coffins were borne on the shoulders of the townsmen through the streets to the cemetery. This continued until late in the afternoon. There is scarcely a family in the village which has not lost a member.

Rough Times in Lens.

Lens, France.—The striking coal miners are comparatively calm, though numerous small depredations continue to be reported. Strikers blew up with dynamite fifteen feet of the rails of the bridge at Toquerrell, and cavalry charged and dispersed a crowd of manifestants at Noeux-Les-Mines. The number of strikers is diminishing in some sections, and disorderly bands who crossed the Belgian frontier were forced back by Belgian gendarmes.

Algeciras Delegates Honored.

Berlin.—Emperor William has conferred upon Herr von Radowitz the order of the Black Eagle, the highest Prussian decoration, and upon Count von Tattenbach the order of Red Eagle of the first class, as rewards for their work at the Algeciras conference.

One Dollar Consideration.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The transfer of the property of the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky to the Indiana company has been announced, and is taken to indicate that the Kentucky company is withdrawing from the state. The manager of the local offices refused to discuss the transfer. A consideration of $1 is named.

RUSSIA IN A PANIC.

Democratic Successes and Victories may have Dramatic Consequences.

PRECIPITATED BY COUNT WITTE.

Premier Visits the Emperor and Tells Him That He Must at Once Proclaim a Constitution.

St. Petersburg.—A panic has been created in government circles by the surprising strength developed by the constitutional democrats in the elections, which may have immediate and dramatic consequences.

The issue between reaction and reform, which has been hanging in the balance, was unexpectedly precipitated by Premier Witte. The elections have greatly strengthened the premier's hand in his fight against the reactionists, and he now feels strong enough to challenge General Trepoff and Minister of the Interior Durnovo and the entire reactionary cabal.

Less than a fortnight ago the premier was decidedly pessimistic, and believed that the majority in the lower house of parliament would be conservative and that the entire program for reform might be overthrown. The results of the elections, however, convinced him that the radicals will control the house and that attempt to thwart the popular will as expressed by the ballot box would be a fatal blunder on the part of the government. It was learned from an unimpeachable source that the premier journeyed to Tsarkoe-Selo on Thursday to lay this view before the emperor, and made another trip to Tsarskoe-Selo Saturday night and was closeted with his majesty until after midnight.

The impression is abroad that the success of the constitutional democrats will insure the success of the big foreign loan, of which the government is in such urgent need.

Sunday twenty-eight provincial conventions met and elected 137 members of the lower house of parliament. The peasant representatives have a clear majority over all the other classes combined. Should the radicals make anything like the sweep which they anticipate the emperor probably will be compelled to yield to the premier's advice. At any rate he seems to have aligned himself on the side of the people.

In effect he told the emperor that he regarded the situation as desperate and that the time had come to choose between himself and Interior Minister Durnovo and counseled his majesty not only to accept the result of the elections, but to anticipate any demand on the part of the lower house of the parliament for a constitution by the issuance of a constitution before parliament convenes, and at the same time mark his change of policy by the proclamation of a general amnesty at Easter. The premier is also understood to have pointed out that such a course would make a splendid impression.

Increase in Trade.

London.—The March statement of the board of trade shows increases of $21,436,500 in imports and $17,901,500 in exports.

Street Car Accident.

Kokomo, Ind.—James F. Bruff, an architect, was killed and four other passengers were injured in a wreck on the Kokomo street railway. A car jumped the track on an embankment twelve feet high and rolled to the bottom.

Typhus at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Seventy-six more cases of typhoid fever were reported to the board of health Saturday. This is the greatest number recorded in one day in nine years and is causing much alarm. In four days there have been 245 new cases, and since January 1 the total has reached 1,312.

Died of Injury.

Shelbyville, Tenn.—Joseph Jones, an excellent and greatly esteemed young man, aged 19 years, who was the main support of a widowed mother, was caught by the belting of a saw mill five miles from town Thursday and his arm was crushed before the machinery could be stopped. The arm was amputated, bu the young man died in a few minutes after the operation. An uncle of the young man was killed at the same saw mill some time ago.

Carpenters Go on Strike.

Tampa, Fla.—Two hundred union carpenters, the total force of the Jutton-Dible Lumber Company, went on a strike in sympathy with the union painters now on strike.

ATTACKED AT NIGHT.

Passenger Boats Robbed by Chinese Pirates Not Far From Canton.

Hong Kong.—Chinese pirates on April 3 held up three passenger boats four teen miles from Shu Shui, not far from Canton, and robbed the Rev. Charles B. Hager, an American missionary. In an interview Dr. Hager said:

"Our boats and two others were anchored off a village on the Tung river, when they were simultaneously attacked at night by forty pirates armed with Mauser rifles. They fired at us and narrowly missed me. The boats were riddled with bullets. I was divested of my clothes, cash and surgical instruments. I have reported the matter to the American consul at Canton."

India's Cotton Crop.

Washington, D. C.—American consular officers in Asia report broadening commercial activity in the Orient. Consul-General Miller reports from Yokohama that merchandise arrivals at that Japanese port in 1905 amounted to $26,000,000 for the principal articles alone, cotton and cotton manufactures leading, with $10,236,000. The United States bought nearly all of the 22,876,000 pounds of tea which Yokohama exported last year and 74 per cent of her $36,000,000 raw silk exports.

India's cotton crop for the season of 1905-6 is announced by Consul Fee, of Bombay, to be 3,240,000 bales of 400 nips and oil meal, and such rations pounds each. This is half a million bales less than in the previous year, although there were 505,000 additional acres planted. The increased yield in the province of Bombay was more than offset by the decrease in the central provinces, in Punjab and Hyderabad.

Cuba's one-sided trade is shown in a report to the bureau of manufactures from Consul Baehr at Cienfugos. The exports of $12,500,000 in value from that port during the last fiscal year all went to the United States except $98,000 worth, while of the $6,890,0000 imports only about one-third came from the states. Americans are developing large sugar plantations around Cienfugos.

Conspiracy to Defraud.

Chicago, Ill.—John A. Linn, clerk of the circuit court of Cook county, and formerly clerk of the superior court of Cook county, entered a plea of guilty to a charge of conspiracy to defraud, and was given an indeterminate sentence in the penitentiary. But one witness was heard in the defense, and this was a physician, who declared that Linn was afflicted with bronchial trouble and hard labor and exposure will endanger his life. Linn was indicted on more than a score of charges, one of which was conspiracy to defraud the county of money through the manipulation of jurors' pay checks. Linn has been acting as clerk of the circuit court until Saturday, when his resignation was presented, immediately after he had decided to enter the plea of guilty.

$17,000 Bar of Gold Missing.

New York.—A bar of gold bullion valued at about $17,000 was stolen in shipment between Georgetown, British Guiana, and New York. The discovery of the theft was made when the box in which the bar was shipped was opened and found to contain a piece of steel. The numerous seals on the box were undisturbed.

Girl's Sentence Is Commuted.

Tamboff, Central Russia.—The sentence of Mlle. Spirodonovo, the 17-year-old girl who shot Chief of Secret Police Luzhenoffsky, and who was condemned to be hanged, has been commuted to twenty years' imprisonment. The health of the girl, it is understood, is completely shattered.

Will Not Sell Lower California.

Mexico City.—The Associated Press is authorized to deny absolutely the story printed in several American newspapers that the Mexican government is willing to sell Lower California to the United States and is about to open negotiations with the American government to that end.

Freight Wreck on the Southern.

Nashville, Tenn.—A freight train on the Southern railway broke in two near Rockwood, fifteen miles east of Nashville, at 12 o'clock Friday, causing a serious wreck and fatally injuring W. B. Duke, a Nashville brakeman, who died about twenty-six hours afterward. The train was coming west when the coupling broke about midway the train. Duke was near the break, and when the jar came he fell between the cars and was badly mangled. One leg was broken in five places, his head badly cut and both arms injured. He was taken to Rockwood, where the company physician, Dr. Clarke, attended him until he died at 2:50 Saturday afternoon.

The Significance of the EASTER FEAST

As we rejoice at the Easter season, our thought is centered on its significance to us—the Resurrection of the Saviour. In contemplating the beauty of this basis of Christianity we seldom recall the fact that a festival at this season antedated the birth of our Faith; that the ancient peoples, both Hebrews and Gentiles, celebrated a joyous holiday about the time of the spring equinox.

Christ's own race had kept the Passover during the month of Nisan—the first month of the natural year—ever since the Lord had spared their children and their possessions when He slew the first-born of both man and beast in old Egypt. Christ Himself kept the feast faithfully, and around it are grouped the most dramatic incidents of His life. It was at the Passover that He astonished the doctors in the temple; it was during the annual gatherings for this holiday that many of His miracles were performed; and it was at this same feast that the Great Tragedy occurred—that the fanatic multitude chose to free Barabbas, the murderer, and to crucify the Man of Peace.

With the earliest Christians, the feast of the Passover was easily transformed into a commemoration of the Resurrection of the Redeemer. As the blood of the paschal lamb on the doorposts of their forefathers had saved them from the destroying angel, so now the blood of the Lamb of God would deliver them from their own destroying weaknesses. As in the past they had rejoiced over their escape from the bond of Egypt, so now they exulted in their freedom from the eternal chains of sin. They exhibited their joy to the surrounding world. Their houses were decorated with greens and blossoms and their persons adorned with fresh garments. In glad tones they uttered a new greeting, "Christ is risen;" to which was replied, "Christ is risen, indeed!" or "And hath appeared unto Simon!"

Customs typical of the Resurrection were copied from neighboring countries. The Persians had long exchanged eggs in springtime, as a symbol of re-creation. The Christians adopted this custom but modified it. They dyed their eggs red to signify that while there was a re-creation, indeed, it was secured only through the Blood of the Lamb. To-day, when we exchange eggs of all colors, all sizes and with all sorts of wonders hidden in them, we have lost sight of their significance to the first Christians.

When the missionaries of the Cross advanced to the countries of Northern Europe, they found that here the people had a joyous feast day about the time of the Resurrection, in honor of Eostra, the goddess of springtime. When they converted these nations they still kept the festival, interpreting it to be now in honor of the God of all seasons. However, we still have a remembrance of the pagan goddess, Eostra, in our English title, Easter.

Throughout the early Christian world, Easter was the greatest feast in the calendar, and it soon came to be called "The Great Day." It still holds a unique sovereignty, for upon its time depend the dates of all the movable feasts and fasts of the church year.

The exact date of Easter made a schism in the early church. The churches in Asia Minor commemorated the Resurrection on the 14th of Nisan, the Jewish Paschal, no matter on what day of the week this occurred; while the church in Europe celebrated the feast as near the 14th of Nisan as possible, but always on a Sunday, because they said Christ had risen on a Sunday. For two centuries the fathers of the church argued the question, and then, at the Council of Nice, in 325, they compromised. It was decided, first, that the 21st of March should be accounted the vernal equinox; second, that the full moon happening upon, or next after the 21st of March, should be taken for the full moon of Nisan; third, that the Lord's day next following the full moon should be Easter day; and fourth, that if the full moon be on a Sunday, Easter day should be the Sunday after. It is very probable that few of us of this generation have known that Easter can never occur during the period of Luna's greatest brilliancy.

With so simple a rule, it would seem that any one of us could compute the exact date of Easter for years ahead, but the fact is the moon's movements throw difficulties in our way. Her cycle always has a fraction of a day tacked on its end, and so a skilled mathematician is necessary to foretell the correct date of her changes. However, if an expert calculate the recurrence of her phases, the rest of us ordinary people, by following the Nicean rule, can find the date of Easter for ourselves.

Even if we had no exact date, we would probably feel the inspiration the old pagans cherished. With the story of the Great Sacrifice for our sakes, added to the instinctive joyousness of the spring, we seem to acquire a new personal dignity. Our hearts tell us that if we are worth saving our lives must be worth living, and with genuine cheerfulness we welcome this gladsome season when nature burst forth afresh to accompany the resurrection of the soul of man.—Katherine Chandler, in The Household.

Conceptions of Christ by Five Masters

Some Fascinating Easter Eggs.

MARGARET MEREDITH.

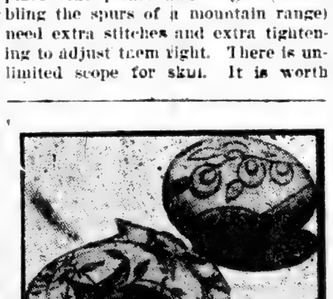
Easter eggs were a great thing with us little girls in Virginia. I do not remember whether there was any talk of new Easter clothes; but then that would have been, in our eyes, a small matter in comparison.

The prettiest ones by far were dyed with calico.

Get the calico either small figured, wee sprigs of flowers and the like, or with a flower large enough to decorate the whole side of the egg.

A piece about four by seven inches will serve the purpose, or two pieces three and a half by four inches; larger, if the figures require it, in order to be well placed upon the egg.

In covering, put the right side of the goods to the egg, and tack or pin the calico tight over it, and follow this tacking with close sewing (see illustration), drawing the calico tight and as smooth as possible, especially where the figures are, as you wish the figures to lie flat against the egg, and whole figures, if possible, rather than parts. Outside of these smooth places the pleats and ridges (resembling the spurs of a mountain range) need extra stitches and extra tightening to adjust them right. There is unlimited scope for skill. It is worth the sacrifice of a good many eggs as a manual art lesson.



Easter eggs, showing the eggs wrapped in the calico and after the cloth is removed.

We were advised to use calicoes which faded easily; but that was exaggerated advice: the tolerably fast dark colors succeed better. The brown, black or scarlet of good fast colored prints, scarcely color the egg at all. Purple seems desirable, and dark blue. Deep pink roses often come out beautiful. A white or very light ground is generally best.

Prints not intended to be washed do well; for instance, the cheaper draperies, like thick silkaline, and the thin furniture coverings, especially old-fashioned "curtain calico" (lately fashionable again), which has a sort of varnished glaze.

Results, however, differ so endlessly that no absolute rules can be given; and, indeed, experimenting is a great part of the interest. Flower clusters or other combinations of several colors are desirable, because when some of the colors do not "take" at all, others may come out finely and produce an excellent, though unexpected, effect.

We boiled our eggs (thus sewed in their covers) in weakened lye; but I (living in town) boil them in washing soda and water; a lump the size of a walnut to a quart or less, which boils down generally to still less. Put the eggs into the boiling mixture at any time. Only be sure that the soda is fully dissolved. Let them boil nearly half an hour. If your calico is, however, of somewhat fast colors, an hour may be better. The danger is of boiling off the pictures which you have boiled on. The fast colors will stand a good deal of boiling, getting prettier and prettier, whereas the less fast may soon begin to fade out of the egg as well as out of the covering.

Use a spoon in handling the wet egg (soda or lye eats the skin). Hold it a minute gently in a cloth. You can hastily rip a space of the seam to decide whether to boil longer; but if eggs are plenty, and you are not very wise, you would better not. If not, set it on the top of a vase or any support which will only touch it at points. It will dry very speedily. Waiting does spoil fun.

Cut off the calico at the seam, and be careful not to break or scrape the egg.

The colors will seldom be the same as those of the calico; often quite different. Experimenting uses up a good many eggs, but you can hardly fail to get some very pretty results.

Do not boil many at once in a can if there is danger of the colors running much; and in boiling successive lots, if the solution has grown dark, make a fresh one (half a dozen walnut sized lumps of soda cost a cent).

If this is too much for the family patience, there is another entertaining way: Get some of the ready prepared egg dyes, to be used cold. Boil the eggs hard, and after they are thoroughly cooled, mark words or figures upon them with melted wax. Then dye and afterward carefully tear off the wax. Or you can scratch pictures in white lines on the plain, dark dyed eggs with a penknife.

Several rainy spring days could be made very entertaining by these processes, and plenty of Easter presents provided for little cousins and schoolmates.—The Household.

BUTTONMAKERS' TRADE.

AN ARTICLE WHICH ILLUSTRATES IMPORTANCE OF SMALL THINGS.

Made Chiefly of Pearl Shell—Forty-two Buttons a Year is the Average for Every Man, Woman and Child in the United States.

The button is one of the best examples of the importance of small things. Read it out of existence in all its forms and it would affect our national life. Compelled to return to the robes of our ancestors, many of the greatest lines of modern industry would be handicapped. Imagine the firemen of a locomotive clad in loose flowing garments or the conductor of a crowded trolley car making change in a toga.

Forty-two buttons each for every man, woman and child in the United States represents the annual production of the United States, according to a special report on buttons issued by our Government in connection with the twelfth census. Since this report, however, there have been great changes in the making of buttons in this country and the annual production has greatly increased. Our buttons are made from bone, cloth, horn, metals, vegetable, ivory, wood, celluloid, paper, pearl and several other materials. Of these pearl buttons hold first place in both value and numbers. Twelve million gross of fresh water pearl buttons are now being made in this country each year and about one-fifth as many salt water pearl buttons. Since the last census report the pearl buttons annually produced have nearly doubled.

Fifteen years ago it was discovered that the waters of the Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Tennessee and Arkansas produced pearl excellently adapted to the making of buttons. Up to that time all pearl buttons made in the United States were from salt water shells and the button industry was confined to cities on the Eastern coast. Since the discovery of fresh water pearl the industry has spread well into the Central and Western States. Hundreds of shell hunters busy themselves along the rivers, and factories for the making of button blanks have sprung up on the banks.

The first operation in the making of a button is preparing and sawing of the shell into button blanks of various sizes and thickness. The blanks will be understood, are round and of the same diameter as the buttons into which they are made. The varied thickness of the shell gives a variety of thickness to the blanks as first sawed out, thus necessitating the slicing of them into many additional blanks of the same diameter. If the blanks have been prepared upon the banks of some river they are shipped in sacks like so much grain and are thus received at the store room of the button factory proper. These bags contain two hundred pounds or more. A grading machine automatically sorts bushels and bushels of these blanks into their respective thickness.

The various sizes of buttons at a button factory and to the trade are described by a number and the word "lines." There are 10-line buttons and 65-line buttons and some even larger. There are 40 lines to the inch, and when we speak of a 40-line button it means that the diameter of that button is one inch.

As soon as the shells have been turned into blanks the work of shaping, facing and drilling is begun. The button machines rest upon a bench and are operated by belting. They are not unlike the bench lathes of a machinist. Each button is put in a sort of socket with one hand of the operator and with the other hand the mechanical facing tool brought in contact with it and the power applied. The drilling of the holes in the button is done in the same way.

About three years ago a marvelous new invention made its appearance and has revolutionized the industry to no small extent. In the making of fresh water pearl buttons one of these machines takes the place of five girls under the former plan. A girl seated at one of these machines places the blanks one after another rapidly in position. On a sort of belt-like arrangement these buttons, as they are put in place, are carried first to the mechanism which shapes and faces and then a little further to the point at which the drills automatically operate in piercing the holes. Carried on further, the button is delivered from the machine into a receptacle and the part of the machine which held it on its journey quickly comes round in front of the operator again to be filled. These machines were invented in Iowa, and are now coming into quite general use.

Where buttons are of large size and are made in some fancy design this work is done upon a hand machine. These buttons are, of course, more expensive. The styles of decoration in buttons do not change greatly.

In another part of the factory another force of girls is employed in fastening the buttons onto cards ready for the market.

These girls become very adept at this work and easily sew on 40 gross a day each.

SEEKING LIFE'S SOURCE.

Problem of Spontaneous Generation Still Under Discussion.

The controversy regarding spontaneous generation—that is, the production of living beings from non-living matter—has been kept alive in recent years by the work of Dr. H. C. Bastian. For, says The London Dr. Bastian has maintained almost the whole of the scientific world that spontaneous generation may, and does, occur at the present day. He professes to have seen it continually taking place in his laboratory. His theory. It is always out of organic materials that this spontaneous generation takes place. Dr. Bastian recommends infusion of turnip or beef, these are treated according to certain directions which are given, life will duly appear. And we are assured that it is spontaneous, and not developed from any pre-existing germs. But Dr. Bastian's critics will doubtless here say, "Life is developed in your infusions because they have not been efficiently sterilized, or has arisen from previously existing germs in the usual way." Dr. Bastian, on the other hand, considers the reason why other experimenters do not get life from their infusions is that in their zealous sterilizing they have destroyed the "germinating power of the fluid," its potentiality of reproduction.

Dr. Bastian also believes in what has been called "heterogenesis"—that is, the production of certain living creatures from totally different species. As if, for example, a crab should give birth to a shrimp. Among the remarkable examples of heterogenesis which Dr. Bastian claims to have seen taking place in his laboratory the following may be mentioned: Eggs of rotifers have hatched out into monads—creatures very much lower in the scale of life; diatoms have been developed from the cells of seaweed; chlorophyll cells (vegetable) have become amoebae (animals); and infusoria have developed from the eggs of flies.

It may be noted that all the examples of spontaneous generation brought forward occur in organic infusions, so that even if accepted they would throw no light on the origin of life from inorganic materials. It is suggested, however, that nitrates and ammonia, formed during thunderstorms, might play an important part in the preparation of the material out of which life was to arise.

Dr. Bastian reproaches evolutionists and with some appearance of justice, for not believing in the constant occurrence of spontaneous generation, such as he claims to have demonstrated. The majority of evolutionists, he points out, assume that the natural origin of living matter has taken place only once in the far past. Or if repeated in time past that is, at any rate, it no longer occurs. But this is to look upon the process as a sort of miracle, and to assume a break in the continuity of evolution which all evolutionists are anxious to avoid.

HOW TIGERS KILL PREY.

Always Make Attack Upon the Flank Of an Animal.

I have taken considerable trouble to find out how tigers kill large game, says a writer in the London Field. Some time ago I was asked to come and see a full-grown bullock that had been killed by a tiger. On examining it I found the animal had its neck broken and there were claw marks on the nose and shoulder, but nowhere else. There was no doubt that the tiger had jumped at the bull and landed on the shoulder, and when the bull turned his head to gore the tiger he must have put his claws out and with a sudden jerk broken his neck.

On another occasion I went to see a young buffalo which had been killed by a tiger and found the same thing had happened. There were similar marks on the nose and also on the near shoulder, which clearly indicated that this animal had been killed in the same way. Natives who had actually seen a tiger killing a buffalo told me they saw the same thing happen, also that in dragging off the heavy carcass such as buffalo or bullock he gets most of the weight across his shoulder.

This must be fairly correct, as I have often followed a kill, and the marks left indicated that only a portion of the animal was trailing along the ground. I have known a full-grown bull which ten men could not move dragged for two miles by a tiger in heavy jungle, where roots, trees and swamp had to be forced through. In no case have I seen the pug marks facing the wrong way except when stopping to feed, which proves he must carry a portion of the animal over his shoulder.

The old idea of a tiger killing his game by a blow from the paw is nonsense; besides, in this country a tiger never faces his prey, but always tacks him on the flank, or when charged. Another curious fact which may seem very like a fairy tale is that a tiger does not seem to like a small lamp being tied over a tree about ten feet high, but will come and feed. I have known three occasions when this has been tried, and each time a tiger has come to feed upon the carcass.

NEWS AND NOTES FOR WOMEN

THE NEW MISS ROOSEVELT.

Miss Ethel Roosevelt, Mrs. Long... worth's young half-sister, is emerging ... the shadow into the limelight, ... and when she comes out the Ameri... people will see a very handsome ... young girl with all the attributes ... which have made her elder sister so ... popular, except perhaps the flower... like delicacy, says the Washington ... correspondent of the Indianapolis ... News.

Miss Ethel is far more robust than ... Miss Alice ever was. She is growing ... tall and proportionately large. Erect, ... active, graceful and gracious, she is ... a very pleasing specimen of Ameri... can girlhood. To be sure, she is still ... a schoolgirl, in her sixteenth year, ... and will not be presented to society ... for two seasons yet, but she is a pop... ular member of her set, which is by ... no means a quiet and unheard-of set. ... They have their own little festivities, ... luncheons, theatre parties and small ... dances, when elaborateness is a fea... ture.

Miss Ethel is a pupil in the Na... tional Cathedral School for Girls, ... just above Georgetown which ... was founded and endowed by ... Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, widow of the ... Senator from California, and mother ... of William Randolph Hearst, of New ... York. Ethel Roosevelt returns to ... the White House every Friday after... noon and spends the week-end with ... her parents and younger brothers ... there. She is also a diligent student ... of music, in which art Mrs. Roosevelt ... has had all her children well trained, ... and continues her own study by ... hearing all the best music possible.

VEILS NEVER SEEN BEFORE.

The man who said that there is ... nothing new under the sun lived be... fore the day of the face veil. Most of ... the little accessories which go so far ... toward making the great well dressed ... change with the seasons; not so the ... face veil.

Styles in that change between ... times as well. At present, simultane... ously with Paris, so veil importers ... say, there is a great showing of nov... elties in veils and veilings. A made ... veil known as the flirtation veil is ... having a great run.

The flirtation veil is three yards long ... and a warm article. It is made of ... washable chiffon of a filmy texture ... that would make Peter Pan ashamed ... when he holds his lost shadow up to ... the public eye. The ends are hand ... painted in big flowers, and in some ... cases a painted border extends down ... both sides.

It is generally worn loose over a ... complexion veil and is also employed ... as a head covering for evening wear.

Many of the new carriage and call... ing veils have pin head dots very ... close together and a sparse sprink... ling of large velvet or chenille dots ... over these. Such have a boarder of ... real lace or narrow velvet ribbon and ... should be chosen to match the gown.

Never before have made veils ... and veilings by the yard been ... obtainable in colors so wonder... ful and so becoming. Even ... the plainest woman, if she has ... right sense of color, can find some... thing in them to hide her defects and ... enhance her charms.

Smart automobile veils necessarily ... are of chiffon cloth, for it is both dust ... and water proof, and their ends are ... embellished and made strong with ... velvet dots.

A wise woman expends a good deal ... of thought on the veils and sticks to ... what suits her best in spite of allur... ing novelties. Authorities say that the ... wash lace veil will come into its own ... again this summer. Its advent will ... be hailed with delight by those of lim... ited income, for a veil of this kind is ... cheap, durable, becoming and easily ... cleaned at home.—New York Sun.

MISS ANTHONY, PIONEER.

In any estimate of Susan B. An... thony's contribution to the progress ... of her times, there must be admitted ... the great debt which today owes to ... her and the pioneers of her cause, for ... the shaping of public opinion to meet ... the changing social and industrial ... conditions of women in the United ... States and in other lands. When ... Susan B. Anthony began her work, ... the legal status of women in this ... country was "little better than that of ... the slave"; and though the civil ... equality of the ballot, which she ... preached was the only way by which ... woman could secure laws establish... ing their right to property and guar... dianship of their children, has not ... yet been granted to woman in this or ... other Eastern States in which her ... crusade was strongest, the injustices ... toward woman pointed out by her ... have largely been remedied by the ... lawmakers, and she lived to see the ... world a better place for woman to ... live in, and to witness many of the ... reforms she advocated put in force. ... The bitterness of feeling on the ... question of woman suffrage has been ... largely replaced with tolerance or in... difference, since the ballot has not ... followed the changing conditions ... which have made woman a powerful ... factor in industrial and public life, ... and the reasons for bitterness and ... "wrongs" of women have to such a ... large extent ceased to exist. Hap... pily to be the champion of the rights ... of woman these later years is by no ... means the test of courage and de... votion it was when Susan B. Anthony ... first set forth on her mission to clear ... the path for the woman of today.—Albany Argus.

EVENING AUSTERITY.

A slight note of austerity is notice... able in evening gowns. The decollet... tage has a tendency toward more mod... eration than formerly; tuckers are ... enjoying a great vogue; while sleeve... less bodices are hardly ever seen, the ... epaulette of pearls, flowers or straps ... of ribbons having quite abdicated in ... favor of the little puffed sleeves. ... Though many examples of elbow or ... three-quarter length sleeves are worn, ... yet, in my opinion there should cer... tainly be a line of demarcation be... tween the fashions of our sleeves for ... day gowns and of those for our ... evening frocks. Some very pret... ty and original sleeves belonging ... to the draped persuasion were ... made of tulle of a lovely blonde ... shade, embroidered in gold and opal ... sequins; they did not quite reach the ... elbow, the back being slightly longer ... than the front, which was opened on ... the upper part of the arm, and only ... joined together by narrow pink vel... vet ribbons, tying in the centre in ... neat, prime little bows. The gown ... itself was a Princess of the palest ... pink Liberty satin, with a wide panel ... front of the same embroidered tulle ... over pink mousseline de soie.

MIXED BABES AND BRAINWORK.

Surely a woman must have a mind of wide range when she can pursue the science of mathematics and yet show a deeper devotion to household duties than many a shallow-brained woman ever shows. That reflection is called up by Mrs. Elizabeth Brown Davis, expert calculator for the Astronomical Observatory in Washington, D. C. She has been with Dr. Simon Newcomb, head of the observatory, since her early girlhood. She won the highest degrees in the Columbian University, of Washington, and then went to Johns Hopkins. She was married 10 or 12 years ago to Arthur Davis, a scientist, and resigned her post in the observatory. But Dr. Newcomb was not satisfied with her successor, and finally it was arranged that work would be sent to Mrs. Davis.

A visitor to this woman may find her busy with deep calculations, while a young child lies on her knees and a basket of sewing stands near by, ready for attention as soon as her other task is done. She has seven children and gives all the most devoted care. She is preparing her young sons for college and her girls are taught at home.

IT DOES.

A fine body means good food and pure water.

A good boot is the making of a foot.

A lot of exercise and fresh air builds the complexion.

Massage helps the worn constitution to "catch on."

Chiropody does a lot for long-suffering extremities.

Manicuring (with constant care) helps hands tremendously.

An artistic hairdresser makes features as well as coiffures.

A smart milliner frames the face and shapes the head.

A desirable glover makes almost any hand look graceful.

A clever corsetiere does wonders for almost any figure.

A successful dressmaker does the rest—and that isn't always easy.—Philadelphia Record.

SHORTER THE DINNER, THE BETTER.

One hostess in this city has threatened to discharge her chef because her last party dinner lasted an hour and twenty-five minutes. She wishes her dinners served within a sixty-minute limit. Once the success of a dinner was judged by the number of courses and the length of time it required to serve them. Now the hostess who provides so much or who lets things drag toward the second hour runs the risk of having no guests for her next banquet. The White House dinners rarely call for more than an hour at the table. Mrs. Fairbanks has placed before her guests delicacies prepared and served artistically, and yet the dinner has lasted only three-quarters of an hour.—New York Press.

SHORT SKIRTS LINGER.

Despite the fact that many reports have been printed that long walking skirts were coming in, it is the fact that the short skirt is not only still with us, but certain to remain. Many are having their street gowns cut as short as the extreme mode of last spring, while others are adopting the more conservative two-inches-from-the-ground model; still others—the latter, perhaps, in the majority among the older women—are having skirts cut one and a half inches only from the floor. To have them longer than this means that at times in walking they will sweep the pavements.

For the Younger Children....

HOME AGAIN.

I know some grown-up people
Who say they're fond of boys,
But when you go to visit
You mustn't make much noise.
They have a splendid garden,
With beautiful flowers, but there!
They don't like boys to pick them,
Because they're all so rare.
They have some chairs with cushions
That look like velvet moss,
But they aren't meant to sit on,
Or lean against, or toss.

They have some things in cabinets
All fixed up spick and span,
For "careful boys" to play with.
(The boy who dares to, can!)
They're always kind and pleasant
As ever they can be;
They've spent a whole long fortnight
Just entertaining me.
I guess I like my family
The best of any one;
And when you've been a-visiting,
The coming home is fun!

—Elizabeth Lincoln Gould, in the Youth's Companion.

A BRAVE ROBIN.

One day, while passing a farm in Cornwall, a gentleman's attention was excited by the movements of a robin, which flew around him and flapped its wings close to his face, plainly showing that it was anxious to "catch his eye." Following the bird, which came backward and forward to make sure he was coming, he was at last led to a hedge. By going close up to the branches he was able to discover the cause of the robin's distress. A rat was in the nest. It jumped out the moment it was detected. As the kindly gentleman walked away, the robin greeted his departure with a chorus of thanks, blithely chirruped.—Presbyterian.

LINCOLN'S MENTAL POWERS.

Lincoln was always strong with a jury. He knew how to handle men, and he had a direct way of going to the heart of things. He had, moreover, unusual powers of mental discipline. It was after his return from Congress, when he had long been acknowledged one of the foremost lawyers of the State, that he made up his mind he lacked the power of close and sustained reasoning, and set himself like a schoolboy to study works of logic and mathematics to remedy the defect. At this time he committed to memory six books of the propositions of Euclid; and, as always, he was an eager reader on many subjects, striving in this way to make up for the lack of education he had had as a boy. He was always interested in mechanical principles and their workings, and in May, 1849, patented a device for lifting vessels over shoals, which had evidently been dormant in his mind since the days of his early Mississippi River experiences. The little model of a boat, whittled out with his own hand, that he sent to the Patent Office when he filed his application is still shown to visitors, though the invention itself failed to bring about any change in steamboat architecture. —From Helen Nicolay's "The Boys' Life of Lincoln," in St. Nicholas.

CRICKETS ARE TENORS.

A poet, when speaking about crickets and grasshoppers, happily termed them "violinists of the fields," and, although at the time he was ignorant of the fact, he stated nothing more than a scientific truth. Microscopic examination has revealed the fact that in most cases these insects have a striking resemblance to a rudimentary violin.

Musical instruments of the winged type may be divided into two groups —those which do not use their wings and those which do, for the production of sound.

Of the two the latter species is by far the most numerous. A very curious fact in this connection is that all insects are tenors, deep bass voices being quite unknown.

Many insects sing by day, such, for instance, as the chickadee, which, however, are not of the "violinist" type, as they play upon a series of hard plates attached to the abdomen, much in the same way as a Spanish dancer uses the castanets. Some insect only sing by night, such as the domestic and tree crickets. The apparatus used by them resembles a violin, the abdomen being partly endowed with small bridges like edges or ridges against which the wings are rubbed.

Next time you hear one of Nature's tenors try to place him. After that you'll be interested to learn more about him.

WHY HAIR TURNS GRAY.

The color of the hair depends on little granules, which can be seen in the hair if examined under a powerful microscope. Sometimes the hair may become white in a night. Brown-Sequard tells us that when he was forty-five years old his beard turned white in two days. This took place when he was perfectly well and without any especial cause. Sometimes, however, sorrow or illness produces the change earlier in life than it would usually take place. As to the cause, some have said that the hair becomes filled with small air particles which make it look gray; others have said that the outer part of the hair becomes altered so that it is like ground glass and you cannot see the color. But a man by the name of Metchnikoff tells us that the real reason is because small movable bodies in the hair devour the grains of coloring matter and move them to the roots of the hair. Sometimes poisons in disease, or some results of sorrow, bring about an effect upon these small migrating bodies (cells), causing them to become active in the above fashion. This is said to be the reason why the hair grows gray. —St. Nicholas.

FLOSS—A TRUE INCIDENT.

Floss was a big yellow cat, one of my many pets in my country home. One summer we noticed that day after day Floss went down across the meadow and disappeared in the edge of the cedar swamp. He always went in late in the afternoon, and one day I followed him, taking good care he should not see me. He skirted the swamp for several rods, stopped at a little open and, seating himself on a stump, began washing his face, stopping now and then to glance about in an expectant fashion.

Shortly there was a rustling among the bushes, and a handsome yellow fox leaped into the open. Then the fun began.

Floss and the fox played at tag as gayly as two children. Floss was always the "tagger," and the fox ran this way and that and doubled and dodged in so comical a manner that once I laughed outright, whereupon they stopped their play and stood for a moment listening. Then Floss went back to the stump and the fox lay down on the grass. After a few minutes' rest they were up and at it again.

For half an hour I watched them from my hiding place behind a clump of cedars, until Floss was quite exhausted.

The fox was untiring, but Floss was not so nimble and was very fat.

About sundown they separated, Floss walking slowly toward home and the fox swinging off towards the near-by stream at a brisk trot.

I hurried to overtake Floss, but he seemed much frightened when he saw me and ran into the swamp. He did not come home until next morning, and never again did we see him crossing the meadow or find him playing with his wild comrade.—Our Fourfooted Friends.

OUR NATIVE REDBIRD.

The most beautiful of our birds is the cardinal or "redbird." Though not as brilliantly arrayed, Mrs. Cardina, is very smartly turned out in rich brown, with just enough red to "relieve" it.

Alexander Wilson, whose quaint epitaph so many have read in Old Swedes' Churchyard, wrote in 1828: "This is one of our most common cage-birds, and is very generally known, not only in North America, but even in Europe; numbers of them have been carried over both to France and England, in which last country they are usually called Virginia nightingales."

Happily this traffic is a thing of the past. Any bird should have his freedom in his native haunts, and such a magnificent specimen as this cardinal grosbeak (he is a member of the finch family) should be doubly protected because of the temptation his beauty offers.

Though he is found in all the Eastern States, he is a Southern bird. He likes his home, too, and considers migrating a bore.

He's a trifle smaller than the robin, and, with the exception of the dab of brilliant black around his bill, he is glowingly, almost dazzingly, red. While James Lane Allen gives him a poetic, sympathetic tribute in "The Kentucky Cardinal," Neltje Blanchan is inclined to think that this "Virginia Redbird," of refined, dignified and courtly bearing, is a haughty autocrat of the "F. F. V." type, better calculated to calling out respect and admiration than affection.

Perhaps he is a trifle spoiled.

No wonder.

He commences his melodious sighing in March, and early in May Mrs. C. begins building their bulky, loosely-made nest, usually in evergreen shrubs, like laurel and holly. She lays three or four brown-speckled white eggs, often two broods in a season.

Considering all his temptation it is a great wonder he is not a flirt, a bachelor or a divorce.

Not he.

He's as true as he is handsome.

His home is a pattern of domestic felicity, and even in winter, when without the responsibility of little birds, he and his lucky spouse are always seen together.

In fact, he is so devoted and fearful of harm for Mrs. Cardinal that he often calls attention to her and their home by the vent he gives his excited fears.

His voice is loud and clear and his song suggests "What Cheer." The most curious part of it is that his other half is herself an excellent singer, a contralto, whose notes are more admired by some than his wild, free, flageolet-like tenor.

A bird to be proud and no mistake.—Philadelphia Record.

Note and Beam.

Professor Starr, the famous ethnologist, was accusing a woman of barbarism. "And she is not only barbarous—she is illogical and inconsistent!" he exclaimed. "I was walking in the country one day with a young woman. In a grove we came upon a boy about to shin up a tree. There was a nest in the tree, and from a certain angle it was possible to see in it three eggs. 'You wicked little boy,' said my companion, 'are you going up there to rob that nest?' 'I am,' the boy replied coolly. 'How can you?' she exclaimed; 'think how the mother will grieve over the loss of her eggs.' 'Oh, she won't care,' said the boy; 'she's up there in your hat.'"—Argonaut.

SOME TIMELY THOUGHTS.

Editor of The Union:

I reckon there come times in all our lives when, emerging from the clouds and gloom of despondency, some star of hope floods us with its radiance and we "take courage and thank God."

I have so sadly learned "to feel another's woe" and so gladly learned to "rejoice with them that rejoice" that I think I can almost enter into the hilarity of joy that is now about to take possession of the maligned, traduced and hitherto unchampioned Democratic party of Alabama.

Dr. Cunningham, like a drowsy lion, is waking from his stupor, shaking the dew from his mane, girding up his loins, giving his breeches a hitch and is going forth "in defense of the party" against the blatant, bleating, braying blustering Comer!

I for one am glad of it. Mr. Comer has been making ugly thrusts at the party (which would be tiresome if untrue), and the poor party has had no one to utter a word in defense!

Of course, something is wrong against the people or Mr. Comer would not leave his family and go screaming about with such a hot place under the collar and such a galled place under the crupper. To be sure, something is wrong! The people are not only neglected, but betrayed to the terrible oppression of corporate greed—that's what Mr. Comer says.

I'm afraid Mr. Comer is undertaking to practice the difficult feat of "holding with the hounds and running with the hare." I'm afraid he's trying to blow "hot and cold" at the same time. I'm afraid he thinks he may lose some Populist votes if he should come right out and charge all these sins to us.

I'm afraid he hasn't the courage of conviction to charge these sins against the people to the Republicans.

He appears to feel a delicacy in "speaking right out in the meeting" and laying the blame at the proper door.

No, he leaves us to infer.

I do so much dislike to "infer" when the well-informed man can so easily and so readily relieve me of the unpleasant difficulty.

But as Mr. Comer is a Democrat and wants everybody who is short on sense to "stick to the party!" I can't help but believe he is trying to shield the very party which Dr. Cunningham means to "defend!"

If this be true then they're as much alike as two black-eyed peas and are "just the same, only different."

Why, if they are both shielding and defending the Democratic party, then the party must be guilty or innocent or both or "one or the other."

As much as I have fought the Democratic party, as much as it has fought me, I feel in my heart no sentiment of injustice, and out of the very deep of my better nature I am prepared in all candor to say that for this time, for other times, for any time, I think the party is perfectly and entirely innocent of—any good.

But if it is a good party, with good intentions towards the people, and has had the chance to do all the bad things charged against it, and didn't do it, because no other party had the chance, then I almost believe that Dr. Cunningham, who is a man of great learning (wears a broad hat so as to cover it), will be able to show to the satisfaction of men who prefer not to believe the truth that the party is innocent, because from the very nature of the circumstances the Populists and Republicans are absolved from the "very appearance of evil!!!"

I almost believe he is prepared to demonstrate as a learned physician that the "hair of the dog is good for the bite," and, therefore, to continue the party in position to do mischief is the panacea for all the ills which the party has done, is doing or intends to do. And "Hotspur" and "Quixote" arouse no enthusiasm.

I think Mr. Comer knows it as well as I do, but as he has overlooked it, I venture to suggest that Mr. Comer can relieve the monotony of his uninteresting speech by explaining how his Senatorial champion in the primary of Montgomery county "led all the rest" on the smallness of popular endorsement.

And Dr. Cunningham might dodge the burden of ponderous and long-winded conceptions of statesmanship long enough to demonstrate that "one big steal and quit!" was premature since the "farmer man" of Montgomery county has been "counted out."

I would like to add, as the opinion of a man getting along in years, that there ought to be honor among the members of every brotherhood, even if it be after the order adorned by the accomplished gentleman immortalized by Dr. Smollett. I think his name was Wild—Jonathan Wild.

He finally arrived, amid the plaudits of an outraged people to a great height, and then—shot downwards.

Mangum, O. T., March 28, 1906.

Editor Union:

I'll gives the readers of your much appreciated paper a breeze from Oklahoma. As it is very windy here today, we've been shut in for two days on account of a "norther," and a cold one for this time of year. Corn planting is the order of the day in many parts of Oklahoma. There is quite a lot of small grain planted here, some wheat, lots of oats and some corn. People here seem to think that diversifying of crops is the only safe way to prosperity. Cattle growing is carried on to some extent here, several cars having been shipped from Mangum and other points in this (Greer) county. The poultry industry is carried on in a big way. There was a carload of poultry and one of eggs sent away March 1, and that dealer said he wanted to send a car every week to Chicago. Well, I'm always glad to see so many letters from old Chilton; glad when Monday comes, so I can get The Union; glad indeed to hear of prosperity in Chilton, and I hope they will continue in well doing. Glad to know of the F. E. & C. U. of A. is doing, and hope the people will stand firm and not falter. The farmers don't need anything but what belongs to them; they don't want anything else, but I love to see them get that. I hope to see them able to handle their own business for their own good. The work is being carried on here to some extent. Well, I'll close for this time. Come on, boys, with your best. Three cheers for the F. E. & C. U. of A. and for our paper. Respectfully, J. H. LUNDAY.

HAPPY HOME.

Dear Editor: I wish to thank you for the space you give me in your dear Union paper. Health in this neighborhood is very good at present. Pain Miller and his best girl were Sunday visitors to B. M. Maddox's. Miss Sallie Knight, of Jackson's Chapel, visited J. W. Sears' family Saturday and Sunday. M. H. Busse yand wife visited his brother Sunday. Mrs. Georgia Sharbutt was a visitor at Mrs. Andrew Wilson's Sunday. Ben Culver, of Cooper, visited his uncle, Silas Kelley, Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Wallace, were visitors at J. W. Sears' Sunday. Success to THE UNION and its editor. NOBODY'S DARLING.

PILGRIM'S REST.

Mr. Editor—Please allow me a small space to say a few words in regard to Mr. R. P. Kendrick's illness. He is now in Selma at the Union hospital under the treatment of Dr. Gray, and has had an operation performed for bladder trouble. He has been there for two weeks and will have to remain for a couple of weeks to come, but is getting along as well as possible under the circumstances. I was with him Saturday and Sunday and know he has the very best treatment that could be given a sick man. Mrs. Kendrick has also been sick, but am glad to say she is up again. Will close now, but will let you hear again soon how Mr. K. gets along. With best wishes to THE UNION and its many readers. W. T. HERROD.

PLETCHER.

Editor Union: Our farmers are taking advantage of this beautiful weather and general health is good. R. P. Kendrick, who is at the infirmary in Selma, we are glad to say, is getting along nicely since his operation on Sunday last. Mike Bridges and Miss Rosa Chambers were happily married by Justice of the Peace Broadhead. The bride is a daughter of John Chambers, near Maplesville. We all wish them a lon gand happy life together. Will Adams, Jim Abbott and G. B. Williams in two hunts with some odd days scattered along this season have killed 229 birds. How is that for green hands? Your writer saw in The Union of last week a letter from South Bessie giving some names of those who led and taught old time music; and I'd like to strike hands with him on the old harmony. I remember when Mr. Honeycutt would go to his appointments and such men as R. J. Langston, Steeley Jones, Alfred Childress, Newt Childress, Tom Ward and Frank Foshee would be singing in the old "Harmony," and the South Bessie letter takes me back to old times and thrills me. The singing of late years is altogether different, but I do love to hear it. Just let Clint Veazey, Elbert Littlejohn and Bernie Northcutt get together with their class and they will make the hair rise on your head. There are other letters I'd like to refer to, but this is long enough for my first visit. Success to THE UNION and its grand circulation. BARBER.

MARS HILL.

Mr. Editor: Health of our community is good. Our S. S. is doing fine; it does seem as if everybody is getting interested in it, and I sure am glad to see our people take an interest in this good work. Our Sunbeam has 30 members, and we expect to add more every Sunday. We had a nice singing Sunday afternoon conducted by G W. Scott. I was very glad to read the letter from Cora Scott, of Active, and hope she will come again. Success to The Union and its readers.

A. D. S.

SOUTH BESSIE.

How the territory of THE UNION is expanding. We are pleased to hear the news from Active and Rehoboth. A supposed mad dog was killed here Sunday. The Sunday school at the Freeman school house has elected as teachers and officers for the present quarter S. D. Posey, Miss Maude Erven and Alfred Pate. Luther Ward and George Freeman accompanied by their best girls, the charming Misses Selma Patterson and Rena Wright, of Pleasant Grove passed through this community last week. Mrs. N. B. Posey was reported quite sick Sunday. Miss Ursula Jones visited in Randolph Saturday. G. T. Duke and sons of Randolp were here last week putting up a telephone line from Atchison to Bessie. The church of the living God met here Sunday night at 7:30 and administered the sacrament of the Lord's supper, it being the anniversary of the institution of that ordinance, and was observed Sunday night by the church all over the world. Invitation to participate was extended to all Christians, it being left to the judgment of the person invited as to being a Christian or not. This service being a memorial service is observed only once each year, on the night the Savior was betrayed. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Waldrup, of Maplesville, came up on Sixteen Saturday to attend the memorial service, returning Monday. We were pleased to read a communication from "the old man" of Mars Hill in last UNION. Let the people talk with each other as to who they wish for officers, so public sentiment can be properly crystallized.

ONE OF THE BOYS.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. A. D. MASSEY

Died February 17, 1906.

Editor Union:

I would like to say a few words about our dear mother, who has passed away. Surely there never was a sorrow like parting with mother. I would say this is a sorrow unto death. The sadness of that one beautiful morning my soul shall never forget, to look on the face once so bright and cheerful, now so pale and cold. While we so little thought that she was nearing the day of death—why was she so hasty? So ready was she, so earnest in spirit as to mind not earthly things, neither would her spirit tarry that we could enjoy the one happy privilege to be gathered around her and even once more her smiles to gain. Oh, that we could be so fortunate as this pure one, even in death to escape its sting. Her spirit took its flight into the realms of endless glory, where the angels bade her welcome at the pearly gates, while upon the dear face was stamped the look of earnestness that proved her faith was strong and sure. Oh, thou blessed among women—could we shrink to call her blessed since she is too pure to dwell with us in this world of sin and strife? None but those who have had the sore trial can fully realize this lonely feeling. Yet while our hopes are so blighted, may it be our sad lot in life to yield more to the will of the Lord and Master. While we dare not say that He would deal cruelly, for it is He that doeth all things well, yet can we ever cease to miss her? The room once so cheerful, now to us the voice is hushed, the vacant chair, the window by which she so often sat. The Holy Book it was there; she did search its fair pages, which was her soul's delight. While to us our mother's prayers have ceased, yes, shut down for this earth, which were the guides of our youth in careless childhood's days, when mother sought to guide our feet in life's untrodden days. I grieved her then, whose tender advice and instruction seem now to me a golden rule which brings sweet memories of the happy past, when she as a Christian mother bore the very shield of faith in our home. So earnest on this line was she, even now if it were an angel mother would look down from the sky, yet would she beckon to her children the way of correction that we might share the blessed rest with her in that eternal city. Oh, may we all be ready when He shall bid us come. Oh, may we all be ready when Jesus calls us home.

MRS. H. T. LITTLEJOHN.

Liberty Hill, Ala.

WYLAM.

We sure had some rain the past week, but no serious damage was done here. Jodie Littlejohn and wife, of Smithfield were visitors here Sunday. Mrs. C. J. Sorrell and sisters spent Wednesday with Mrs. Ben Tucker. William Brown was in town Thursday. We are sorry to say that Mrs. G. W. Lutrell is on the sick list, but hope for her speedy recovery. She is a good worker in the Ladies' Aid Society. Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sorrell visited at Y. H. Vines' Saturday. I'm glad to see so many new writers to THE UNION. There are so many things that prove to us how fast it is gaining our people's affection. I congratulate Mr. Lee Vickers. I think he deserves the prize. With best wishes to THE UNION and its dear readers, I still am PAPA'S PET.

Old Time Travel.

It was in 1658 that the first regular stage coach began running between the two capitals, London and Edinburg. It ran once a fortnight, and the fare was 4 pounds sterling, which would be a good deal more than $20 today. The time taken to the journey is not accurately known, but between York and London it was four days. This lavish system of communication was not, however, kept up, as in 1763 the coach ran between London and Edinburg once a month only, taking a fortnight, if the weather was favorable, to the journey. In 1754 a heroic effort was made to improve the London and Edinburg coach. The Edinburg Courant for that year contained the following advertisement:

"The Edinburg stage coach, for the better accommodation of passengers, will be altered to a genteel two-end glass coach, being on steel springs, exceeding light and easy, to go in ten days in summer and twelve in winter, to set out the first Tuesday in March and continue it from Hosea Eastgate's the Coach and Horses, in Dean street, Soho, London, and from John Somerville's in the Canongate, Edinburg, etc Passengers to pay as usual. Performed, if God permits, by your faithful servant, Hosea Eastgate."

In the days of stage coaches people sometimes clubbed together and hired a post-chaise for their journey as being quicker and less expensive, and Scottish newspapers occasionally contained advertisements to the effect that a person about to proceed to London would be glad to hear of a fellow "adventurer" or two best on the same journey to share expense.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

B. F. and L. E. Boockholdt were in Clanton Thursday.

John M. Baker was a pleasant visitor Thursday.

Fonda Hathcock was in Clanton Friday.

Mrs. Della Brown was a visitor here Thursday.

Former Sheriff Lee Hayes was in Clanton Thursday.

R. J. Downs and J. N. Dennis were in town Saturday attending the meeting of the S. C. A.

K. R. and C. L. Burnett were in Clanton Saturday.

J. M. Maddox, W. R. Taylor, A. P. and A. M. Payton were in town Saturday.

J. N. Littlejohn and son, Quincy, were welcome callers Saturday.

J. P. Stonecipher and daughter, Mrs. Phila Hand, were Clanton visitors Saturday.

There are many inquiries concerning the "mad stone," and the owner had better come in to THE UNION office with it.

P. R. Devaughan and wife, Misses Bessie and Bertha and Masters Oce and Hubert were in Clanton Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lije Devaughan were visitors to our town Saturday.

J. S. Popwell and W. J. Williams were in Clanton Saturday.

Colonel A. C. Smith went to Speigner's Sunday to call on J. H. Johnson, who was sent there for 15 years, and says that Johnson makes a model prisoner and is a reliable 'trusty." It seems hard to keep a man in prison when he has seven motherless children, the oldest of whom is not 13 years old, and it does look as if it would be to the best interests of the state to at least parole him so that he could gather his children together and care for them.

L. E. Coburn was a visitor to his home folks at Pleasant Grove the fore part of this week. Mr. Coburn is an employe of the asylum at Tuscaloosa, and speaks in very high terms of the officers and the conduct of affairs there. He also says that there is generally an opening for healthy young men of good habits and that he would be pleased to answer any inquiries from his county folks. Mr Coburn was one of the number that answered the advertisement in THE UNION some months ago.

Colonel A. C. Smith was in Montgomery the fore part of this week where he appeared before the supreme court on behalf of Chilton county's commissioners in the mandamus cases granted by Judge Alston to the Southern railroad and M. and O. railroad, where the roads are trying to get out of paying their share of the "bridge tax" levied several years ago.

E. S. Downs was a pleasant visitor Monday.

G. W. Hodgens was in Clanton Monday.

T. P. Smith was a welcome caller Monday.

Judge L. H. Reynolds has entered into a contract with the T. C. and I. R. R. for the county convicts for $35 per month for all grades. This is the highest price obtained by any company, and is very different to the $9 rate made by Judge Adams.

Mrs. J. P. VanDerveer has been quite ill with pneumonia, but is on the mend now. Mr. Van Derveer himself has been under the weather the last few days, though he still looks after his duties as tax commissioner.

Curtis Gibson was in Clanton Tuesday. "Uncle Curt" is a colored citizen of Beat 3 who is held in high esteem by his white neighbors. He owns about 400 acres of land, besides a gin and other property, but the registrars won't give him a chance to vote.

The court house is nearing completion and the "dead-heads" are all scheming to get an office in it; but the building is for use by public officers only, and in the performance of the duties they are placed there to perform.

A. D. Massey was in Clanton Tuesday. His son, who works in Birmingham, spent a couple of days here on a visit to his home folks.

Read the ad of the Citizens' Savings Bank of Birmingham, and then come in THE UNION and get a bank of your own.

R. A. Rasco; 2:20, How may we increase missionary interest in Sunday school work? Rev. J. H. Thomas; 2:40 How to have good music in the Sunday school, J. W. Hayes, J. W. Billingsley; 3:00, Has the Sunday school been a success up to the present time? F. Eiland, W. M. Pierce. The program will be interspersed with music. Everybody is invited. Come and let us make the day count for God in the uplift of frail and erring humanity.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

S. C. A.

The call meeting of the Cotton Association of Chilton county was held Saturday with a goodly number in attendance. The barbecue committee were given more time to make their report. W. H. Conway and J. W. Sorrells made talks on acreage and diversifying, also some others. Quite a number of new members were enrolled in response to the appeal of resident Gulledge. The cash receipts of the meeting from all services was $57.59, which was very pleasing to Secretary J. N. Dennis. Next meeting May 5, 1906.

Bank Your Saving's With a Safe Bank.

Every man, woman and child, no matter where they live should have a savings account with the Citizens' Savings Bank of Birmingham, for the following reasons:

It is the only bank of importance in the state which confines its banking business strictly to savings accounts and accepts no commercial business. The banking laws of Alabama provide that where a bank doing both a savings and general banking business becomes insolvent, the depositors who has not stipulated for interest (commercial) will have preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings. In other words, the savings depositors can't be paid a cent until the commercial depositors have been paid in full.

We take no trade risks; all our loans are made on first class improved real estate mortgages or other gilt-edge collateral security—our motto being "The strength of a bank is in its individual loans."

These things, backed up by our cash capital and responsibility of our board of directors and the long and successful experiences of our officers in the banking business renders this bank as safe as United States bonds.

Bank with us by mail. It is easy and safe. Write for information.

THE WORLD'S GREAT WANT.

They are trying to arrange it so that man may safely fly;
They are trying to learn more about the stars up in the sky;
They are digging up old ruins so that each of us may know
Just what people did for pleasure and for profit long ago;
Here and there is some one trying to revive the love of art,
Here and there some poet bravely sings a song that's from the heart,
But away with art and science and the Babylonian brick,
What we want is some way in which to Get Rich Quick.

Men are fighting still for freedom, fighting still to have the right
To address their God unhindered when they kneel to pray at night;
They are chafing 'neath oppression as their fathers did before,
They are tugging at the fetters which their luckless parents wore;
Here and there some man arises and attempts to let us know
How to make peace forever the sweet mistress here below,
But we have no time to bother over such affairs; we stick
To the hope of finding ways in which to Get Rich Quick.

The preachers keep on preaching of the glories over there
Where the boodlers cease from troubling and the prospects are fair,
The anxious, eager doctors keep on striving to defy
Grim nature and arrange it so that people needn't die;
But away with all the dreamers and the foolish ones who preach,
Who cares what the stars are made of, or what ancient tablets teach?
We are looking for the hero who will show us all the trick,
Who will kindly point the way in which to Get Rich Quick.

COSMA RACOARE. A RUMANIAN WOOING

By Michael Sadoveanir. Translated by Louise Waring.

COSMA was a powerful man, heavy set, with piercing, steel-blue eyes and heavy moustache. A rough man was Cosma, ever on his horse's back, a rifle across his lap, and a long knife stuck in his belt.

I am an old man, and have traveled through many a land and seen much, but the like of Cosma Racoare I never met. He was of medium height, bony, sunburned, looked like the average man, yet was unlike any of them.

In those days our country suffered many tribulations, Turks and Greeks devastated our Rumanian land, and our people lived in misery and fear. Sorrowful times they were! Cosma seemed the only human being exempt from suffering, going and coming without a thought of to-morrow. All fled before the enemy, but not so did he. Taken prisoner, they put him in chains; these he cast off, as by magic, jumped on his horse and fled. It was written in the stars that none but a silver bullet could harm him. No such man lives in our time; these were the good old days. You may have heard of the other hero, the son of the Maid with the Golden Hair? Well, he stole in Wallachia, on the other bank of the Milcar River, while Cosma plundered in the Muldan. At nightfall they would meet and exchange their booty. No gendarmes ever caught him, for his horse was the fleetest of the fleet, and their bullets whistled powerless about his ears. He lived in the forests, knew neither pain, fear nor love. The hour when he should know the latter was drawing near.

At that time the estate Vulturesti belonged to a Greek, Nicola Zamfride. Nearby, at Frasini, lived the beautiful Rumanian, the widow Sultana. Nicola vowed she should be his, but all efforts seemed futile; neither soothsayers nor witchcraft were powerful enough to help him. Was he unsightly, misshapen? On the contrary, he was a proud Greek, brown-eyed, black-bearded, tall and handsome; yet in spite of these physical attractions, she would none of him.

One day Nicola sat in his room cogitating. He was thinking of the young widow. Why did she reject his wooing? "A few nights ago I hired a gypsy who sang a touching serenade under her window, but the house remained dark and silent. What must I do?" Nicola reflects: "I am well to look at and have a clear mind; why then does she scorn me? She has no lover, for I have had the house watched, but no one has been seen to enter." Nicola loses his temper. As he steps into the courtyard he sees a groom currying a horse. "Do you call that a well-curried horse?" he bellows, and with that he lashes the poor fellow with his whip. The gardener, whom he finds resting in the shade, fares no better.

But what avails venting one's fury on innocent parties?

He strolls into the garden and lies down under a linden. Sadly, autumn winds are sighing and golden leaves, like butterflies, flutter to the ground. An old man enters by the garden gate.

"Vasili, Vasili, come here!"

"What would'st thou, master?"

"Vasili, thou hast ever been faithful; neither the old soothsayer nor the gypsy wench have been able to help me; I have but you to look to, Vasili, the Sultana must be mine."

"I might counsel, but I dare not," replied Vasili.

"Here is a ducat; speak."

"I know my master will find my counsel worth two, yea, three ducats. My advice is that the master ride to Frasini and carry the Sultana off by force."

"I will do as you say, Vasili. Here are two ducats."

That very night Nicola, accompanied by six sturdy young grooms, reaches Frasini. The castle seems shrouded in gloom. By means of rope ladders, Nicola and his followers scale the outer walls. As they enter the open gate, cries of "Help!" are heard. A door opens, and there appears the Sultana radiant in flowing hair and soft white garment. She turns her glowing eyes on Nicola, who, beside himself, attempts to throw his arms around her.

"How dare you! And now I see it is only the worthy Nicola, when I had feared to face a band of robbers." Suddenly she strikes Nicola's head with the flat of her scimitar blade. He is stunned. His men rush to the rescue. One is wounded, the rest take to their horses. By this time the alarm is sounded and the Sultana's servants come rushing in. Nicola gains his horse and reaches Vulturesti more dead than alive. All that night he tosses and moans: "Wretch that I am! Ah, woe, ah, woe is me! Such a woman! Such eyes! God have mercy on me!" He calls Vasili. "Vasili, my faithful one, I have come back covered with shame and disgrace. Vasili, I'll give thee three ducats if thou'lt counsel me once more."

"Yea, master, I know it all. A superb creature, the Sultana; but I also know that my second counsel will be worth five—six ducats."

"Speak, Vasili, speak."

"When my master wins the Sultana, he shall want to give old Vasili six times—yea, twenty times as many ducats. I will bring Cosma Racoare; he will do your work." At the name of "Cosma Racoare" Nicola starts. "Be it so," he mutters.

On the third day after the interview, Cosma appeared. He was clad in a Russian cap well drawn over his close-fitting fustian, heavy boots, and head. His rifle slung across his back and leading his horse, he leisurely and sullenly approached Nicola, who sat under the linden, smoking his pipe.

Vasili whispered into Nicola's ear:

"Look at him, master; that fellow will fetch you the Devil himself."

Nicola stares at Cosma; then the latter says: "God be with you."

As if waking from a dream, Nicola answers: "The same with thee."

"Thou knowest what I ask of thee; well, then, what is thy price? Will fifty ducats satisfy thee?"

"Yes," answers Cosma.

"Vasili, go fetch my money pouch——"

"No, not yet; when I shall have accomplished my task you can pay me. I bring you the woman, you pay me the money."

So saying, Cosma walked into the garden, wrapped his cloak about him and threw himself on the grass.

"He seems the right man for my work; a weight is lifted off my heart," murmurs Nicola.

As night drew near Cosma tightened his stirrups and mounted his horse. "Await my return in the meadow, master," and away he flew like an arrow.

The full moon flickered through the fog, enveloping hills and forest in a gossamer shroud. Only the clatter of the horse's feet broke the dead silence. On reaching Grasini, he found the outer gates locked. After repeated knocklings, a voice from within cried: "Who is there?"

Then, impatient at the delay, he calls out: "It is I, Cosma Racoare."

A light is seen flitting by, then the sound of voices, and at last the bolts are withdrawn. He finds the house door open. "A woman without fear," he mutters. His steps resound through the long, dark corridor. A door is thrown open, and there on its threshold stands Sultana, radiant as before, clad in white, and flowing hair, her hand clutching the scimitar.

"Who art thou? What seekest thou here?" she cried.

"I came to carry you off, and take you to Nicola Zamfiride," answered Cosma.

"So this is thy errand!" she said scornfully. "Beware that the fate of Nicola do not befall thee."

Cosma draws nearer, gives a slight twist to her wrist, and the weapon falls to the ground. She shrinks back in dismay, and calls out: "Gabriel, Nicolai, Foaeder, help!" They came no further than the entrance. Cosma lays hold of her arm, but she frees herself and snatches a dagger from a table.

"What are ye gaping at, ye cowards? Advance and bind him!"

"You are wasting words, fair lady. I admire your courage, but it avails you naught."

Then the servants were heard to whisper terror-stricken:

"How may we bind him? It is Cosma Racoare, the invincible."

"Ye wretches," she shrieks, and in her fury attacks Cosma. He catches her in his arms, takes both hands and pinions them with a leather strap.

"Make room!" he cries, and all step back. Quietly, he lead her out; the while muttering to himself: "What a superb creature! Such eyes! Such pride! Nicola has chosen well."

Sultana glares at her terrified vassals, and realizes her captivity; she meets the dark gaze of her captor.

"Who are you?" she asks.

"I am Cosma Racoare."

She sees fear depicted on the faces of her people. Now she understands all.

Cosma mounts his horse and places Sultana in front of him. Away they speed. To Cosma it seemed as if they were flying through infinite space on a phantom horse. Now and then he would murmur: "Such a glorious woman."

The moon shone radiantly. Sultana turned her head and looked at Cosma. On they sped, her black hair falling in ebony waves about her. She trembles and feels his eyes burning into her soul.

"Why do you look at me? Why do you tremble? Are you cold?"

On, on, they fly. Suddenly, vague shadows are seen flitting hither and thither in the distance.

"What is it?" she whispers, faintly.

"Your master, Nicola, awaits you there."

Suddenly, with a spasmodic wrench, she frees her wrists, and before Cosma has time to regain his wits she takes the reins out of his hands and turns the horse's head. Her left arm clasps his neck, and her head rests upon his breast.

"I will go with you; do not take me to him," she sighed.

With lightning speed they turn back, leaving no trace behind; on, on, to a safe haven in the mountains.—New York Evening Post.

GOOD WORK ON NEWSPAPERS.

Accuracy, Promptness and Graphic Writing the Requisites.

Before a large audience in New Haven, Conn., Melville E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press, lectured a few evenings ago on "The Influence of the Newspaper in American Life."

The first duty of the newspaper, he said, is to give the news honestly and impartially. The days of the Greeleys and the Bowleses are no more; the editorial page has ceased to be of importance. The chief function of the press is the gathering and disseminating of the news.

As an instance of the wonderful strides which have been made in the matter of communication in the past half-century, Mr. Stone said that there are men now living in whose boyhood it took six weeks for news from Rome to reach New York. Contrasted with this is the time taken for the news of the late Pope Leo XIII.'s death to reach this country. It took just eleven minutes from Rome to San Francisco.

Speaking of the integrity of the newspaper men, Mr. Stone said that everybody should be honest to reporters. Accuracy is the first great essential of newspaper work. It is the public which should be sued for libel rather than the editor. In the coming Utopia it will be a crime to tell a lie to an editor. Accuracy is the first great essential, promptness the second, and graphic, but not sensational, writing the third.

Regarding the gradual elimination of the editorial page, Mr. Stone believed this to be a loss. He thought that every well-rounded newspaper needed an intelligent editorial page. He considered the press as a great educational and uplifting factor in life.

Railroad in a Maine Wilderness.

It is expected that by some date early in next December the State of Maine will have another new railroad, a road that is in some respects the most remarkable of any yet built. This is the extension of the Somerset Railroad from Bingham to Birch Point, Moosehead Lake, a distance of close to fifty miles. This road runs through the heart of the Maine wilderness for the greater part of its length, and the scenery to be found along the line is some of the finest in New England. Work on this extension was begun in the summer of 1904. Only about six miles of the road were built during the first summer. The second summer the work was continued, and up to the present time the road has been completed to a point on Moxie Pond, only eighteen miles from Bingham. The contract for the completion of the work has just been awarded and the contractors are given an incentive to hustle the construction in that they will receive a bonus of $10,000 if the work is completed by December 1, 1906. Some thirty-odd miles remain to be built.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Leads Lambs to the Slaughter.

The goat is an important personage in the loading of lambs. When the chute is opened he proceeds up into the car and immediately the lambs follow him. The goat goes into the car and up to the front, where he waits a few minutes and then returns of his own volition to the yards to wait for another car to be backed up, when he again leads another bunch up the chute. The cars are double decked and both decks are filled at the same time, which requires a goat for each deck.

These goats are kept at the stock yards and at the several feeding stations along the route to the markets for reloading. Old Bob, the Pueblo goat, is so well trained that he attends to business as faithfully and intelligently as the men engaged in loading the lambs on the cars.—Monte Viste Journal.

Blind Girl Singer and Athlete.

Helen Masow, a graduate of the State Institute for the Blind at Berkeley, Cal., is well known in musical circles through her fine voice, and she is now creating much interest because of her participation in athletics. She is an expert skater at the skating rink, besides being an ardent horsewoman, riding through the streets and lanes with as much confidence as her more fortunate sisters.

Imitation Precious Stones.

It is now possible to produce in paste an imitation of almost every precious stone which is capable of deceiving the eyes of all but the most expert. Not only is there a superficial resemblance, but a skilfully prepared "paste" stone exhibits the same luster and high index of refraction and dispersion as would a diamond of the first water.

THE THUNDERER'S ENGLISH.

Iron-clad Rules About Style Laid Down by the London Times.

The following are interesting examples of the iron-clad rules laid down by the London Times in its handbook setting forth its code of customs governing the grammar, spelling, punctuation, capitalization and phrasing to be used by its writers.

The reporter for the Thunderer is never allowed to say "under the circumstances." According to the Times, "in the circumstances" is the phrase to be used.

An ordinary sentence written by an amateur newspaper man would probably be ruthlessly blue-penciled by a Times sub-editor. The reporter might, perhaps, write something like this:

"Witness commenced by saying he had met deceased previous to going to Perkins'."

This is not a good sentence, but it would pass muster in most quarters. A Times sub-editor, however, would nearly faint at the sight of it, for, from his point of view, it contains no fewer than seven errors.

To begin with, the Times never refers to "witness," but to "the witness." Secondly, it never uses the word "commence," but always "begin." "By saying he had" suggests an omission—the word "that." "Deceased" is on the Times' black-list, and if reference is made to a person who has died, he is always mentioned as "the late Mr. Blank." From the standpoint of the Times, "previous to" is wrong. On the Times, it must either be "previously to" or simply "before." Furthermore, "to going" is colloquial, and, as such, will not do. The reporter must say "to his going." Finally, "Perkins'" would not be printed, as in using the possessive of a word ending in "s" the Times always adds another "s"—thus: "Perkins's."

When the sentence under consideration appeared in type it would read:

"The witness began by saying that he had met the late Mr. Blank previously to his going to Perkins's."

The word "applause," as frequently used in reports of speeches at a public meeting, is tabooed by the Times, which always employs the word "cheers." Another peculiarity of the Times' parliamentary reports is in the use of the first and third person. An ordinary speech by a private member or a lesser minister will be reported in the third person, thus: "Mr. Smith said that he had listened to the honorable member," etc. Had Mr. Balfour, Mr. Chamberlain or Lord Lansdowne been speaking, the report would be given in the first person.

In writing of a blue-book, most British newspapers begin both words with a capital letter. The Times capitalizes "Blue" alone. To illustrate its peculiarities of spelling, "parsimony" is, according to the Times, "parcimony." The use of the word "I," except as uttered by a specified person, is black-listed, and a Times critic must always write in an "impersonal" fashion.—Saturday Evening Post.

Subscriptions Defined.

The Postmaster-General, with a view to preventing evasions of the law regarding subscriptions and sample copies in second-class publications, has instructed postmasters to recognize the following as bona-fide subscriptions:

1. Direct subscriptions to the publisher by the subscriber when paid for by him.
2. Subscriptions to the agent of the publisher when actually paid by the subscriber himself.
3. Copies regularly sold by newsboys or local agents or news agents.
4. Copies sent as bona-fide exchanges with other publications admitted to the second class, one copy for another.
5. Individual subscriptions desired as bona-fide gifts when paid for by the donors for the benefit of the recipients. Such subscriptions will be limited strictly to those coming within that definition, and will not be permitted to be used as a cover for an advertising or other purpose of the publisher or donor. Under this same rule the publisher may become donor of such gift subscriptions, but in all cases the proportion of these subscriptions to the whole list will be considered and given weight in determining the legitimacy of such lists. In this latter class may be included copies sent to prove insertion of advertisements.

How to Use Brains.

A head man in a manufactory was watching a drayman tugging at a heavy case one day. The drayman's face was red and the muscles of his neck were bulging. The overseer thought it was the right moment to offer practical assistance.

"Wait a minute there," he said. "Let me show you how easy it is when you use a little brain with your muscle." And he grabbed a hook, stuck it into the case, gave a yank, and went sprawling into the gutter under the dray. He got up, looked at the hook and said, "Confound it, the handle comes off!"

"Yes, sir," said the drayman, respectfully. "My brain told me that, and I didn't use it."—Youth's Companion.

Growth and Life of Oyster.

The oyster is not much larger than the head of a fair-sized pin at the end of a fortnight, and at three months about equal to a split pea. At the end of four years' growth it is fit for the market. Oysters live to the age of from twelve to fifteen years. According to one naturalist, these bivalves feed on monads—the most minute form of marine life.

EX-MAYOR CRUMBO RECOMMENDS PE-RU-NA

"My Endorsement of Pe-ru-na is Based on Its Merits."

—Ed. Crumbo.

ED. CRUMBO, ex-Mayor of New Albany, Ind., writes from 511 E. Oak street:

"My endorsement of Peruna is based on its merits.

"If a man is sick he looks anxiously for something which will cure him and Peruna will do the work.

"I know that it will cure catarrh of the head or the stomach, indigestion, headache and any weary or sick feeling.

"It is bound to help anyone, if used, according to directions.

"I also know dozens of men who speak in the highest terms of Peruna and have yet to hear of any one being disappointed in it."

Mr. Crumbo, in a later letter, dated Aug. 25, 1904, says:

"My health is good, at present, but if I should have to take any more medicine I will fall back on Peruna."

Blind People as Gas Consumers.

"When it comes to consuming gas in large quantities blind people take the lead," said an inspector of the gas company. "I know two families where both husband and wife are blind. Every jet is turned on full tilt in their homes at night and is kept going at that rate clear up to 12 o'clock. And that partiality for light is not a whim peculiar to those two couples. All blind people feel that way. They demand the light, and in all private homes and institutions where the blind are cared for the gas bills vouch for their strange fancy."

Women in Our Hospit...

Appalling Increases in the Number of Operations Performed Each Year—How Women Can Avoid Them.

Going through the hospitals in our large cities one is surprised to find such a large proportion of the patients lying on those snow-white beds women and girls, who are either awaiting or recovering from serious operations.

Why should this be the case? Simply because they have neglected themselves. Female troubles are certainly on the increase among the women of this country—they creep upon them unawares, but every one of those patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at left or right of the abdomen, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the organs or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the female organs, and if not heeded the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, do not drag along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from surgical operations.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, bloating (or flatulency), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy.

WE'RE ALL OPPRESSED

Even the Richest of the Multimillionaires Has His Ruler.

The other day a seat in the New York Stock Exchange sold for $80,000. Persons able to pay this price for the privilege of belonging to any organization would probably be considered lucky by the rank and file of mankind. In all large cities the stock exchanges seem to bask in Fortune's most radiant smiles. They have handsome buildings, live in fine houses and ride in automobiles, though they neither work excessively nor spin overtime.

Yet the iron heel of the oppressor is on their necks, grinding them into the dust. The day the seat sold for $80,000 call loans to brokers advanced to six per cent., soon after to one hundred per cent., and the Street was filled with the great wail that a soulless combination of banks was robbing everybody blind. Once when Colonel Gates and his combination of millionaire specialists encountered adverse conditions a still more powerful combination, one of money lenders explained, in a voice trembling with emotion, that concentration of wealth in the hands of a few rapacious individuals had been carried to such a length that a man worth less than a billion scarce dare buy more than a few thousand shares of stock at a time on margin, and the Constitution of the United States was mere waste paper. Mr. Lawson, of Boston, first pointed out that liberty was perishing when his own overflowing apple-cart and Mr. Rogers' two-horse dray. Mr. Rogers engaged in a tug of war with Mr. Harriman, plainly sees a public menace in the power of the Standard Oil Company, which is backing his rival, and Mr. Harriman has grave doubts, of a diplomatic character, concerning the power of Morgan, who is furnishing ammunition to the other side. As for Mr. Rockefeller himself, we know that his friends that a ruthless conspiracy, abetted by a lot of investigating committees, has erected a tyranny more odious than Nero's.

From bootblack to railroad president we are all oppressed, and will be relieved only until the race is not to the swift and the battle to the strong, but time and chance no longer happen to all. Obviously, it is good philosophy to accept it as cheerfully as possible.—Saturday Evening Post.

In the Number of Operations a Year—How Women Have

The following letters cannot fail to bring hope to despairing women.

Miss Ruby Mushrush, of Chicago, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I have been a great sufferer with my periods and female trouble, and about six months ago the doctor, after using instruments on me, said I had an abcess and would have to have an operation. My mother wrote me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a last resort, and I am so glad I did, for it saved me from an operation but entirely well."

Mrs. Alice Berryhill, of [illegible] Street, Chattanooga, Tenn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Three years ago life looked dark to me. I had ulceration and inflammation of the female organs and was in a serious condition.

"My health was completely broken down and the doctor told me that if I were not operated upon I would die within six months. I told him I would have no operation, but would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He tried to influence me to have it but I sent for the medicine that very day and began to use it faithfully. In a few days I felt relief but was not entirely cured until I used it for some time.

"Your medicine is certainly a wonderful one, and has induced several friends and neighbors to use it and I know more than a dozen have used it for female troubles and who to-day are well, happy and strong as I am from using your valuable Compound."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine. You need the best.

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her experience and medicine have restored thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

DECAYED STARCH.

A Food Problem.

An Asheville man tells how right food did that which medicines had failed to accomplish:

"For more than 15 years," he says, "I was afflicted with stomach trouble and chronic indigestion, gas forming in stomach and bowels and giving me much distress. These conditions were undoubtedly due to the starchy food I ate—white bread, potatoes, etc., and could not digest. I grew worse with time, and some years ago, I had an attack which my doctor diagnosed as appendicitis. Finally the surgeon operated on me, however, it was found that my trouble was a ulcer of the pancreas, instead of appendicitis.

"Since that time I have had several severe attacks, suffering death, almost. My last attack was about 3 months ago and I endured untold agonies. My doctor then said that I would have to eat less starchy stuff, so I began the use of Grape-Nuts food for I found it to be pre-digested, and have used same with most gratifying results. It has built me up wonderfully. I gained 10 pounds in the first few weeks that I used Grape-Nuts, my general health is better than ever before, my brain is clearer and my nerves stronger.

"For breakfast and dinner, each, I use two teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts with cream, a small slice of dry toast, an egg soft boiled and a cup of Postum; and I make the evening meal on Grape-Nuts and cream alone—this gives me a good night's rest and I am well again." THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR APRIL 15.

Subject: Jesus' Power Over Disease and Death; Luke vii., 1-17—Golden Text John xi., 25—Memory Verses, 14, 15—Topic: A Great Faith and Helper.

I. The centurion asks aid of Christ (vs. 1-5). 1. "Ended—sayings." The sayings recorded in the preceding chapter and in the sermon just preached. "In the audience." What Christ said He spoke publicly. In secret He said nothing (John 18:20). "Into Capernaum." Where most of His mighty deeds were performed. Yet His miracles failed to produce repentance (Matt. 11:23). 2. "Centurion's servant." A centurion was a Roman officer, ranking with our captain, who had charge of 100 men. This centurion, though a Gentile, was favorable to the Jews, religiously inclined, generous and kind. The servant was probably a slave.

3. "Heard of Jesus." Of His arrival at Capernaum. He must have known of His miracles before this. "Sent—elders." The leading men—the magistrates of Capernaum. "Beseeching Him." Earnestly entreating Him. These elders of the Jews must have been strongly attached to the centurion. "Would come." They evidently thought it would be proper for Him to go to the house, even though the centurion was a Gentile. 4. "Came to Jesus." Distress drives to Jesus, and Jesus comes to those in distress. "Instantly." That is, earnestly and without a moment's delay. "He was worthy." This is what the elders said of the centurion.

5. "Loveth our nation." He was probably a proselyte of the gate—that is, one of those who embraced Judaism on the whole, but without becoming a proselyte of righteousness by accepting circumcision.

II. The centurion's opinion of himself (vs. 6-8). 6. "Jesus went." He was glad to go with them. He is the Savior of the Gentiles as well as the Jews. "Sent friends." This was the second deputation, and it is quite likely that the centurion also came himself. See Matt. 8:5-8. "Trouble not thyself." If he had known Jesus better he would have known that Jesus was anxious to help him. "Not worthy." He was only a Gentile and thus outside of the favored nation. He regarded Jesus as a superior being. 7. "To come unto Thee." He felt as though he could not approach into the presence of one so great and so holy. "But say in a word." He had probably heard a few months before this how Christ had healed the nobleman's son when at a distance from him (John 4:46-54). 8. "Set under authority." That is, under the authority of others. He is confident that Jesus can as easily send an angel to cure this servant of his, as he can send a soldier on an errand.

III. The centurion's faith rewarded (vs. 9, 10).

9. "Marvelled at him." The only other time when Jesus is said to have been astonished is in Mark 6:6, when He marvelled because of unbelief. Christ was not ignorant of the centurion's faith. He knew all about that before a word had been spoken; but He expressed His admiration with a view to make it more conspicuous. "So great faith." Faith is that soul element which enables us to grasp God. It is the medium through which we receive the blessings of the divine life. "In Israel." After the return from the captivity this term was given to all Jews. 10. "Servant whole." The healing took place at a distance from Christ. He could heal by a word as well as by a touch.

IV. The widow's son raised from the dead (vs. 11-17). 11. "The day after." "Soon afterwards."—R. V. "Much people." Jesus was now reaching the height of His popularity. 12. "The gate." Nearly all towns and villages were surrounded by walls as a protection. "Carried out." With the exception of kings, all burials were outside the city. "Much people." Here was a large company of mourners. Nain is approached by a narrow, rocky path; there was only one entrance to the city; the two processions met on the western slope of the hillside. 13. "Had compassion." He did not wait for her to ask for help, for probably she did not know Him. Her needs and sorrows were her silent prayers. The fact that this youth was "the only son of his mother," and that she was a widow would convey to Jewish notions a deeper sorrow than it even does to ours, for they regarded childlessness as a special calamity, and the loss of offspring as a direct punishment for sin. "Weep not." The large company came to weep with her.

14. "Touched." Here again, as in the case of the leper, our Lord sacrificed the mere Levitical ceremonialism, with its rules about uncleanness, to a higher law. "Bier." Jewish coffins were open, so that the dead could be seen; but in the case of the poorer classes there would be no coffin, but merely a board supported by two poles on which the dead would be laid. "I say." Life and death are controlled by the will of this "I." "Arise." At last death has met its Master!

15. "Began to speak." Which proved that he was fully restored.

16. "Came a fear." A sense of solemnity and reverential awe. "Glorified God." The miracle was witnessed by a large company of people, and they all recognized the hand of God on the One who could perform such mighty deeds. "Great prophet." The Jews were at this time expecting Elijah, Jeremiah, or one of the great prophets to appear.

17. "This rumor." It appears that the report of this miracle spread throughout all Palestine; it reached the ears of John the Baptist who was imprisoned at Castle Macherus.

A LIVING DEATH.

Vividly Described by a Citizen of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Andrew Johnson, 411 West Twelfth St., Sioux Falls, S. D., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. My doctor, from a careful analysis of the urine and a diagnosis of my case, had told me I could not live six weeks. I was struck down in the street with kidney trouble, and for a whole year could not leave the house. I lost flesh, my eyes failed me, I bloated at times, my back hurt and I suffered a living death. There seemed no hope until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Then I began to improve. The pain left gradually, the swellings subsided, I gained appetite and weight, and to make a long story short, I got well!"

The novel recuperative boiler lately awarded a prize by the Paris Academy of Sciences is able to supply steam for several hours after the fire has been extinguished. It is the idea of M. Maurice, engineer-in-chief of the French marine, and it depends upon the heat storage of a mixture of salts having a great specific heat, this mixture being placed around the tubular system of the boiler and having its temperature raised to about 450 degrees C. during the firing. This method of storage offers great economy in both weight and space over the old plan of using reservoirs of superheated water. After the accumulation is used a new reserve quickly follows the starting of the fire, and the advantages are believed to be specially important for the marine and for electric stations.

BOX OF WAFERS FREE—NO DRUGS—CURES BY ABSORPTION.

Cures Belching of Gas—Bad Breath and Bad Stomach—Short Breath—Bloating—Sour Eructations—Irregular Heart, Etc.

Take a Mull's Wafer any time of the day or night, and note the immediate good effect on your stomach. It absorbs the gas, disinfects the stomach, kills the poison germs and cures the disease. Catarrh of the head and throat, unwholesome food and overeating make bad stomachs. Scarcely any stomach is entirely free from taint of some kind. Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers will make your stomach healthy by absorbing foul gases which arise from the undigested food and by re-enforcing the lining of the stomach, enabling it to thoroughly mix the food with the gastric juices. This cures stomach trouble, promotes digestion, sweetens the breath, stops belching and fermentation. Heart action becomes strong and regular through this process.

Discard drugs, as you know from experience they do not cure stomach trouble. Try a common-sense (Nature's) method that does cure. A soothing, healing sensation results instantly.

We know Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers will do this, and we want you to know it. This offer may not appear again.

HANDS RAW WITH ECZEMA.

Suffered For Ten Years—Spread to Body and Limbs—Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

"I had eczema on my hands for ten years. At first it would break out only in winter. Then it finally came to stay. I had three good doctors to do all they could, but none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, together with the Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle I was entirely well. I had a good appetite and was fleshier than I ever was. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to get the Cuticura Remedies, and get well quicker than all the doctors in the State could cure you. Mrs. M. E. Most Dying Men Give No Sign of Care for Future

By Dr. William Osler.

As a rule, man dies as he has lived, uninfluenced, practically, by the thought of a future life. I have careful records of about five hundred death beds, studied particularly with reference to the modes of death and the sensations of the dying.

—Ninety suffered bodily pain and distress of some sort or another, eleven showed mental apprehension, two positive terror, one expressed spiritual exaltation, one bitter remorse. The great majority gave no sign, one way or the other; like their birth, their death was a sleep and a forgetting. The preacher was right: in this matter man hath no pre-eminence over the beast—"as one dieth so dieth the other."

As we travel farther from the East our salvation lies in keeping our faces toward the rising sun and in letting the fates drag us, like Cacus his oxen, backward into the cave of oblivion. I would urge the clinical physician as he travels farther from the East to look well to his companions, to see that they are not of his own age and generation. To keep his mind receptive, plastic and impressionable, he must travel with the men who are doing the work of the world, the men between the ages of twenty-five and forty.

The President has pardoned John W. Pace, of Dadeville, Ala., convicted of peonage.

The bill authorizing a reorganization of the medical corps of the army was passed.

Secretary of State Root urged Congress to provide for payment of just foreign claims against the United States.

The Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill, carrying $30,000,000, nearly $700,000 less than the last appropriation bill, was passed, after two weeks' consideration.

The State Department announces that it is now practically impossible for former Turkish subjects to regain entrance into their country.

OUR ADOPTED ISLANDS.

The inaugural of Henry C. Ide as Governor-General took place at Manila with civic and military display. Three thousand troops attended.

Since the native Judges at Manila recently acquitted the editors accused of libeling Colonel Baker the native press has been severely criticising the constabulary, indirectly condemning the Government and praising native journalism.

Gomez, a labor agitator, of Manila, who is affiliated with the Renacimiento, threatens to eliminate the American planters by preventing them from obtaining laborers.

All provision for fortifications in the island possessions was eliminated from the fortifications appropriation bill.

Governor Beekman Winthrop, of Porto Rico, sailed for New York in response to a call from a committee of the House of Representatives, which desires to confer with him regarding legislation for the island.

DOMESTIC.

Bernarr MacFadden, publisher of health periodicals, was convicted, in New York City, on Anthony Comstock's obscene beauty show poster charge, and sentence was suspended.

The residents of Juneau have raised twenty tons of provisions for the sufferers by fire at Wrangel, Alaska.

Accompanied by her children, Ethel, Archie and Quentin, Mrs. Roosevelt sailed from Fernandina, Fla., for West Indian waters on a cruise of ten days in the yacht Mayflower.

The Sugar Trust and the New York Central Railway were indicted in New York City for rebating.

George P. Finnigan, of Chenango County, obtained from Judge Greenbaum an order to explore the Equitable's so-called "yellow dog" accounts in the vaults of the Mercantile Trust Company, New York City.

The Ohio Legislature adopted resolutions asking Congress to investigate charges against Estes G. Rathbone in connection with the Cuban postal scandal.

The Theodore Roosevelt, intended to be the fastest steamer on the great lakes, was launched at Toledo, Ohio.

The receipts of the engagement in Pittsburg of the Metropolitan opera company were not quite $50,000, although $80,000 had been expected.

The $100,000 dam at Alcova, Wyoming, erected by the Government reclamation service, has been washed away by the flooding of the North Platte River.

Justice Dowling granted Mr. Jerome's motion for a special Grand Jury in New York City to investigate insurance matters in May.

It was declared that the De Forest Wireless Telegraph Company had sent 572 words from the Manhattan Beach station to Dursey Head, Ireland.

A bill designed to make betting on horse racing a felony in New York was killed in Senate Committee at Albany.

Masonic Temple, the largest business block in Dover, N. H., was burned. Loss upward of $200,000.

The Philadelphia mint will be closed for three months during the coming fiscal year because of a decrease of $50,000 in the appropriation for wages.

Daniel Strauss, who fought under the French flag in two wars and under the Stars and Stripes in the American Civil War, committed suicide at New York, where he was a doorman in the Police Department.

Morris Buck, who shot and killed Mrs. Canfield, the wife of the oil millionaire, was sentenced, in Los Angeles, Cal., to be hanged June 1.

It was decided to perform an autopsy in the prosecution of Albert T. Patrick, now in Sing Sing (N. Y.) prison awaiting execution, on the bodies of two paupers treated with embalming fluid similar to that used on the body of W. M. Rice.

FOREIGN.

France is said to be preparing to enforce the maximum tariff law against Venezuela.

A German syndicate is reported seeking to buy Fanning Island, in the Pacific, where there is a British cable station.

Advices from London say that a British campaign against Abyssinian tribesmen who have attacked natives in Somaliland is expected.

Chancellor von Buelow, of Germany, called the reports that he would resign "foolish."

Count Witte sent this message to the American people: "Russian will rise from this crisis regenerated, greater than ever."

A dispatch from Harbin to Moscow said that hostilities were imminent between Chinese and Russian troops.

The elections in St. Petersburg passed without disorder. It is generally conceded that the Constitutional Democrats have won a sweeping victory.

A band of Russian students unsuccessfully attempted to rob a bank at Kharaboff.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones: in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1 50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

New Russian Loan.

Paris.—The official confirmation of the report that the Russian financiers and French bankers have settled on the terms for the new Russian loan was received almost too late Saturday to affect the Bourse. The terms agreed upon are as already cabled, namely, $400,000,000 in 5 per cent bonds at about 88, the issue to be April 26. France will subscribe for $200,000,000. In official and financial circles the terms are considered sufficiently attractive to insure oversubscription. Austria's participation in the loan is regarded as remarkable, this being the first occasion she had to subscribe to a Russian loan. The French government has given strong support to the efforts of the Russian financiers, thus assuring the success of the loan.

Big Cotton Fire Narrowly Averted.

Gadsden, Ala.—A serious conflagration was narrowly averted by the prompt and diligent work of the fire department. Twenty bales of cotton belonging to J. H. Arnold & Co., which were placed on Third street, near the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad tracks, and adjoining the big building of the Etowah Cotton Warehouse Company, to await shipment, were ignited, it is supposed, by boys with matches. In a few minutes the entire lot of cotton was a blazing mass. The department quickly responded to the alarm and soon had fire under control after a hard, but, short, fight. The loss to Arnold & Co. is estimated at about $500, fully covered by insurance. The cotton warehouse of the Etowah company has fully 1,000 bales of cotton stored therein, and should the fire by any means have gotten inside the building the loss would have been exceedingly heavy.

Italy Rejoices as Sun Reappears.

Naples.—Vesuvius continues to grow quieter, and the activity of the volcano is greatly reduced. The discharge from the crater is light. Search of the devastated region is now general. The reappearance of the sun has filled the people with new hope, and many of the refugees are returning to their former homes to take part in the work of clearing the country, as they are anxious to save the remnants of their property. While the sunlight has proved a great blessing, it has had one bad effect, as it has quickened the decomposition of the bodies of the victims of the eruption.

Limestone Court About to Adjourn.

Athens, Ala.—Circuit court is about winding up its duties for the spring term, with but little done. The grand jury returned twenty-five true bills. A few old cases were gotten off the docket. Judge Speake says he will hold a non-jury term of the court here in September to get rid of the pleadings and get cases ready for trial at the October term, and that he intends to put things through at that term. There is a great deal of kicking among the taxpayers at the costs of the courts and the little busines that is transcated.

Kentucky Killing.

Cloyd's Landing, Ky.—News has reached here of the killing of Campbell Hansford by L. B. Goffer, his brother-in-law, at Avis, in the southern part of Russell county. The tragedy occurred at the home of Goffer, where, it is said, the two men, having first filled up on "white lightning," became engaged in a fight over some trivial matter. While the fight was in progress Goffer pulled a pistol and shot Hansford twice in the breast, causing almost instant death. Goffer has been arrested, and is now in the county jail at Jamestown. He claims to have killed Hansford in self-defense.

To Kill Roosevelt.

Zurich, Switzerland.—The police have arrested an Italian anarchist named Cuettra, who during a drinking bout boasted that he was on his way to America to kill President Roosevelt. Physicians who examined the man declared him insane and he has been incarcerated in an asylum.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Pittsburg's epidemic of typhoid, while apparently decreasing in the daily number of cases reported, appears to be spreading to the surrounding municipalities.

Peasants Will Block Legislation.

Moscow.—Dmitri Shipoff, the well-known zemstovist, in a pessimistic interview attributes the victory of the constitutional democrats at the polls to resentment caused by the government repressions and by the failure of the people to obtain promised liberties. He predicts that parliament will not be capable of doing constructive work owing to predominance of the peasants, who will bring forward ultra radical agrarian questions, and that at the same time the ultra conservatives will oppose everything touching the prerogatives of the emperor.

Is the Fine and Imprisonment Imposed on Greene and Gaynor.

JUDGE SPEER DOES HIS DUTY.

In Sentencing the Men Convicted of Embezzlement and Conspiracy to Defraud.

Savannah, Ga.—Benjamin D. Greene and John F. Gaynor were sentenced by Judge Emory Speer in the federal court to serve four years in the federal prison at Atlanta and to pay each a fine of $575,794.90, the amount they are charged with having embezzled.

Upon one indictment the sentence was two years and on each of the other indictments four years but the court directed that the sentence might all be served concurrently, which reduced the term to four years. Thus, with the allowance of three months off of each year during which the behavior of the prisoners may be granted, the sentence reduced to three years.

The fine need not be paid if on completing the sentence the prisoners make affidatvit that they are not possessed of more than $20. In lieu of paying the fine they then may serve thirty days longer.

Counsel for the prisoners announce that an appeal will be taken. An order of court grants ten days for the filing of a bill of exceptions, upon which a motion for a new trial will be predicated.

Jurge Speer in sentencing the prisoners said in part:

"The most painful judicial duty is the imposition of a sentence to penal servitude. This is peculiarly true when those convicted are men of fine intelligence, men of affairs, men who have had the opportunities of education, or who have been trained by the teachings of experience. Peculiarly painful is that duty when the convicted have filled positions of responsibility, of honor and of trust. All of these conditions are present in the duty before me. One of the prisoners has been distinguished by his state, has been an important official of one of the great political parties, a man of large acquaintance, perhaps with multitudes of earnest friends. The other is a graduate of distinction of our great military academy at West Point, and he at one time was a captain in that famous corps of engineers whose roster bears such names as Robert E. Lee and George Gordon Meade, a corps whose record was stainless before the occurrences which have been developed in evidence here.

"I am told that it has been cynically said by a famous New Yorker that no man who has a million dollars can be convicted of crime in America. The verdict of this jury of plain, clear-sighted, honest Americans, has fashied such pessimism. Of that jury it may be said that there is perhaps not a man who cannot trace his ancestry to a patriot of the revolution which established American independence. It is true, as I have often declared, that to the homogenous Americanism of these southern states, when they are plainly shown their duty, our country may ever look with confidence for the enforcement of its laws and for the maintenance of its institutions. Nor can it be questioned that these institutions are in jeopardy that these institutions are in jeodardy as proven in this case, could go unwhipped of justice."

Anarchists to Meet in America.

Geneva, Switzerland.—There is good authority for the statement that a secret international congress of anarchists will be held in America in the early part of June. Seven well-known anarchists have left Switzerland separately and by different routes for America.

Gigantic Swindles.

London.—Jabez Spencer Balfour, formerly a financial magnate and a member of parliament, who was sentenced to fourteen years' imprisonment in 1895 for extensive frauds in connection with the Lands Allotment Company, has been released from the Parkhurst prison, on the Ise of Wight. For the past two years Balfour has acted as librarian of the prison. It is said that he probably will return to the Argentine Republic, from where h was extradited before his trial, and where it is said he holds considerable interests in different trade concerns It is estimated that the poor middle class of England lost about $30,000,000 by Balfour's swindling operations.

Boy's Prank Causes Fatal Stampede in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill.—During a panic which followed a false cry of fire while 400 persons were participating in the Easter eve services in St. Ludmilla's roman Catholic church three children and one woman were killed and a score of others injured, several seriously.

The majority of the worshippers were women and children, and in a few minutes all were in a tangled mass, fighting to escape from the supposed danger. Many jumped through the windows, but the greater portion crowded to the central aisle. The extra weight proved too much for the floor, and some of the beams supporting it broke.

The cracking of the timbers increased the fright, and every one became panic-stricken, men, women and children fighting desperately to reach the outside. When the church was cleared three children were lying dead in the aisles, and one woman was so badly hurt that she died while being removed to the hospital.

GREAT SATISFACTION

Over Russia's Attitutde on the Peace Conference.

Washington, D. C.—An important step toward agreement upon the date for the reassembling of the second conference at The Hague was made when Secretary Root informed the Russian government that the convenience of the United States would be served by the selection of any date after September 20 next. This date was mentioned because it was calculated it would mark the conclusion of the Pan-American conference at Rio and would give the delegates there opportunity to attend at The Hague in cases where they were engaged to represent their governments in both conferences.

The greatest satisfaction is expressed at the readiness with which the Russian government accepted the suggestion from the state department for the designation of a later date than July for the conference. An important objection to an immediate convention was connected with the proposed representation of the South and Central American states in the conference. These states found upon an inspection of the invitation to the conference that they would not enter at once upon an equality with those that had signed the original Hague treaty, no steps having been taken to give effect to article 60 of The Hague convention, which says:

"The conditions upon which the powers who were not represented at the first international peace conference can adhere to the present convention shall form the subject of a subsequent agreement among the contracting powers."

The South and Central American states invited to the second conference make it condition of attendance that the signatory powers of the first convention shall give effect to the article quoted and provide means for their adherence to the first convention before the second meeting, all of which will consume some time and probably the coming summer will be consumed before this can be completed.

Not This Summer.

The Hague.—It is stated here on good authority that it is now certain that the peace conference will not meet here this summer.

Washington, D. C.—The promised detailed copy of the program of the subjects proposed by the Russian government for discussion at the second Hague conference has been received at the state department. It has been carefully studied by Secretary Root, and he will then turn it over to the American delegates to the conference for their consideration with a view to the suggestion of additions or modifications to meet the ideas of this country.

Mutinous Portuguese.

Lisbon.—The mutinous spirit has spread to the crew of the Portuguese ironclad Vasco De Gama. The authorities have taken precautions to prevent a further outbreak. A number of the crew of the cruiser Don Carlos, who mutinied April 11, have been imprisoned.

Almost Civil War.

Warsaw.—The religious troubles between the Catholics and Mariavits, the new Catholic sect, in many places in Poland are assuming a very serious phase. Indeed the situation has almost reached the dignity of civil war. At Luptsi 3,000 Mariavits attacked 2,000 Catholics, and a regular pitched battle followed, during which three men were killed and forty wounded. At Lahno constant skirmishes are in progress, and several persons have been killed or wounded. Last week at Chwartek the Mariavits, who are in the majority there, took possession of a church and insisted on the reappointment of a priest who was dismissed by the Catholics.

NEWS FROM ALL OVER ALABAMA.

CRIME DECREASING.

Federal Grand Jury Discharged by Judge Boarman at Huntsville.

Huntsville, Ala.—The United States grand jury has been discharged by Judge Boarman after making its final report and returning seventeen true bills. Six cases were investigated and no indictments returned, while in two cases the principal witnesses did not appear and the cases were left for the next grand jury. The number of indictments found was smaller than in many years past in this division of the United States court. The grand jury concluded its report as follows:

"We are glad to report that from our observation and investigation of the number of cases heretofore compared with that now submitted to the grand jury there is a decrease in the commission of crime against the laws of the United States in this division."

Alabama Educational Association.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Alabama Educational Association, which adjourned after being in session for three days, will make a determined fight to do away with the uniform text book law in the state.

Of the dozen or more prominent educators of the state who have spoken at the convention practically every one has made an attack on the system. The law establishing a uniform school book in the state was passed at the last meeting of the legislature, and it has already been found to be very expensive.

One of the main objects of this law was a supposed reduction of the expense to the school children, but it is claimed now by those at the head of educational matters in the state that the system really results in increased expense to the children. This is explained by President Striplin in his annual address, when he says that where there is a reduction of 15 cents in the cost of the book to the children there is a reduction of 25 to 35 cents in the cost of manufacture, resulting in a very inferior grade of book. The books, according to the educators, do not last and children have to be constantly purchasing new books.

The other important matter taken up at the meeting was the demand for better school buildings and also for a general improvement in the class of the school property. This matter has been up at the meetings before, but the members of the association determined at this meeting to push it even harder this year than last year. It has resulted in much improvement in the appearance of school buildings and grounds in the state of Alabama.

It is almost certain that the state association will not take up the fight for compulsory education this year, but the matter was discussed freely at the sessions of the association. The general opinion was that the matter should not be made an issue in state politics until the association had more funds at its command with which to make a fight. Judging from the sentiment of a majority of those who expressed themselves, the educators of the state stand almost solidly for compulsory education, and when the fight commences all those forces will be massed on one side almost without a break in the ranks.

City's Firm Hand.

Birmingham, Ala.—The recent action of the city officials in filing 101 deeds in the probate court conveying to the city a considerable amount of property which was sold for taxes and street improvement assessments is taken to mean that a firm policy will be assumed by the city in collecting its debts. This property was duly advertised and sold by the city treasurer. The property was bought in by the city, and the deeds transfer the property to the mayor. Before any of the property can be sold by the original owners all indebtedness will have to be paid and the deeds made out again in favor of the original owners.

Cherokee County Bank.

Centre, Ala.—A movement is now on foot to organize a bank, to be known as the Cherokee County Bank. The movement is backed by the merchants and well-to-do farmers, who are subscribing liberally to the capital stock for the proposed institution.

State Medical Association.

Birmingham, Ala.—Preparations have been completed for the entertainment of the Alabama Medical Association in this city Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. There will be 300 or 400 physicians in attendance, and this promises to be the largest meeting of the association ever held.

THE SHOPPER'S EXPERIENCE.

The Conversation Necessary to the Purchase of a Woman's Hat.

(She enters the millinery department.)

"Hats, please. I am just looking—oh, you are busy, too? Dear me! I've asked three persons to show hats and they are all busy.

"Floorman, I want to be waited upon at once. Thank you—but not that cross-looking girl. Yes, that one will do. You see, I want some one who is willing to show me, whether I buy or not, and who understands my style. She must give me her undivided attention, as it is so hard to try to shop when a clerk is talking to her friends about her beaux or—or something."

To saleswoman:

"Please show me something dressy—but not too much so. Well, you know I want it for evenings, and other occasions, too. I suppose they are all marked down at this time of the year. The paper said they were cut in two—I mean the prices, not the hats, though it wouldn't hurt some of them. I remember a big hat I had once, and one windy day—

"I suppose you are busy. Yes, I'll try them on. I like to see the different effects on me, even if I don't buy.

"Now, would you advise a large or a small hat? I think I will look at both kinds. No, not the white one; it would be too trying on my complexion. Not a black one—it's too somber. Not that one—it's old enough for my mother. I should think you could tell me what I want. You don't seem to understand what is becoming to me. You must make a study of my face. Yes, I suppose you are too busy to know every one, but, you see, I buy all my things here and you ought to know a regular customer.

"Certainly, it must be imported. American hats always have a home-made look. My husband likes to have me get the best. He says it is the cheapest in the end, for if I don't like a thing I talk so much—that is, I am apt to mention it, and he can't work unless it is quiet.

"That won't do. The crown is too high, and I would look taller than my husband. Of course, I can't expect you to know his height, but I thought I would mention that he is a trifle shorter than I. I always wear French heels, but I have to have my hats low. Let me see, that violet hat. I had a beautiful one just that color the year I was married, and my husband thought I was stunning. Thirty-five dollars? I thought you said they were marked down. I never am sure when clerks are telling the truth—that is, I suppose you don't always know. I try to be nice to persons who wait upon me, for I can get so much more attention. Yes, I'll look at that one."—Chicago News.

A., B. & A. Takes Option.

Talladega, Ala.—The news is out that the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad has closed an option on the branch railroad from Pyriton to Ashland, and this week purchased ten acres of land of J. A. White in that town, which will probably be used for a terminal. This company has already purchased the Eastern Railway of Alabama to Pyriton from this city, and this deal will give it a road into Ashland, as well as the one under construction into Lineville.

FACTS ABOUT THE PHILIPPINES.

The Islands of the Archipelago Number 3141.

The islands of the Philippine archipelago number 3141 in all, with a total area of 115,026 square miles and a coast line more than twice the length of the coast line of the main United States.

Luzon and Mindanao are the two largest islands, containing 40,969 and 36,292 square miles respectively. Luzon contains 35 per cent. and Mindanao 31 per cent. of the total area of the archipelago.

The total population of the islands is 7,635,426, of which Luzon has one-half and Mindanao only 7 per cent.

The density of population is 67 to the square mile, while in the United States 26 per square mile is an outside figure.

The 7,635,426 population includes 6,987,686 Filipinos, 41,035 Chinese, 8135 Americans, 3888 Spaniards, besides Japanese, English, German, French and other nationalities.

Of persons over ten years of age the literacy record shows that 2,702,093 can neither read nor write; 1,002,588 can both read and write, but only 76,627 have received superior education.

It is more than 1100 miles from the far northern to the far southern island; nine of the islands have areas ranging from 1000 to 10,000 square miles, seventy-three range from only 10 to 100 square miles and 262 run from 1 to 10 square miles; 2775 islands, or seven-eighths of the total number, are of less than one square mile area each.

Names have been given to 1668 of the islands.

Volcanoes are numerous but all except twelve are extinct. Mount Apo, the highest peak in the Philippines, 10,312 feet, is an active volcano, as is also Mayon, 7916 feet high, the most perfect volcano in existence in the world.

Philippine commerce with the United States in 1905 calendar year was:

	1905.	Inc. over '04.
Exported to United States	$15,567,000	$5,342,000
Imported from United States	5,739,000	699,000

Free trade between the Philippines and the United States would increase those totals largely, to our mutual benefit.

Philippine commerce with all the world in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1905, exclusive of gold and silver and Government supplies, was:

Exports	$32,352,615
Imports	30,876,350
Total, merchandise	$63,228,965

Compared with 1904 the exports show an increase of $2,101,988 and the imports a decrease of $2,344,411, a total difference in favor of the islands of $4,446,399.

The Philippine exports in 1905 fiscal year consisted of:

	Exported.	Taken by U. S.
Hemp	$22,146,241	$12,954,515
Sugar	4,977,026	2,618,487
Tobacco	1,999,193	6,820
Copra	2,095,355	14,425
All other	1,134,800	73,779

Philippine customs collections in 1905 fiscal year were:

Import duties	$6,664,431
Export duties	1,300,666
Total	$7,965,097

By world divisions the Philippine commerce of 1905 fiscal year was:

	Exp'd to.	Imp'd from.
North America	$15,698,736	$5,782,982
Europe	11,584,551	10,521,282
Asia	4,585,469	13,202,879
Oceania	449,233	1,365,662
Africa	22,126	3,540
South America		12,719

Great Britain took $8,291,000 of the exports and supplied $4,848,000 of the imports, followed by Hong Kong with $2,359,000 and $2,102,000 respectively. The next best foreign customers of the islands were, in the order named, France, Spain, China, British East Indies, Japan and Australasia.

Of this commerce American vessels carried only $3,154,000 of the imports and $3,606,000 of the exports, in all only a trifle more than 10 per cent.—New York Sun.

Breslau's Mosquito War.

The director of the Breslau, Germany, hygienic institute has announced the results of his mosquito-war experiments. The first object was to destroy egg-bearing females, which were found in large numbers in Breslau cellars. Fumigation was used, and the number falling on the papers placed on the floors often ran up to over 2000 mosquitoes. For destroying the larvae in pools of water fifty grains of "larvicile" was put into a cubic meter of water and poured into the pool. This kills all the larvae within half an hour, but does not harm frogs and fish. To destroy the pupae is another question which will receive attention from now on. Breslau seems to be the first city in Europe to wage a systematic war against this plague, and other German cities suffering from mosquitoes are preparing to imitate their plans.

Habits of Kings.

The sovereigns of Europe have all their own peculiar haults. For example, King Edward has a way of passing his finger backward and forward under his chin; the German Emperor twirls his moustache with energy, while the king of Italy strokes his gently and affectionately; the Emperor of Austria combs out his whiskers, and the Czar frequently passed his hand over the top of his head.—London Modern Society.

Curious Method of Fishing.

Very curious is the method of fishing followed by the Chinese in the Straits of Malacca. The fisherman lets down from the side of the boat a screen of white canvas stretched on wood. The shoal of fish mistake this for some floating obstruction and try to leap over it, with the result that the fish jump into the boat and are thus captured. This method is employed by Malays in their waters.

DELINQUENT TAXES.

The delinquent tax notice appears in this issue and is the ONLY OFFICIAL list published in the county and is put in THE UNION by Tax Collector T. J. Hubbard, under the authority conferred upon him by the code of Alabama. THE UNION is recognized by the ELECTED OFFICIALS of Chilton county as THE county paper.

JUST A VOTER.

We've had so many inquiries about "Why don't 'Just a Voter' come again?" that we are glad to be able to say that he will have something for you all next week. He's been busy with his crop; that is what has kept him still so long. You know, a chap must live.

Clanton, Ala., April 16, 1906.

Editor Union: Please give me space in your valuable paper to say a few words. I wish to say first that I am proud of our county paper, THE UNION, and I am here to tell you that I am not the only one who is delighted with THE UNION. Our people are singing its praises all over Chilton county. I am glad to know that THE UNION has flourished in the face of all opposition, for which we should thank and praise our gallant editor. It would have been a difficult matter to have secured any one else to own and publish THE UNION who would, or could, have raised it to the high standard which it now enjoys. I do hope and sincerely believe that the friends of THE UNION will use their best efforts to assist the honorable and worthy editor by subscribing to The Union and paying promptly for same, and thus enable him to continue the publication of The Union and retain the high reputation it has established in three years only.

I wish to say to my Republican friends that we ought to feel encouraged at our progress. We are receiving some good lawyers in our ranks, also some good merchants. "Still there is room; let them come."

Now, Mr. Editor, I wish to say a few words in regard to our town (Clanton). I am glad to note that there are several substantial buildings going up, consisting of dwellings, store houses, etc. The Duke Bros. will soon be ready to start their machinery. Electric lights will be flashing in our town soon. Water works will follow later on. Mr. N. A. Kicker is fitting up office room for a first-class dentist, who will locate here about the first of May. Three cheers for The Union and its many readers. REPUBLICAN.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Bright, crisp Easter weather. People busy all the day, while the lone voice of the whippoorwill cheers the night.

Mrs. Samantha Waldrup, an aged resident of this community, fell from a wagon several weeks ago and is still feeble from the effects of the fall.

There was preaching at the Freeman school house Sunday by S. D. Posey.

Delphus Mann, of Kalona, was in this community Sunday.

Doubtless many readers of THE UNION will be pained to receive the sad intelligence of the death of Miss Mary Storey, of Cincinnati. She was known in Chilton county, having conducted a series of meetings at Lomax only a few years ago. On the night of March 23d the precious life went out and her work was done. She was a woman of great faith. It is related of her by the press that during the last Christmas convention at the Bible school of Cincinnati, while she was speaking of how wonderfully God had answered prayer, the power of God came down until she danced before Him. So another noble woman is gone. A certain writer has said, "Let us attend to our books and farms and let the politicians attend to their affairs." We doubt not in the least the honesty, good will and sincerity of the writer in giving this wholesome council. He means good. We admire him. Attending to books is just what is needed, as that will assist the people in keeping out of the clutches of the politicians. Keep people in ignorance and they are an easy prey for the political trickster. Attention to books helped to bring the great movement of the Farmers' Alliance. Attention to books is destined to break the hitherto solid South, abundant evidence was manifested along that line last year when the President came South. Attention to books has helped the people to look with contempt on the politician's cry in the South of "Nigger! Nigger! Nigger!" We are living in a time when many are running to and fro and knowledge is being increased. This is no time to enjoy ignorance. The people are awake and politicians can't lead them as of yore.

One man in Chilton county says his hope of socialism is based on the fact that no one will be a socialist until he understands socialism. Attention to books unfurls the standard of truth clearer all the time until we have reached the condition described by D. S. Warner.

"Wake ye nations, gather near,
Heaven's truth you now must hear;
By it stand approved in white,
Or condemned in Heaven's light."

ONE OF THE BOYS.

WEST CHILTON.

Editor Union:

Health of this community is very good at present. Corn planting is all the go, and some few have planted cotton. J. H. Green and family were visitors at L. O. Burnett's Saturday night. J. A. Langston and family spent Saturday night at F. M. Green's. Our local union is progressing nicely; three new members initiated at last meeting. I saw a piece from Pletcher in last week's Union about the old-time singing; we had a three days' meeting in the old books at the Primitive Baptist Church last Friday, Saturday and Sunday a week ago. I was there on Sunday. We had a good singing and a mighty good dinner. The Misses Lily and Lucy McCary paid W. A. Green's family a visit last Wednesday. Willis Green, of Active, is coming down the road quite often, so I expect some judge will have to fill out a license before long. Yours for the best. "LITTLE J."

TURN ROUND.

Dear Editor:

Health of this community good at present. P. W. Moore and wife spent Sunday with Mrs. Moore's father, J. W. Sears. Elzie Kelley seems to be all smiles nowadays. There was a nice little crowd at J. W. Sears' Sunday, and all enjoyed themselves. Miss Annie Kelley is visiting her sister, Mrs. Rushie Harris at Falakto. Eddie Driver, who has been spending several months in Atlanta, is now in our midst. Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Bussey were at the debate Saturday night and report a nice time. From the way T—M— travels route 4 Judge Reynolds will have to make out a license pretty soon. Miss Ruth Moore spent Saturday and Sunday with her grandfather, J. W. Sears. Well, as this is my first attempt, I'll ring off, but if this misses the waste basket I'll come again.

"SOMEBODY'S SWEETHEART."

WYLAM.

These sudden changes in the weather seem to be causing a lot of sickness around here. A little child of Mrs. Porter died today of pneumonia. Aaron Parker, of Lomax, visited his sister M. J. Hays, Saturday. Mrs. J. L. Mitchell, who has been away in Cullman and Hartselle, has returned. We are glad to see her back. Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Sorrell, of Thorsby, were unexpected visitors to their children here Sunday. Mrs. A. Riggins is right sick, but we hope it will not be serious. Mrs. Sorrell and little Luther are ill, but her sister is a capable nurse. It is like "One of the Boys" said in last week's Union: If you want a good paper and an interesting paper that gives all the news, subscribe for The Union. If once you get it you will never be without it. Oh! that was such a sweet piece last week from Mrs. H. T. Littlejohn. We believe your loss was heaven's gain, so weep not. We sure had a pretty Easter, and every one seemed to enjoy it.

PAPA'S PET.

EAST BESSIE.

Editor Union:

Here I am again, after a long absence, with a few happenings in this settlement. People are rushing their work this fine weather. The "Sunbeam Society" opened its doors and invited the people to come and see the exercises. It was very good, and I thank the little ones for their kind invitation. N. B. Posey and family returned home from E. G. Cofer's last Sunday. Mrs. Posey has been sick there for a week, but was able to be carried home. I wish her a speedy recovery. J. M. Foshee and wife spent Easter at J. D. Terry's. Come again, "Old Man." Success to the editor and The Union's readers.

BRIGHT STAR.

JEMISON.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space to say a few words about the Farmer's Union in Chilton county. After traveling over the greater portion of the county, as well as corresponding with a number of the unions, I want to say that I find the union in a good, healthy condition and doing a good work along the educational line, also in diversification, with a strong membership and still growing. According to previous appointment "ye scribe" met the good people of Corinth community and organized them into a local of the F. E. & C. U. of A., with the following named brethren as officers: President, E. A. Norris; vice-president, W. B. Jones; secretary, A. L. Robinson; chaplain, E. L. Jones; doorkeeper, G. W. Jones; conductor, B. J. Barron—whom I recommend to the brethren in this county as full-fledged union men, believing from the interest taken that they are union men to the core. With many good wishes for the new and old members and for The Union editor, and hoping every farmer will decrease his acreage in cotton and increase his acreage in corn, peas, potatoes, peanuts, pumpkins and pigs, and so farm in the interest of home, Katie and the babies, I am respectfully yours,

J. W. SORRELL.

IN MEMORIAM.

A loving tribute to the memory of W. D. Courtney, aged 68 years, son of Dr. Curtice Courtney, who departed this life at 8:30 a. m. Thursday, April 12, 1906. Then it was the pleasure of the good Lord to send him welcome home to heaven, where parting and sighing are no more. At the last moments of his life, with his old mother, wife, children and many good and loving friends standing round his silent bedside, it was then "the Father in His wisdom called the boon his love had given, and though in earth the body lies, the soul is safe in heaven." Relatives and his good, loving friends, weep not in grief and sorrow; you will all meet on that bright tomorrow. The deceased leaves a mother, 87 years old, a wife and thirteen children. He was father of twenty-three children, with twenty-seven grandchildren. He married three times—first, Mary Ann Wilson, of Jefferson county, Arkansas; second, Carrie Fryer, of Nash county, North Carolina; third, Elizabeth Kicker, of Chilton county, Alabama. To his weeping and loving friends: Not all of life to live, nor all of death to die; but a preparation for that better world on high."

J. C. COURTNEY.

LOMAX.

Beautiful weather, for which we are thankful, and farmers are very busy, but there is very little cotton planted in this community. Elders Sam Crumpton and John Dykes will preach at the East Lomax school house at 11 a. m. on the 4th Sunday and Saturday before; also singing on Sunday, which will begin at 8:30 a. m. All are invited that will come and keep good order. Aldridge & Jackson are hustling the saw mill business. At present their pay roll is about $500 per month. We are to have a new ginnery at Lomax, which will be ready for the first bale of the new crop. We believe it is in the near future when Lomax can and will give as good accommodations as any of the surrounding "burgs." She can now furnish the lumber to build the houses and the goods to go in them, and she will soon be able to grind the corn, gin the cotton and furnish a market for the cotton and seed of all the people around. Mrs. W. T. Aldridge visited Clanton Sunday. T. J. Jackson and wife, of Collins chapel, visited his father here, W. A. Jackson, Sunday. Well, this is the year to elect some new officers. We all should be careful and select men that are able to stand and face the enemy in every respect; men that we know will be true to the people. It looks like some are getting hungry for office, as they are beginning to bleat through the Banner for democratic food. Now, I want to say to every reader of THE UNION that that kind of food will not do; it is too weak, the wage earner can't live on it, neither can the producer and the manufacturer; it will only bring chronic starvation to the three classes we name. Success to the Union and its many readers.

MAPLESVILLE MELANGE.

I. Brand, Jr., has made a very pleasant visit to Mrs. M. E. Glover.....Doss Williams with his two pretty little daughters, Mabel and Ethel, has been to Selma to visit his mother.....Claire Taylor, of Huckabee, has been here several days on business.....We are glad to say that Hill Foshee has recovered from a serious illness.....Miss Celeste Dunlap lately visited relatives here.....Dr. W. D. Kelley, wife and daughter, Frank Kelley and wife, all of Selma, spent Easter with their sister here.....Mrs. R. D. Martin, Mrs. Huff and Mrs. Dr. Walker, of Birmingham, each have a fine daughter born the same day.....Bro. Davis delivered an eloquent Easter sermon in our Methodist church which was tastefully decorated, and the school children repleted great credit on their gifted teacher, Miss Florence Adair, by their rendition of Easter songs and recitations. Mrs. Plant presided at the organ, all of which made our Easter service a most enjoyable one.

PLEASANT GROVE.

Editor Union:

The health of this community is good, and we are having some fine weather. All our farmers are going ahead planting corn and getting ready for cotton. Our S. S. is doing nicely under the skilful management of Supt. J. S. Wright and we have a nice singing every Sabbath morning with our teachers. J. M. Franklin is leader. We are sorry to say that one of Pleasant Grove's most high-minded young men has left us to study telegraphy, but we hope he will have good success, though he will be missed by us all.....Miss Jewel Thompson, of Jemison, was a welcome visitor among her friends and relatives here last week.....We are proud to see so many nice letters in THE UNION last week, that is the right way, cling together and make THE UNION still better, and also try to make your community better. Don't try to run your own community and your own uncle or brother down. Let him do all the good he can for he has done good, and we hope he will continue in his good work. Success to THE UNION and its many readers.

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

The farmers are getting ready to plant cotton. J. N. Scott is back from Perry county, where he went to organize some Farmers' Unions. M. L. Scott has planted him a Good Friday patch of cotton. G. W. Scott is about through planting corn. What is the matter with "Just a Voter" that he doesn't write any more pieces? D. W. Scott is going to put in his guano with his cotton seed. How do you like that way? M. W. and Mrs. Bettie Scott visited Mr. Cobb Saturday and Sunday. Watch out, Judge, some one is going across the little branch and up the hill. Best wishes to THE UNION and readers.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

J. H. Gillespie, postmaster at Fixico, was in Clanton last week. He is a good republican and Coosa county ought to have more like him.

R. Brandt, of Thorsby, was in town Thursday.

Tom Miller was in Clanton Friday.

E. B. Calloway was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Littlejohn, a fine baby girl on Saturday morning (April 14). Dr. J. P. Hayes was in attendance and "mother and child are doing well."

J. W. Patterson was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Giles were Clanton visitors Saturday.

W. J. Williams and son, Oce, were in town Saturday.

H. M., J. A. and W. F. Shaver were in Clanton Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Burkhalter and Mrs. J. A. Boockholdt were Clanton visitors Saturday.

Jos. Burnett was in town Saturday.

Prof. L. D. Riggins was in Clanton Saturday.

G. C. Shaw, the liveryman of Jemison, was in town Saturday.

W. H. Wells was in Clanton Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Wilson were visitors to Clanton Saturday.

J. C. Adams and wife were in town Saturday.

Miss Genie Foshee was a Clanton visitor Saturday.

Lee T. Vickers was in Clanton Saturday. He got the $5.00 "William" that was due him as winner of the first prize in THE UNION subscription contest. All Lee lacks now is a wife. He sure would make some girl a good husband, for he is a good "provider" and that is what counts in housekeeping.

Former Sheriff J. T. Cooley brought into THE UNION office Monday some stalks of his new oats, 3 feet high and heading. Can any one beat that?

T. J. Jackson was a welcome caller Tuesday.

A. A. Jackson, P. M. and merchant at Lomax, was in Clanton Tuesday.

Mrs. J. P. Crumpton went to Birmingham Tuesday on a visit. Dr. J. P. Crumpton is home from Atlanta and says that Clanton is to have a new dentist in a short while.

C. O. Denton, a white man who is under arrest charged with the larceny of some property belonging to J. B. Stanfield, near Maplesville, had his preliminary trial before Judge L. H. Reynolds Wednesday of this week.

J. C. Grimes, of Billingsley, was in Clanton Wednesday.

Mrs. L. H. Reynolds and Mrs. W. A. Reynolds were in Birmingham a couple of days this week and looked over the city very carefully.

Fonsa Poole, of Kincheon, was shot by John Baker (colored) Saturday night and very severely wounded, the ball striking the liver and lower lobe of the right lung. Dr. Hays is attending the case. The negro has not been found yet. There are several reports of the affair, all widely different, but agreeing in one thing, that it was a very trivial dispute. The neighbors of Mr. Poole have gotten up and deposited in the bank $125.00 reward for the capture of Baker, and the governor has been asked to offer a reward on the part of the state. This will very likely lead to Baker's arrest, as it generally stirs up the "guardians of the public peace" when a substantial reward is offered.

Clanton is bound to have electric lights very soon. The "Vanderveer Light and Power Company" are getting the poles up very fast, and will dispel the darkness that envelopes our streets at night.

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

William I. Shivers and Miss Birdie Carwile. W. W. Jones and Miss Alvie Viola Smith. Willis McMillan and Miss Ola Hester. B. G. Baxley and Miss Mamie Gray. R. J. Campbell and Miss Belle McCary. Henry Bradley and Miss Alberta Broadhead.

NOTICE TO PENSIONERS.

Confederate Pension Warrants are in my office for Martha Whitworth, M. A. Thomas, Martha Ann Selman, Mary Abbie Jones, Jane Martin, Mrs. R. E. Marcus and Mrs. A. E. McGraw. Warrants not called for by May 31 will be returned to the state auditor on June 1, 1906.

F. E. & C. U. OF A. EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

To the Local and County Unions Throughout Alabama—Greeting:

You are hereby called upon to meet, either in delegated form or in mass meeting. Also to see that all men and women of your respective counties and communities are aroused, as this is an opportunity that may not come again. You will assemble at the following times and places and will be addressed by one or more of our State officers on the plans and purposes of the Farmers' Union. It is our intention to secure to the farmer the right to price the products of their labor. We now have warehouses in several counties and are building in a number of others, and expect before the products of the farm begin to be placed on the market to be ready to handle the entire crop of our membership, which if properly done, will be sufficient to dictate an equitable price and secure the same to all our members, and we appeal to you, as union men, to insist upon your non-union neighbors to come out and hear these discussions.

The dates and places can not be changed, as this is a tremendous undertaking and can only be carried out by the hearty co-operation of the entire membership. The Executive Committee of each county is expected to do all in their power to make each meeting a success. Provide all the conveniences possible at each place and arrange to have a good time. If any county union should have a meeting already arranged near any of the following dates, they will at once see to it that their dates and places are changed, if they wish to enjoy the benefits to be derived by these rallies, as questions of vital importance will be discussed and great questions will be brought before the public. There will also be an executive session held at each appointment for getting our plans before the membership. Remember that we can not under any circumstances change the dates, as they are arranged to follow each other in such a way as to cover the entire State at the very least possible expense. Our ablest speakers will be with you. Lay down your work for one day and come out.

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

Bank Your Saving's With a Safe Bank.

Every man, woman and child, no matter where they live, should have a savings account with the Citizens' Savings bank of Birmingham, for the following reasons:

It is the only bank of importance in the state which confines its banking business strictly to savings accounts and accepts no commercial business. The banking laws of Alabama provide that where a bank doing both a savings and general banking business becomes insolvent, the depositors who had not stipulated for interest (commercial) will have preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings—in other words, the savings depositors can't be paid a cent until the commercial depositors have been paid in full.

We take no trade risks; all our loans are made on first class improved real estate mortgages or other gilt-edge collateral security—our motto being "The strength of a bank is in its individual loans."

These things, backed up by our cash capital and responsibility of our board of directors and the long and successful experiences of our officers in the banking business, renders this bank as safe as United States bonds.

Bank with us by mail. It is easy and safe. Write for information.

The Lion That Went Through the Mill.

By HENRY WALLACE PHILLIPS.

All that was left of the one-time flourishing Point-View gold-mining camp was a line of empty cabins, a vast and vacant mill, one Jack Stevens, with his wife and two children, and myself.

It was lonely in the deserted camp, terribly so at times. The canon was deep and narrow, and the twilight early in the afternoon gathered round the dark spruces which lined the sides of the creek. Yet the place had a black and dreary grandeur of its own, that held one in certan fascination.

We five mortals were sore put to it at times to find occupation which would take our minds from the fact that we were cut off from the rest of humanity. Every piece of necessary work was elaborated and spun out to the extreme limit. But of course it would eventually come to an end, and then we were obliged to invent some task.

One afternoon, as we were busy constructing a small water-mill, Jack stopped in his whittling and tossed the knife to his boy, saying:

"This thing wouldn't cut warm butter. Run over to the mill, Willie, and give it a rub on the grindstone. Sally, you go, too, and turn the stone for your brother."

The children trotted cheerfully off, and were soon swallowed up in the cavernous mill, while Jack and I sat down to rest, watching the sunlight creep up the eastern canon wall.

Suddenly shriek after shriek rang out from within the mill. Jack fairly flew in that direction, grabbing up an ax as he ran.

I made for the cabin to get the rifle.

"Something wrong with the children!" I shouted to the astonished Mrs. Stevens, as I dashed into the house. I snatched up the rifle and rushed out again, followed by the frightened mother.

Half-way to the mill we met little Sally. She was almost out of her wits with fright.

"What is it, dear? What is it?" asked her mother, shaking her vigorously, from excitement.

"Great big dog—tried to—tried to—jump on us!" cried the child between gasps.

That was enough for me. I knew there were no dogs round, but several times lately we had heard the squalling of a mountain-lion close at hand, and had also seen the prints of his padded feet in the soft earth of the creek banks. We paid little attention to these signs, for the puma, generally speaking, is a cowardly brute, with but little stomach for attacking a strong foe, unless urged on by the pangs of hunger. Then, however, with his great strength and agility, he becomes a very formidable antagonist indeed.

"Evidently," I thought, "the brute has made his den in the mill, where there are so many nooks and crannies that he could stay a year without our being a whit the wiser, unless he chose to reveal himself."

By the time I had this reasoned out I was at the door of the building. "Where are you, Jack?" I called, for it was dark as pitch in there, and at first I could see nothing.

"Here—by the first set of stamps. Got the gun?"

"Yes, indeed! What happened?"

"Willie says that he and Sally were sharpening the knife, when they heard a noise and looking up, saw on the blacksmith's bench a—"

"Great big yaller animal!" burst in Willie. "Most as big as a horse. And he began to kind o' wriggle his nose at us an' holler, and Sally she screeched, an' I picked up the knife an' got ready for him. But he didn't like the noise that Sally made, I reckon, for he jumped clean over the boiler, an' he's in behind there somewhere now."

This little story without stops was effective.

"Weren't you scared, Willie?" I asked, rather in awe of the youngster.

"Well—kind o'," he admitted. "But I was going to stay with him just the same."

"Pretty sandy boy, eh?" said Jack, with fatherly pride.

"Well, I should say so! But what do you think it was, Jack—mountain-lion?"

"Sure."

"What are you going to do?"

"Dig him out," responded Jack, promptly.

"Um!" said I.

"What's the matter? Ain't afraid, are you?"

"No—no. Not at all," I answered, earnestly. "Of course not. Why should I be. The worst that he could do would be to scatter me all over the mill. To be sure, I should prefer a more collected end, as it were. What's you plan of campaign?"

"Why, Willie will run up to the cabin and get some candles and my six-shooter, and then we'll drive him into a corner and plug him full of holes."

I whistled.

"Well," said Jack, "don't you approve of the idea?"

"Approve? Approve of chasing a full-grown puma through this mess of stamps and beams and truck by candle-light? Why, I think it is nothing less than genius which suggests the scheme. The only thing that I don't like is the idea of shooting him when we get him cornered—or he gets us cornered, as the case may be. I think it would be more sportsmanlike to take him by the tail and snap his head off."

"Oh, quit your nonsense!" said Jack. "We can handle him all right. Now, Willie, hustle up to the house and get a handful of candles and my revolver. See that every chamber is loaded and fetch a box of cartridges besides. Tell you ma that we've got the hunt of our lives on hand. Skip now, son!"

Away went Willie in great glee. It seems that he got the needful article without attracting his mother's attention until it was too late for her to interfere; he had a well-grounded suspicion that she would enter a protest.

I tried to convince Jack that it would be the part of wisdom to wait for daylight, but he refused to listen. Jack was one of the best-hearted fellowers in the world, but he possessed a lack of caution which was very irritating to more intelligent people.

Willie returned only too soon with the munitions of war, and we began our preparations.

"Are you going to get that candle lighted?" asked Jack impatiently.

I felt like answering, "Not if I can help myself," but I withstood the temptation, and said instead:

"It's the funniest candle I ever saw. I think it must be made of marble. Match doesn't seem to have any effect on it."

"That's 'cause your hand jiggles so," remarked Willie.

I bent a stern brow on the young man. "Willie," said I, "is it possible that you can make sport of the nervous agitation brought on by the knowledge of the danger through which you have just passed?"

"Beg your pardon," said Willie humbly.

Then I heard a sound that cheered my drooping soul. The mill door which Willie had closed—save us!—so that the lion could not get out, was opened, and a feminine voice shrilled through the echoing building with:

"Jack Stevens, come right out of there, and Willie, and you, too, Henry! I never heard of such foolishness! Come out, I say!"

"Look out, Mollie! Shut the door, quick! There he comes!" yelled Jack, in well-simulated fright.

Slam! went the door, and a rapid pattering of feet showed that my only ally had deserted me. Then the hunt began.

It is a strange fact by nature that the man who is the least interested in an occasion of this kind is always the one who finds the quarry. This time went by the rule—I discovered the mountain-lion.

We had poked around for about a quarter of an hour, with the candle shadows flitting strangely and unpleasantly about, and the foolish notion entered my brain that perhaps the lion was only a creation of the children's imagination; therefore I relaxed my vigilant guard of the rear and plunged carelessly ahead. As I stooped to pass under one of the big braces of the mill, a yell as of forty-seven demented Sioux Indians assaulted my ear-drums, and I was knocked on the flat of my back in a twinkling.

"There he goes!" yelled Jack. "Are you hurt, Henry?"

"Oh, no!" I answered, cheerfully. "Nothing but a fractured skull and a few dislocated vertebrae. I hope the lion hasn't crippled himself. 'Twould be too bad to spoil the fun right at the start."

"Come on! Come on!" howled Jack. "Don't lie there talking!" And with that he and Willie tore after the fleeing beast.

The chase led up the rickety steps to the second floor of the mill. The lion made it in two jumps and Jack in four. I took it in a dignified one step at a time, not being in so much of a hurry. The scene which presented itself to my gaze as my head rose above the floor was a lively one.

The big cat, crazy with fright, bounded round the place in great leaps. After him went Jack and Willie, wildly excited and without any thought of possible consequences. All—myself included, as I found to my astonishment—were screeching and yelling their loudest.

The dust rose in stifling clouds from beneath the hurrying feet. The lion scrambled up one side of the mill, and galloped across the beams toward me.

"Head him off! Head him off!" shrieked Jack.

I let six bullets fly in the general direction of the animal before one could say "scat." I didn't hit him but the fountain of fire and noise caused him to change his mind.

He stopped midway between us, throwing quick glances first at one, then the other. He was a beautiful shot as he stood there, but the last shell had jammed in the gun, and I couldn't get it out to save me. As I tugged at the ejector Jack began to howl:

"Shoot! Shoot! You idiot! Why don't you shoot?" he waved his revolver over his head in a frenzy.

I dropped my rifle and regarded him calmly. "Think a moment," said I. "What's that in your right hand?"

He brought his hand down and looked at it. Then, I am pleased to state, he looked exceedingly foolish. "Oh!" said he, and pulled up to fire.

Before the hammer fell, though, the cat had jumped—one last beautiful spring of at least forty feet, right down into the open door of an ore-chute that seemed to present a means of escape.

He landed fairly in the opening. There was a scratching and flurry, and then he slipped down to the floor below.

With a whoop of triumph Jack and I rushed to the chute. He was our captive now, beyond peradventure, as the chute, a mere box of wood, about four feet square, that led from the top floor of the mill to the stamp floor beneath us, was closed at its lower end by a hopper-shaped spout with an opening too small for anything larger than a house cat to crawl through.

The upper part of the chute, that portion above the door, was filled with partially crushed ore, which had jammed instead of sliding down, as it should have done. We were ready at the doorway, in case the brute managed to crawl up the nearly perpendicular sides. Thus his escape was cut off in every direction.

We bent eagerly over the doorway, and peered own through the darkness at our victim. There he was, his eyes shining green in the candle-light, growling and sputtering.

As, rifle in hand, I leaned to get a better view, I lost my balance, and nearly pitched head first down to that incarnation of fury below. I struck out vigorously to recover myself, and in the flurry managed to discharge the rifle. The bullet smashed into the ore in the top of the chute. In an instant the whole mass, released by the shock of the bullet, slid down the chute with a dull roar. Clouds of dust puffed out into our faces, covering us with a coat of grime. There came a squawk from beneath us.

"Hooray!" said Jack. "Now we have got him."

As there was about five tons of dirt pressing down on the beast, I accepted the conclusion.

After the jubilation of victory came a council of war. Should we leave our victim to die a prolonged death from suffocation, or pull a board off and give him a more merciful end by bullet? While we were arguing a brilliant thought came to me.

"Why not take him alive?" said I. "Old Bronson, up at Deadwood, would give twenty dollars for such an addition to his menagerie."

That caught Jack immediately. We needed the money, for one thing, and then there was something novel in capturing a living puma.

We rushed down stairs and started to hunt up material for a cage. Fortune favored us. We soon found a strong crate, in which machinery had been shipped, that with a little changing served the purpose well. We put the open end of this over the mouth of the hopper; then, working with a crowbar between the slats, we pried the top board off the hopper.

A little round patch of yellow head showed above the smooth surface of the dirt. We dug round it with sticks until at last we had the whole head uncovered. At first we thought the brute was dead, but soon he opened his eyes and gazed about him.

His expression was meek and humble. Indeed his experiences were enough to break the proudest spirit. It was impossible for him to move in the closely packed earth.

Then we fell to work, and completed the excavation. When at last the puma was free, he shook himself vigorously, walked into the cage and lay down. He paid no attention while we moved the cage out and nailed the front on.

Willie and Jack went out to bring Mrs. Stevens in. We had completely forgotten that the coating of dirt altered our appearance remarkably. Therefore Jack didn't know what to make of it when his wife, after casting a glace upon him, gave one piercing shriek and shut herself up in the closet. It took some time for Jack to convince her that he was of a verity her husband, and not some strange, new kind of Indian. Then she and Jack and Willie and Sally marched into the mill.

Now I had watched the beast and can testify that he never moved a muscle. We all stood round the cage, wondering and admiring. The puma certainly was a fine animal. His body must have measured four feet.

"He's been as quiet as a cow ever since we caged him," said Jack.

"Dear me, isn't that strange!" said Mrs. Stevens. "I should have thought that he would have raised ructions."

At that moment, as if the words had convinced the animal that he was not acting a proper part, he sprang to his feet with a yell that stopped our circulation.

Jack, the hitherto unterrified, grabbed his wife and jumped backward. Willie and Sally ran behind their parents. I was too astonished to move and watched open-mouthed.

The puma went ramping, tearing mad. He bit and tore at the cage with such speed and fury that he rolled it over the place, snarling, growling, coughing and roaring, until it seemed that all the unpleasant noises of the world had been let loose in the mill.

The cage was fairly strong, but it was never intended to hold such a compound of active volcano and concentrated tornado as now raged in its midst. There came a sharp crackling; some slats flew across the floor; then, with a farewell yell, the puma sprang over the heads of Jack and his family and vanished through the open door of the mill.

"There goes our twenty dollars," said I, as soon as I was in a condition to speak.

"Yes," piped up Willie, in a tone that showed his disappointment, "and I don't believe he'll ever come back again, either." This was a true word. He never did.—Youth's Companion.

ACCIDENTS INEVITABLE.

THERE IS NO DEVICE WHICH MAKES COLLISIONS IMPOSSIBLE.

There Is Apparatus Which Would Tend to Make Them Rarer, but the Expense Would Frighten the Boards of Directors—Value of the Book of Rules.

"To eliminate absolutely the danger of loss of life on passenger trains is one of the great problems of the age," said John Aller, who has been Superintendent of Equipment on several big Western railroads, to a representative of The New York World.

"To eliminate to a mechanical certainty the danger of collisions of passenger trains such as occured on the Harlem viaduct of the New York Central Railroad, when several lives were lost, arouses the deepest concern of practical railroad men, but as a rule not that of the stockholders.

New devices and equipment cost money, and stockholders don't like to see their money spent.

"Just how any apparatus could be devised to make all collisions impossible is more than I can say, but at comparatively small expenses all cross tracks could be equipped with a style of automatic arrangement such as is used on the express tracks in the Subway; much danger could be eliminated, but an inventor would have a hard time getting a board of directors to vote to spend the money necessary to equip the cross tracks of even the smallest of roads, and if a board of directors were asked to equip a whole line with a block system such as the Subway uses to avoid rear-end collisions and the vagrant accidents of obscure switches they would probably ask for an examination as to the sanity of the man who made it.

"Some day, after enough people have been killed, we shall have a Congress with nerve enough to pass a national law making railroads equip as nearly as possible every danger-point with the devices that are already in existence, cost or no cost."

As to whether there is any practical method now in existence of equipping engines in such a way as to make collisions impossible many practical railroad men were asked for their opinion and experience.

H. S. Hayward, superintendent of motive power of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said:

"If there was a practical mechanical system of avoiding collisions the Pennsylvania would have it. An intelligent board of directors will consider the expense entailed by loss of life every time an invention or a new plan is suggested, and when it can be shown that, even at great cost, a new plan will save life they are likely to be in favor of it as an economy against the large aggregate expense of one big accident.

"So far, however, I have not heard of anything that would make such accidents as we speak of a mechanical impossibility. It is fair to state that you can't make inanimate things think, and an automatic track-stop acting on air-brakes would cost more than a new railroad. If, as seems probable, when all the transportation systems of the country are 'electrified,' and the work of re-equipping roads goes on in a way satisfactory to the financial heads, it may be that automatic systems will follow at the same time, and danger of collisions will be reduced to a minimum; but—" and here the gray veteran of locomotives sighed, and looked at a photograph of a freight wreck on an obscure part of the system—"I'm afraid that's a long way off.

"Speaking from my experience, I would say that the book of rules beats any device that could ever be constructed. A man who has just intelligence enough to follow the book of rules will never play a part in an accident except the kinds that are called unforeseen.

"The book of rules is the outcome of the life work of many great railroad men, and no engineer who follows his book of rules ever has an accident made by himself.

"The fallibility of man can never be overcome by mechanical device, no matter how ingenious it may be.

"A conductor I knew was a sober and straight-living man; he had been running a local freight for several years. For a year he had had a standing order to go in upon a certain side track when he was on time, and wait for a passenger train to go past them in the same direction. One night he got his order from the last station to go on, and when he got to the side track the flagman ahead opened the switch and the freight moved in. When his caboose passed over he got out and threw the switch and slipped the hook of the lock through the eyes of the switch handle, but did not snap the lock, because the freight had to back out upon the main track when the passenger train had gone by. He got back in the caboose and sat down to wait for the other train. What state his mind got into is hard to explain, for when he heard the whistle of the passenger train he suddenly thought he had not thrown the switch, jumped out of the caboose and threw the switch over just in time to let the passenger crash into the freight and kill several people. He turned white that night and quit railroading.

"It would be well to have mechanical devices to avoid such accidents as that, but how can you imagine that even such a device would not suffer from people who don't follow rules? If he had snapped the lock on that switch as the rules plainly directed, he wouldn't have had time to unlock it and let the passenger train in on the freight."

PROVERBS OF CHINESE.

They Appear to Have One to Fit Every Legal Case.

There is no surer test of the real feelings of a people than their proverbial sayings, those "gems which on the stretched forefinger of all Time sparkle forever." That China is no exception to this rule might have been supposed even if we had no direct proof, says the North China Herald. Proverbial expressions are very common in China. Dr. Arthur Smith says that "common talk," the nearest approach to "proverb" in Chinese, is "literally in the mouth of every one, from the emperor upon the throne to the woman grinding at the mill."

Native proverbs relating to legal affairs divide themselves roughly into three classes—first those more or less common to all people, and dealing with that "once bitten twice shy" sort of wisdom which leads a man to put up with evils rather than go to law. Such, for example, are the following:

If one family has a law suit ten families are involved in calamity.

If but one word of information against a man gets into the court, nine bullocks cannot drag it out again.

Let householders avoid litigation, for once go to law and there is nothing but trouble.

Win your lawsuit and lose your money.

Instances of this kind might be multiplied. But we must pass on to the second class—those referring specially to the mandarins; and here it may be said that though the majority of the proverbial sayings are not complimentary, there are a few to bear witness to the good that a good man may do even in an official capacity, while others give pointed advice—e. g., "Never beat if you must fine; if you do, all fines decline." Most, however, as is natural, deal with the seamy side. The following are a few specimens:

No punishment on the beach, no law below it.

Deceive, but don't insult a mandarin.

Men's hearts are like iron, and the rule of the mandarins like a furnace.

Even an honest chih-fu may, during the three years' term of office, saves ten myriad snow white tales of silver.

Before he comes into office he reproves a thousand faults; after he comes into office he commits the same himself.

Quickly pay your taxes, even if he should empty your purse; then you will be most happy.

Wishing to criminate, no difficulty will be met in finding a pretext.

Of ten reasons by which a magistrate may decide a case, nine are unknown to the public.

With only right to back you, sure the yamens lack you.

Yamens are deep as the sea; and their corruptions lofty as heaven.

In life beware of yamens; in death beware of hell.

THE COLOR OF WATER.

Result of Recent Experiments Made by European Physicists.

L'Illustration (Paris) gives the following results of recent experiments on the subject of the color of water: "After long hesitation, scientific men agree today in admitting that water physically pure, seen in mass, is sky blue. This color is that taken by the white light of the sun when absorbed by the water, in consequence of a phenomenon the explanation of which would be a little long. It is not due to the chemical purity of the water, since the sea (which is the bluest water) is also that which contains the most salt. Nevertheless, according to Forel's experiments, the matter in solution should be the predominant cause of the modification of color; upon which act, besides the matter in suspension, the color of the bottom, and the reflection of the sky and of the banks. Consequently blue water is pretty rare in nature; a good many seas and lakes that give us the impression of this tint are green. The water at present acknowledged to be the bluest is that of the Sargasso Sea, between the Cape Verde Islands and the Antilles. The water of the Mediterranean off the French coast and around Capri is bluer than that of Lake Leman, much less blue itself than that of the lakes of Kandersteg and Arolla, in Switzerland. Hitherto they have not exactly determined the relation between the color of water and its degree of purity. The Belgian, Professor Spring, who has been a long time studying this delicate question, has just communicated to the Academy of Sciences at Brussels some interesting figures. Pure water containing a millionth of ferric hydrate appears brown under a thickness of six meters; a ten-millionth is sufficient for it to be green; and, in order that it may remain blue, is needed less than a twenty-millionth. As to humic matter, it causes the blue coloring to disappear in a quantity less than a forty-millionth. The calcic compounds, should have a great influence upon clarrification, as they eliminate, up to a certain state of equilibrium, the ferric and humic compounds."

The farm, the mine and the mill are turning out products on an unprecedented scale, internal trade was never so active, exports are of record breaking magnitude and everybody seems to be prosperous, explains the New York Herald.

A Love Letter 700 Years Old.

From The Pall Mall Gazette.

While carrying on some excavations near the foundations of the old church of St. Peter, on top of Montmartre, M. Sauvageot, a well known French antiquary, has discovered a love letter which is seven hundred years old. It was written by the knight Jean de Gisors to his lady, Alice de Lisle, and in his letter the knight declares for the world to know that he has relinquished the fair Lady Alice forever afar, that never had she given him any right to declare his love, but that her image has been his guiding star for years, and that now, on the eve of battle he wished to send her a chaste farewell. Apparently the knight never got the letter, for the knight was slain the next day upon the battlements and buried in the trench whence his bones have been exhumed by the casual pick of a modern antiquary.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Trying To Abolish Flies.

A prize of 600 pounds has been awarded by the Paris Matin to the anonymous inventor of a new method of getting rid of houseflies. The method is strictly scientific, and it is claimed will completely destroy the germs which are usually deposited in drain pipes. Crude petrol, mixed with water, is used for household disinfecting purposes. The drain pipes become lined with the oil, which both destroys the eggs already there and prevents the deposit of others. When desired the petrol can be poured on first and the latter sprinkled in order. This, it is said, is thoroughly efficacious in destroying the eggs. The operations should be carried out in the spring to obtain the best results.

The Lion That Went Through the Mill.

By HENRY WALLACE PHILLIPS.

All that was left of the one-time flourishing Point-View gold-mining camp was a line of empty cabins, a vast and vacant mill, one Jack Stevens, with his wife and two children, and myself.

It was lonely in the deserted camp, terribly so at times. The canon was deep and narrow, and the twilight early in the afternon gathered round the dark spruces which lined the sides of the creek. Yet the place had a black and dreary grandeur of its own, that held one in certan fascination.

We five mortals were sore put to it at times to find occupation which would take our minds from the fact that we were cut off from the rest of humanity. Every piece of necessary work was elaborated and spun out to the extreme limit. But of course it would eventually come to an end, and then we were obliged to invent some task.

One afternoon, as we were busy constructing a small water-mill, Jack stopped in his whittling and tossed the knife to his boy, saying:

"This thing wouldn't cut warm butter. Run over to the mill, Willie, and give it a rub on the grindstone. Sally, you go, too, and turn the stone for your brother."

The children trotted cheerfully off, and were soon swallowed up in the cavernous mill, while Jack and I sat down to rest, watching the sunlight creep up the eastern canon wall.

Suddenly shriek after shriek rang out from within the mill. Jack fairly flew in that direction, grabbing up an ax as he ran.

I made for the cabin to get the rifle.

"Something wrong with the children!" I shouted to the astonished Mrs. Stevens, as I dashed into the house. I snatched up the rifle and rushed out again, followed by the frightened mother.

Half-way to the mill we met little Sally. She was almost out of her wits with fright.

"What is it, dear? What is it?" asked her mother, shaking her vigorously, from excitement.

"Great big dog—tried to—tried to—jump on us!" cried the child between gasps.

That was enough for me. I knew there were no dogs round, but several times lately we had heard the squalling of a mountain-lion close at hand, and had also seen the prints of his padded feet in the soft earth of the creek banks. We paid little attention to these signs, for the puma, generally speaking, is a cowardly brute, with but little stomach for attacking a strong foe, unless urged on by the pangs of hunger. Then, however, with his great strength and agility, he becomes a very formidable antagonist indeed.

"Evidently," I thought, "the brute has made his den in the mill, where there are so many nooks and crannies that he could stay a year without our being a whit the wiser, unless he chose to reveal himself."

By the time I had this reasoned out I was at the door of the building. "Where are you, Jack?" I called, for it was dark as pitch in there, and at first I could see nothing.

"Here—by the first set of stamps. Got the gun?"

"Yes, indeed! What happened?"

"Willie says that he and Sally were sharpening the knife, when they heard a noise and looking up, saw on the blacksmith's bench a—"

"Great big yaller animal!" burst in Willie. "Most as big as a horse. And he began to kind o' wriggle his nose at us an' holler, and Sally she screeched, an' I picked up the knife an' got ready for him. But he didn't like the noise that Sally made, I reckon, for he jumped clean over the boiler, an' he's in behind there somewhere now."

This little story without stops was effective.

"Wasn't you scared, Willie?" I asked, rather in awe of the youngster.

"Well—kind o'," he admitted. "But I was going to stay with him just the same."

"Pretty sandy boy, eh?" said Jack, with fatherly pride.

"Well, I should say so! But what do you think it was, Jack—mountain-lion?"

"Sure."

"What are you going to do?"

"Dig him out," responded Jack, promptly.

"Um!" said I.

"What's the matter? Ain't afraid, are you?"

"No—no. Not at all," I answered, earnestly. "Of course not. Why should I be. The worst that he could do would be to scatter me all over the mill. To be sure, I should prefer a more collected end, as it were. What's you plan of campaign?"

"Why, Willie will run up to the cabin and get some candles and my six-shooter, and then we'll drive him into a corner and plug him full of holes."

I whistled.

"Well," said Jack, "don't you approve of the idea?"

"Approve? Approve of chasing a full-grown puma through this mess of stamps and beams and truck by candle-light? Why, I think it is nothing less than genius which suggests the scheme. The only thing that I don't like is the idea of shooting him when we get him cornered—or he gets us cornered, as the case may be. I think it would be more sportsmanlike to take him by the tail and snap his head off."

"Oh, quit your nonsense!" said Jack. "We can handle him all right. Now, Willie, hustle up to the house and get a handful of candles and my revolver. See that every chamber is loaded and fetch a box of cartridges besides. Tell you ma that we've got the hunt of our lives on hand. Skip now, son!"

Away went Willie in great glee. It seems that he got the needful article without attracting his mother's attention until it was too late for her to interfere; he had a well-grounded suspicion that she would enter a protest.

I tried to convince Jack that it would be the part of wisdom to wait for daylight, but he refused to listen. Jack was one of the best-hearted fellowers in the world, but he possessed a lack of caution which was very irritating to more intelligent people.

Willie returned only too soon with the munitions of war, and we began our preparations.

"Are you going to get that candle lighted?" asked Jack impatiently.

I felt like answering, "Not if I can help myself," but I withstood the temptation, and said instead:

"It's the funniest candle I ever saw. I think it must be made of marble. Match doesn't seem to have any effect on it."

"That's 'cause your hand jiggles so," remarked Willie.

I bent a stern brow on the young man. "Willie," said I, "is it possible that you can make sport of the nervous agitation brought on by the knowledge of the danger through which you have just passed?"

"Beg your pardon," said Willie humbly.

Then I heard a sound that cheered my drooping soul. The mill door which Willie had closed—save us!—so that the lion could not get out, was opened, and a feminine voice shrilled through the echoing building with:

"Jack Stevens, come right out of there, and Willie, and you, too, Henry! I never heard of such foolishness! Come out, I say!"

"Look out, Mollie! Shut the door, quick! There he comes!" yelled Jack, in well-simulated fright.

Slam! went the door, and a rapid pattering of feet showed that my only ally had deserted me. Then the hunt began.

It is a strange fact by nature that the man who is the least interested in an occasion of this kind is always the one who finds the quarry. This time went by the rule—I discovered the mountain-lion.

We had poked around for about a quarter of an hour, with the candle shadows flitting strangely and unpleasantly about, and the foolish notion entered my brain that perhaps the lion was only a creation of the children's imagination; therefore I relaxed my vigilant guard of the rear and plunged carelessly ahead. As I stooped to pass under one of the big braces of the mill, a yell as of forty-seven demented Sioux Indians assaulted my ear-drums, and I was knocked on the flat of my back in a twinkling.

"There he goes!" yelled Jack. "Are you hurt, Henry?"

"Oh, no!" I answered, cheerfully. "Nothing but a fractured skull and a few dislocated vertebrae. I hope the lion hasn't crippled himself. 'Twould be too bad to spoil the fun right at the start."

"Come on! Come on!" howled Jack. "Don't lie there talking!" And with that he and Willie tore after the fleeing beast.

The chase led up the rickety steps to the second floor of the mill. The lion made it in two jumps and Jack in four. I took it in a dignified one step at a time, not being in so much of a hurry. The scene which presented itself to my gaze as my head rose above the floor was a lively one.

The big cat, crazy with fright, bounded round the place in great leaps. After him went Jack and Willie, wildly excited and without any thought of possible consequences. All—myself included, as I found to my astonishment—were screeching and yelling their loudest.

The dust rose in stifling clouds from beneath the hurrying feet. The lion scrambled up one side of the mill, and galloped across the beams toward me.

"Head him off! Head him off!" shrieked Jack.

I let six bullets fly in the general direction of the animal before one could say "scat." I didn't hit him but the fountain of fire and noise caused him to change his mind.

He stopped midway between us, throwing quick glances first at one, then the other. He was a beautiful shot as he stood there, but the last shell had jammed in the gun, and I couldn't get it out to save me. As I tugged at the ejector Jack began to howl:

"Shoot! Shoot! You idiot! Why don't you shoot?" he waved his revolver over his head in a frenzy.

I dropped my rifle and regarded him calmly. "Think a moment," said I. "What's that in your right hand?"

He brought his hand down and looked at it. Then, I am pleased to state, he looked exceedingly foolish. "Oh!" said he, and pulled up to fire.

Before the hammer fell, though, the cat had jumped—one last beautiful spring of at least forty feet, right down into the open door of an ore-chute that seemed to present a means of escape.

He landed fairly in the opening. There was a scratching and flurry, and then he slipped down to the floor below.

With a whoop of triumph Jack and I rushed to the chute. He was our captive now, beyond peradventure, as the chute, a mere box of wood, about four feet square, that led from the top floor of the mill to the stamp floor beneath us, was closed at its lower end by a hopper-shaped spout with an opening too small for anything larger than a house cat to crawl through.

The upper part of the chute, that portion above the door, was filled with partially crushed ore, which had jammed instead of sliding down, as it should have done. We were ready at the doorway, in case the brute managed to crawl up the nearly perpendicular sides. Thus his escape was cut off in every direction.

We bent eagerly over the doorway, and peered own through the darkness at our victim. There he was, his eyes shining green in the candle-light, growling and sputtering.

As, rifle in hand, I leaned to get a better view, I lost my balance, and nearly pitched head first down to that incarnation of fury below. I struck out vigorously to recover myself, and in the flurry managed to discharge the rifle. The bullet smashed into the ore in the top of the chute. In an instant the whole mass, released by the shock of the bullet, slid down the chute with a dull roar. Clouds of dust puffed out into our faces, covering us with a coat of grime. There came a squawk from beneath us.

"Hooray!" said Jack. "Now we have got him."

As there was about five tons of dirt pressing down on the beast, I accepted the conclusion.

After the jubilation of victory came a council of war. Should we leave our victim to die a prolonged death from suffocation, or pull a board off and give him a more merciful end by bullet? While we were arguing a brilliant thought came to me.

"Why not take him alive?" said I. "Old Bronson, up at Deadwood, would give twenty dollars for such an addition to his menagerie."

That caught Jack immediately. We needed the money, for one thing, and then there was something novel in capturing a living puma.

We rushed down stairs and started to hunt up material for a cage. Fortune favored us. We soon found a strong crate, in which machinery had been shipped, that with a little changing served the purpose well. We put the open end of this over the mouth of the hopper; then, working with a crowbar between the slats, we pried the top board off the hopper.

A little round patch of yellow head showed above the smooth surface of the dirt. We dug round it with sticks until at last we had the whole head uncovered. At first we thought the brute was dead, but soon he opened his eyes and gazed about him.

His expression was meek and humble. Indeed his experiences were enough to break the proudest spirit. It was impossible for him to move in the closely packed earth.

Then we fell to work, and completed the excavation. When at last the puma was free, he shook himself vigorously, walked into the cage and lay down. He paid no attention while we moved the cage out and nailed the front on.

Willie and Jack went out to bring Mrs. Stevens in. We had completely forgotten that the coating of dirt altered our appearance remarkably. Therefore Jack didn't know what to make of it when his wife, after casting a glace upon him, gave one piercing shriek and shut herself up in the closet. It took some time for Jack to convince her that he was of a verity her husband, and not some strange, new kind of Indian. Then she and Jack and Willie and Sally marched into the mill.

Now I had watched the beast and can testify that he never moved a muscle. We all stood round the cage, wondering and admiring. The puma certainly was a fine animal. His body must have measured four feet.

"He's been as quiet as a cow ever since we caged him," said Jack.

"Dear me, isn't that strange!" said Mrs. Stevens. "I should have thought that he would have raised ructions."

At that moment, as if the words had convinced the animal that he was not acting a proper part, he sprang to his feet with a yell that stopped our circulation.

'Jack, the hitherto unterrified, grabbed his wife and jumped backward. Willie and Sally ran behind their parents. I was too astonished to move and watched open-mouthed.

The puma went ramping, tearing mad. He bit and tore at the cage with such speed and fury that he rolled it over the place, snarling, growling, coughing and roaring, until it seemed that all the unpleasant noises of the world had been let loose in the mill.

The cage was fairly strong, but it was never intended to hold such a compound of active volcano and concentrated tornado as now raged in its midst. There came a sharp crackling; some slats flew across the floor; then, with a farewell yell, the puma sprang over the heads of Jack and his family and vanished through the open door of the mill.

"There goes our twenty dollars," said I, as soon as I was in a condition to speak.

"Yes," piped up Willie, in a tone that showed his disappointment, "and I don't believe he'll ever come back again, either." This was a true word. He never did.—Youth's Companion.

"A conductor I knew was a sober and straight-living man; he had been running a local freight for several years. For a year he had had a standing order to go in upon a certain side track when he was on time, and wait for a passenger train to go past them in the same direction. One night he got his order from the last station to go on, and when he got to the side track the flagman ahead opened the switch and the freight moved in. When his caboose passed over he got out and threw the switch and slipped the hook of the lock through the eyes of the switch handle, but did not snap the lock, because the freight had to back out upon the main track when the passenger train had gone by. He got back in the caboose and sat down to wait for the other train. What state his mind got into is hard to explain, for when he heard the whistle of the passenger train he suddenly thought he had not thrown the switch, jumped out of the caboose and threw the switch over just in time to let the passenger crash into the freight and kill several people. He turned white that night and quit railroading.

"It would be well to have mechanical devices to avoid such accidents as that, but how can you imagine that even such a device would not suffer from people who don't follow rules? If he had snapped the lock on that switch as the rules plainly directed, he wouldn't have had time to unlock it and let the passenger train in on the freight."

PROVERBS OF CHINESE.

They Appear to Have One to Fit Every Legal Case.

There is no surer test of the real feelings of a people than their proverbial sayings, those "gems which on the stretched forefinger of all Time sparkle forever." That China is no exception to this rule might have been supposed even if we had no direct proof, says the North China Herald. Proverbial expressions are very common in China. Dr. Arthur Smith says that "common talk," the nearest approach to "proverb" in Chinese, is "literally in the mouth of every one, from the emperor upon the throne to the woman grinding at the mill."

Native proverbs relating to legal affairs divide themselves roughly into three classes—first those more or less common to all people, and dealing with that "once bitten twice shy" sort of wisdom which leads a man to put up with evils rather than go to law. Such, for example, are the following:

If one family has a law suit ten families are involved in calamity.

If but one word of information against a man gets into the court, nine bullocks cannot drag it out again.

Let householders avoid litigation, for once go to law and there is nothing but trouble.

Win your lawsuit and lose your money.

Instances of this kind might be multiplied. But we must pass on to the second class—those referring specially to the mandarins; and here it may be said that though the majority of the proverbial sayings are not complimentary, there are a few to bear witness to the good that a good man may do even in an official capacity, while others give pointed advice—e. g., "Never beat if you must fine; if you do, all fines decline." Most, however, as is natural, deal with the seamy side. The following are a few specimens:

No punishment on the beach, no law below it.

Deceive, but don't insult a mandarin.

Men's hearts are like iron, and the rule of the mandarins like a furnace.

Even an honest chih-fulmay, during the three years' term of office, saves ten myriad snow white tales of silver.

Before he comes into office he reproves a thousand faults; after he comes into office he commits the same himself.

Quickly pay your taxes, even if he should empty your purse; then you will be most happy.

Wishing to criminate, no difficulty will be met in finding a pretext.

Of ten reasons by which a magistrate may decide a case, nine are unknown to the public.

With only right to back you, sure the yamens lack you.

Yamens are deep as the sea; and their corruptions lofty as heaven.

In life beware of yamens; in death beware of hell.

THE COLOR OF WATER.

Result of Recent Experiments Made by European Physisists.

L'Illustration (Paris) gives the following results of recent experiments on the subject of the color of water: "After long hesitation, scientific men agree today in admitting that water physically pure, seen in mass, is sky blue. This color is that taken by the white light of the sun when absorbed by the water, in consequence of a phenomenon the explanation of which would be a little long. It is not due to the chemical purity of the water, since the sea (which is the bluest water) is also that which contains the most salt. Nevertheless, according to Forel's experiments, the matter in solution should be the predominant cause of the modification of color; upon which act, besides the matter in suspension, the color of the bottom, and the reflection of the sky and of the banks. Consequently blue water is pretty rare in nature; a good many seas and lakes that give us the impression of this tint are green. The water at present acknowledged to be the bluest is that of the Sargasso Sea, between the Cape Verde Islands and the Antilles. The water of the Mediterranean off the French coast and around Capri is bluer than that of Lake Leman, much less blue itself than that of the lakes of Kandersteg and Arolia, in Switzerland. Hitherto they have not exactly determined the relation between the color of water and its degree of purity. The Belgian, Professor Spring, who has been a long time studying this delicate question, has just communicated to the Academy of Sciences at Brussels some interesting figures. Pure water containing a millionth of ferric hydrate appears brown under a thickness of six meters; a ten-millionth is sufficient for it to be green; and, in order that it may remain blue, is needed less than a twenty-millionth. As to humic matter, it causes the blue coloring to disappear in a quantity less than a forty-millionth. The calcic compounds, should have a great influence upon clarification, as they eliminate, up to a certain state of equilibrium, the ferric and humic compounds."

How They Treat Alaskan Dogs.

"A fair average day's journey for a dog team in our country is twenty-five miles," said T. V. Nicks, of Alaska. "If pushed, the dogs will go a good bit farther than this, but that is about the usual daily distance. They are cheerful workers, these Alaskan canines, but one must know how to treat them.

"It will not do to give them more than one meal a day, and that only when camp is struck after the day's travel. The usual feed is a lot of fish or meal that has been well boiled with some fat meat thrown in for good measure."

The Hens and the Phonograph.

A Stockport poultry farmer is in great trouble of late because his hens were not producing the proper number of eggs. A nearby neighbor has a flock of hens which were always overtime to produce eggs. While passing over the back fence listening to the triumphant cackle of his neighbor's hens an idea struck the latter owner of hense. He went into the house and brought out his phonograph, inserted a blank record and succeeded in getting a fine imitation of the cackling of the laying hense. He installed the phonograph in his hen house and started it going. The first day the hens were greatly excited, but the second day they got down to business and ground out an egg every time the phonograph cackled. The hens have stopped cackling themselves, however, and when the phonograph stops they stop laying, and the originator the idea has to sit in the coop all day long to keep the phonograph going.

A Love Letter 700 Years Old.

From The Pall Mall Gazette.

While carrying on some excavations near the foundations of the old church of St. Peter, on top of Montmartre, M. Sauvageot, a well known French antiquary, has discovered a love letter which is seven hundred years old. It was written by the knight Jean de Gisors to his lady, Alice de Lisle. In his letter the knight declares first to the world to know that he has long shipped the fair Lady Alice from afar, that never had she given him any right to declare his love, but that her image has been his guiding star for years, and that now, on the eve of battle he wished to send her a chaste farewell. Apparently the knight never got the letter, for the knight was slain the next day upon the battlements and buried in the trench whence his bones have been exhumed by the casual pick of a modern antiquary.

Trying To Abolish Flies.

A prize of 600 pounds has been awarded by the Paris Matin to the anonymous inventor of a new method of getting rid of houseflies. The method is strictly scientific, and it is claimed will completely destroy the germs which are usually deposited in the pipes. Crude petrol, mixed with water, is used for household disinfecting purposes. The drain pipes become lined with the oil, which both kills the eggs already there and prevents the deposit of others. When desired the petrol can be poured on the water and the latter sprinkled in corners. This, it is said, is thoroughly efficacious in destroying the eggs. The operations should be carried out in the spring to obtain the best results.

THREE FACTS

For Sick Women To Consider

FIRST.—That almost every operation performed upon women in our hospitals is rendered necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements of the female organs, pain in the side, bearing-down sensation in the stomach, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

SECOND.—The medicine that holds the record for the largest number of positive cures of female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates, strengthens and cures diseases of the female organism as nothing else can.

For thirty years it has been helping women to be strong, curing backache, nervousness, kidney troubles, inflammation of the female organs, weakness and displacements, regulating the periods perfectly and overcoming their pains. It has also proved itself invaluable in preparing women for childbirth and the change of life.

THIRD.—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women.—Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. From symptoms given, your trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Mrs. Pinkham is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and since her decease she has been advising sick women free of charge. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, any woman, rich or poor is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

Head Covered With Humor Sores, With Loss of Hair—Another Speedy Cure by Cuticura Remedies.

"All my life I had been troubled more or less with humor in my scalp, but about a year ago it became worse, and my scalp was covered with little sores, which itched so it nearly made me crazy; my hair also began to get dry and fall out. I tried all kinds of hair restorers with no effect, and I was nearly discouraged, but one day I was reading in a paper what the Cuticura Remedies had done for scalp diseases, and decided to make a trial. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent Pills. I used them according to directions, and soon noticed a difference; the tiny sores on my scalp began to heal, the itching stopped, and my hair began to grow thick. I have used only the one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Ointment and one vial of Pills, and now I have no humor on my scalp and my hair is soft and silky. Miss Mayzie C. AN APPALLING SITUATION.

I know we need the sun's bright rays
To beam around the sky;
To shine down here on washing-days
And make the clothes get dry.
And just by flashing out his light
To make a daytime out of night.

Of such a good and noble sun
It's awful to believe
A wicked trick! But he has one
That makes my mother grieve;
He will poke through the blind, and fade
Her parlor chairs of blue brocade!

She's moved those chairs all 'round the room,
She bought the darkest shades;
And yet he wriggles through the gloom
And fades and fades and fades!
My heart is full of deep despairs
About my mother's parlor chairs!

Novel Circular Garage.

Always something new under the sun, says Everybody's Magazine. Paris has a circular garage wherein automobiles take the elevator, so to speak, to the top floor, using their own motive power to climb along a spiral track a mile long, which winds around a central hall. The automobile whizzes in from the street and makes the climb along easy grades. Garages in the thirtieth story may come to be the rage. But should the gradients be easy, as in easy Paris? Should they not be dizzy and precipitous? Our youth must not grow soft. They must have exercise.

The life of a Chinese woman is one of servitude. At the early age of seven she is separated from her brothers, with whom she is neither allowed to eat or play. When she is married, she may look forward to a life of submission to her parents-in-law, and in dying she has the comforting thought that in the next world she will resume her bondage under her husband. Widows do not remarry and it is considered a delicate mark of affection to their departed spouses to follow them into the next world by committing suicide.

Rise Liars,

And Salute Your Queen

Ho, All Ye Faithful Followers of Ananias

GIVE EAR!

A Young Girl said to a Cooking School Teacher in New York: "If You make One Statement as False as That, All You have said about Foods is Absolutely Unreliable."

This burst of true American girl indignation was caused by the teacher saying that Grape-Nuts, the popular pre-digested food, was made of stale bread shipped in and sweetened.

The teacher colored up and changed the subject.

There is quite an assortment of traveling and stay-at-home members of the tribe of Ananias who tell their falsehoods for a variety of reasons.

In the spring it is the custom on a cattle ranch to have a "round-up," and brand the cattle, so we are going to have a "round-up," and brand these cattle and place them in their proper pastures.

FIRST PASTURE.

Cooking school teachers—this includes "teachers" who have applied to us for a weekly pay if they would say "something nice" about Grape-Nuts and Postum, and when we have declined to hire them to do this they get waspy and show their true colors.

This also includes "demonstrators" and "lecturers" sent out by a certain Sanitarium to sell foods made there, and these people instructed by the small-be-whiskered-doctor—the head of the institution—to tell these prevarications (you can speak the stronger word if you like). This same little doctor conducts a small magazine in which there is a department of "answers to correspondents," many of the questions as well as the answers being written by the aforesaid doctor.

In this column some time ago appeared the statement: "No, we cannot recommend the use of Grape-Nuts, for it is nothing but bread with glucose poured over it." Right then he showed his badge as a member of the tribe of Ananias. He may have been a member for some time before, and so he has caused these "lecturers" to descend into the ways of the tribe wherever they go.

When the young lady in New York put the "iron on" to this "teacher" and branded her right we sent $10.00 to the girl for her pluck and bravery.

SECOND PASTURE.

Editors of "Trade" papers known as grocers' papers.

Remember, we don't put the brand on all, by any means. Only those that require it. These members of the tribe have demanded that we carry advertising in their papers and when we do not consider it advisable they institute a campaign of vituperation and slander, printing from time to time manufactured slurs on Postum or Grape-Nuts. When they go far enough we set our legal force at work and hale them to the judge to answer. If the pace has been hot enough to throw some of these "cattle" over on their backs, feet tied and "bellowing," do you think we should be blamed? They gambol around with tails held high and jump stiff legged with a very "cocky" air while they have full range, but when the rope is thrown over them "it's different."

Should we untie them because they bleat soft and low? Or should we put the iron on, so that people will know the brand?

Let's keep them in this pasture, anyhow.

THIRD PASTURE.

Now we come to a frisky lot, the "Labor Union" editors. You know down in Texas a weed called "Loco" is sometimes eaten by a steer and produces a derangement of the brain that makes the steer "batty" or crazy. Many of these editors are "Locoed" from hate of anyone who will not instantly obey the "demands" of a labor union, and it is the universal habit of such writers to go straight into a system of personal vilification, manufacturing any sort of falsehood through which to vent their spleen. We assert that the common citizen has a right to live and breathe air without asking permission of the labor trust, and this has brought down on us the hate of these editors. When they go far enough with their libels, is it harsh for us to get judgment against them and have our lawyers watch for a chance to attach money due them from others? (For they are usually irresponsible).

Keep your eye out for the "Locoed" editor.

Now let all these choice specimens take notice:

We will deposit one thousand or fifty thousand dollars to be covered by a like amount from them, or any one of them, and if there was ever one ounce of old bread or any other ingredient different than our selected wheat and barley with a little salt and yeast used in the making of Grape-Nuts, we will lose the money.

Our pure food factories are open at all times to visitors, and thousands pass through each month, inspecting every department and every process. Our factories are so clean that one could, with good relish, eat a meal from the floors.

The work people, both men and women, are of the highest grade in the State of Michigan, and according to the State labor reports, are the highest paid in the State for similar work.

Let us tell you exactly what you will see when you inspect the manufacture of Grape-Nuts. You will find tremendous elevators containing the choicest wheat and barley possible to buy. These grains are carried through long conveyers to grinding mills, and there converted into flour. Then the machines make selection of the proper quantities of this flour in the proper proportion and these parts are blended into a general flour which passes over to the big dough mixing machines, there water, salt and a little yeast are added and the dough kneaded the proper length of time.

Remember that previous to the barley having been ground it was passed through about one hundred hours of soaking in water, then placed on warm floors and slightly sprouted, developing the diastase in the barley, which changes the starch in the grain into a form of sugar.

Now after we have passed it into dough and it has been kneaded long enough, it is moulded by machinery into loaves about 18 inches long and 5 or 6 inches in diameter. It is put into this shape for convenience in second cooking.

These great loaves are sliced by machinery and the slices placed on wire trays, these trays, in turn, placed on great steel trucks, and rolled into the secondary ovens, each perhaps 75 or 80 feet long. There the food is subjected to a long, low heat and the starch which has not been heretofore transformed, is turned into a form of sugar generally known as Post Sugar. It can be seen glistening on the granules of Grape-Nuts if held toward the light, and this sugar is not poured over or put on the food as these prevaricators ignorantly assert. On the contrary the sugar exudes from the interior of each little granule during the process of manufacture, and reminds one of the little white particles of sugar that come out on the end of a hickory log after it has been sawed off and allowed to stand for a length of time.

This Post Sugar is the most digestible food known for human use. It is so perfect in its adaptability that mothers with very young infants will pour a little warm milk over two or three spoonfuls of Grape-Nuts, thus washing the sugar off from the granules and carrying it with the milk to the bottom of the dish. Then this milk charged with Post Sugar is fed to the infants, producing the most satisfactory results, for the baby has food that it can digest quickly and will go off to sleep well fed and contented.

When baby gets two or three months old it is the custom of some mothers to allow the Grape-Nuts to soak in the milk a little longer and become mushy, whereupon a little of the food can be fed in addition to the milk containing the washed off sugar.

It is by no means manufactured for a baby food, but these facts are stated as an illustration of a perfectly digestible food.

It furnishes the energy and strength for the great athletes. It is in common use by physicians in their own families and among their patients, and can be seen on the table of every first-class college in the land.

We quote from the London Lancet analysis as follows:

"The basis of nomenclature of this preparation is evidently an American pleasantry, since 'Grape-Nuts' is derived solely from cereals. The preparatory process undoubtedly converts the food constituents into a much more digestible condition than in the raw cereal. This is evident from the remarkable solubility of the preparation, no less than one-half of it being soluble in cold water. The soluble part contains chiefly dextrin and no starch. In appearance 'Grape-Nuts' resembles fried bread-crumbs. The grains are brown and crisp, with a pleasant taste not unlike slightly burnt malt. According to our analysis the following is the composition of 'Grape-Nuts:' Moisture, 6.02 per cent.; mineral matter, 2.01 per cent.; fat, 1.60 per cent.; proteids, 15.00 per cent.; soluble carbohydrates, etc., 49.40 per cent.; and unaltered carbohydrates (insoluble), 25.97 per cent. The features worthy of note in this analysis are the excellent proportion of proteid, mineral matters, and soluble carbohydrates per cent. The mineral matter was rich in phosphoric acid. 'Grape-Nuts' is described as a brain and nerve food, whatever that may be. Our analysis, at any rate, shows that it is a nutritive of a high order, since it contains the constituents of a complete food in very satisfactory and rich proportion and in an easily assimilable state."

An analysis made by the Canadian Government some time ago shows that Grape-Nuts contains nearly ten times the digestible elements contained in ordinary cereals, and foods, and nearly twice the amount contained in any other food analyzed.

The analysis is familiar to practically every successful physician in America and London.

We print this statement in order that the public may know the exact facts upon which we stake our honor and will back it with any amount of money that any person or corporation will put up.

We propose to follow some of these choice specimens of the tribe of Ananias.

When you hear a cooking school teacher or any other person assert that either Postum or Grape-Nuts are made of any other ingredients than those printed on the packages and as we say they are made, send us the name and address, also name of two or three witnesses, and if the evidence is clear enough to get a judgment we will right that wrong quickly.

Our business has always been conducted on as high a grade of human intelligence as we are capable of, and we propose to clear the deck of these prevaricators and liars whenever and wherever they can be found.

Attention is again called to the general and broad invitation to visitors to go through our works, where they will be shown the most minute process and device in order that they may understand how pure and clean and wholesome Grape-Nuts and Postum are.

There is an old saying among business men that there is some chance to train a fool, but there is no room for a liar, for you never can tell where you are, and we hereby serve notice on all the members of this ancient tribe of Ananias that they may follow their calling in other lines, but when they put forth their lies about Grape-Nuts and Postum, we propose to give them an opportunity to answer to the proper authorities.

The New York girl wisely said that if a person would lie about one item, it brands the whole discourse as absolutely unreliable.

Why the Mystery Tale Succeeds

By Lee F. Hartman.

THE mystery element enters to a greater or less degree into fiction of every kind. Indeed, it is the base of all literary interest. Primarily, we read a story "to see how it comes out," and, other things being equal, the story in which the element of suspense by deft construction and subtle shaping is most successfully maintained will be the most universally satisfying and popular. The mystery tale of today is a story in which the element of suspense is deliberately enlarged and emphasized until it dominates every other consideration in the story. Characterization, atmosphere, emotional values, all become subordinated to the great business of plot development. The marshalling or incident, the succession of climaxes in crescendo order, the cumulative sweep of the narrative while the secret of the outcome is carefully withheld, is the affair here. Like a periodic sentence of Titanic size, the tale is unrolled until with the concluding paragraphs the meaning of all that has gone before is made clear.—Harper's Weekly.

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

TO LOSE NO TIME

Rebuilding San Francisco—Friends Look to Her Future.

EXPERTS SENT TO THE SCENE.

To Investigate Conditions and Determine on Form of Construction Best Adapted.

New York.—That no time will be lost in the work of rebuilding San Francisco is suggested by the fact that the largest engineering and contracting firms are sending their most expert men to investigate the ruins with view of discovering which form of construction best withstood the shock. The city will require about 250,000 tons of structural steel to repair her ruins and erect new buildings, according to E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, and other authorities.

New Yorkers who have large interests at stake in that city and California residents here say without hesitation that San Francisco will be rebuilt as speedily as possible; that the city would rise from its ashes on grander lines than those of its past, and that it would be a safer and healthier city.

D. O. Mills said:

"In spite of the uncertainty one thing is sure, the city will be rebuilt. They will go ahead and build the city. They should so that earthquakes will not shake it down and so fire will not destroy it, and we will have a water system which will enable us to draw water from the sea for fire and other municipal purposes."

Archer M. Huntington, son of Collis Huntington, said:

"San Francisco is the logical metropolis west of the Rockies, and all talk of abandoning the city in favor of any other place is foolishness. I can say that the city will be rebuilt at once, and that it will be an improved city."

Isaac Guggenheim said:

"Of course San Francisco will rise again. Buildings will be put up that will not tumble down when there are earthquakes, and neither will they burn so easily, and it will be one of the most beautiful cities in the world."

F. E. Laidlaw said that commercial possibilities would take care of San Francisco's future.

"There can be no possible doubt that San Francisco will rise, Phoenix-like, from the ashes of her ruins," declared Charles Dudley Evans, president of the Wells-Fargo Express Company. "It is a question of only a few years. It will profit by the experience and the mistakes of the past as a guide, and even if there should be another earthquake there would be little to fear with the precautions that will be made to meet such a danger. Some plan must be devised which will obviate the necessity of building on the made land of the reclaimed district."

Depot Destroyed.

Pensacola, Fla.—The union depot at Brewton, Ala., was destroyed by fire. Mr. Tucker was standing near one of the chimneys after the fire, when it fell, killing him instantly.

Decision for Defendant.

Gadsden, Ala.—In the case of Mary Jones against the Curtis-Attalla Lumber Company the jury rendered a decision in favor of the defendant. Mrs. Jones sued for $3,000 for the death of her son in an explosion of a saw.

Sanguinary Encounter With Strikers.

Valenciennes, France.—A sanguinary encounter occurred between 5,000 striking miners from Denain and a detachment of troops detailed to prevent the miners from interfering with non-union men at Trith Saint Leger, about two miles from here. Many officers, miners and strikers were severely wounded.

Three Killed by Electricity.

Houston, Tex.—Mrs. Annie Blass and her son, aged 4, and T. C. Tucker were instantly killed at the home of Mrs. Blass by electricity. A live wire fell across the gutter of the Blass home, and the current was communicated to a zinc cistern. The boy went near the cistern for some water and was killed. His screams brought his mother to his aid, and both lost their lives, the three bodies being found in a heap.

Will Crown King Haakon.

Washington, D. C.—The state department has been informed that the coronation of King Haakon, of Norway, has been fixed for June 22 next.

FINANCIAL SITUATION

Discussed by Members of the San Francisco Clearing House.

Oakland, Cal.—A meeting of the members of the San Francisco clearing house was held here to discuss the financial situation, to consider the future of the banks and to prepare some plan to be submitted to the State Clearing Association, which will meet here. The state bank commissioners have reported all of the banks of the State in splendid condition, but it is believed that the situation demands that some unusual action be taken to prevent any distressing disturbance.

The advisability of having the government pay out money from the San Francisco mint on telegraphic orders was considered. The idea of the members was that it might be best to order a general suspension of banking business in the state until a safe readjustment of monetary matters has been reached.

Jelks Asks People to Help 'Frisco.

Montgomery, Ala.—Gov. W. D. Jelks returned to Montgomery from Decatur, where the first news of the San Francisco disaster reached him. He has issued the following proclamation:

"Whereas, a calamity unparalleled in our history has fallen upon our sister state of California, bringing untold want and suffering in its wake.

"Now, therefore, I William D. Jelks, as governor of Alabama, do hereby call upon our ever-generous people to contribute, through the mayors of their respective towns and cities, from the great prosperity and numerous blessings we enjoy to the relief of our unhappy and unfortunate neighbors.

"Done at the capitol, in the city of Montgomery, this, the 20th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1906, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirtieth.

"W. D. JELKS, Governor.

"By the governor:
"E. R. M'DAVID,
"Secretary of State."

Fire Underwriters.

Oakland, Cal.—An important meeting of the San Francisco Fire Underwriters was held at its permanent headquarters at Reed's hall, at Twelfth and Harrison streets.

The sense of the meeting was that the impression should not be given out that the insurance companies had money to throw away, or that any losses would be paid until they had been properly adjusted, and only such losses as the companies are responsible for will be paid.

This matter was brought to the attention of the board by Rollo V. Watt, manager of the Royal and Queens Insurance Companies. He said: "I met ex Mayor Phelan on the street yesterday, and he asked me to give out some sort of a notice to the public that their losses would be paid. I do not believe that this is the proper thing, and I told him so. The companies I represent will pay what they are liable for and no more, and it is better for those whose spirits are drooping to allow them to droop rather than to buoy them up with false hopes."

The sentiment was generally concurred in.

From the remark made there is no doubt that the companies will draw a fine distinction between the loss by earthquake and that by fire, and will only pay for what was actually burned.

The question of property devastated by dynamite was not touched upon, and will probably be the cause of endless litigation.

Roebling to Rebuild.

New York.—A special to the Times from Trenton, N. J., says: "The John A. Roebling & Sons Company, of this city, whose store and warehouse were destroyed in San Francisco, have decided to rebuild at once."

William J. Thompson Killed.

Birmingham, Ala.—Wm. J. Thompson, city sanitary officer and a member of the police department for the past eight years, was fatally shot Saturday morning at 6:45 o'clock by H. S. Robertson, a street guard in the employ of the city. The shooting occurred at the Southside prison, corner Avenue D and Nineteenth street.

Killed by a Train.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Andrew Gregg, a Southern railway watchman and special deputy sheriff, met instant death near this city. He had ridden up the line on a freight train in the discharge of duty, and in alighting therefrom stepped in front of a passenger train.

Runs Amuck With a Knife.

Chicago, Ill.—Thomas Krizenk, who was bitten by a dog, was apparently seized with hydrophobia while at work in the plant of the Standard Slaughtering Company and, armed with a large butcher knife, he drove the 100 employes of the stablishment into the street. He was finally captured and taken to the hospital bound with ropes.

Work Completed.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The United Mine Workers' international executive board has completed its work and adjourned. Secretary-Treasurer W. B. Wilson, of the miners, said that no strike assessment had been levied on the membership now at work, but the board provided that an assessment could be levied as soon as it was thought necessary.

According to an estimate made by President Mitchell and Secretary-Treasurer Wilson approximately 110,000 union miners will be at work next week. The total membership of the organization is 400,000. The 110,000 members who are at work could be subjected to a strike assessment for the other 290,000, but Secretary-Treasurer W. B. Wilson said that it was not regarded necessary to take such a step at this time. The action of the board would indicate that its members expect a change in the situation in favor of the miners within a month or so.

Will Reach $10,000,000.

New York.—The voiceless appeal of San Francisco has been heard throughout the civilized world. From every city and town in this country, from European capitals and from far eastern communities comes news that all humanity in expressing its sympathy is also offering every material assistance. Money and supplies are flowing toward the stricken California metropolis and the other cities of the Pacific coast affected by the recent disaster with a generosity unprecedented in history.

From the incomplete figures of the contributions which have been made it was estimated here Saturday that the San Francisco fund is rapidly nearing the total of $10,000,000, and will have passed that amount by Monday, when the United States congress, it is announced, will add $1,500,000 to the $1,000,000 already appropriated from the treasury at Washington.

Three Million From Boston.

Boston, Mass.—At a mass meeting here a motion that efforts be made to raise a total of $3,000,000 in Massachusetts for the relief of California sufferers was adopted unanimously by a rising vote.

Newspapers Resume Business.

Oakland, Cal.—The San Francisco daily newspapers, all of which were burned out, are gradually getting in shape to serve their subscribers. On Thursday morning, the day after the fire, the best showing the morning journals could make was a small combination sheet, bearing the unique heading, "Call-Chronicle-Examiner." It was set up and printed in the office of the Oakland Tribune, gave a brief account of the great disaster, and took an optimistic view of the future of the stricken city.

Friday and Saturday the papers, though still printed in Oakland, appeared under their own headings, and with a few illustrations showing scenes in the streets of San Francisco. It is expected that within a short time they will be able to replace their plants and present their former appearance.

Editors in El Paso.

El Paso, Tex.—Members of the California Press Association who have been making a tour of Mexico arrived here on a special train from the City of Mexico and left at once over the Santa Fe for California. Since the disaster at San Francisco and other places in California the excursion has been unable to get any messages from home.

Senatorship to Z. V. Peacock.

Cochran, Ga.—Z. V. Peacock was nominated for the senate in the Fourteenth district over M. T. Hodge and M. H. Boyer, receiving more votes than the combined opposition. Mr. Peacock is a successful business man.

Bankers Will Go to Prison.

Abilene, Tex.—O. W. Steffins and J. G. Lowden, who were charged with wrecking the First National Bank of Abilene, were convicted and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary at Atlanta. Lowden was the republican nominee for governor of Texas in the last election.

Five Buildings Burn.

Cincinnati, O.—The Boys' Protectory, a Catholic institution under the care of the Order of St. Francis, located near Delhi, west of this city, burned, causing a loss of $300,000. About 200 boys were cared for in the institution. Five buildings, including the school, church, dwelling and dairy, were destroyed. The loss was fully covered by insurance.

Appear to Be Unfounded.

The Hague.—The rumors which reached New York of the eruption of the volcano on the Island of Krakatoa, in the Strait of Sunday, and of earthquake shocks in Java appear to be unfounded.

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

ROBBERY ATTEMPTED.

Two Men Wanted to Get Money From Gadsden Street Railway Office.

Gadsden, Ala.—At an early hour Friday morning the police surprised two men who were trying to force an entrance to the office of the Alabama City, Gadsden and Attalla railway office. The officers heard a noise in that direction and were attempting to slip up on the men, when they broke and ran. One shot was fired at them without effect.

At the place where the men were endeavoring to force an entrance to the office there is a chute provided for the convenience of the street car conductors, in which they drop the fares collected after the office has been closed. The chute carries the money into a strong box, and to secure this was the object of the burglars. A large piece of iron pipe was being used as a lever, and this was dropped and made the noise which attracted the policemen.

Makes Novel Decision.

Huntsville, Ala.—In the case of Thomas Martin, charged with robbing the postoffice at Kelly Station, Ala., Judge Boarman, of the United States court, decided an unusual point of law. The only evidence of the prosecution was that furnished by bloodhounds, which were placed on the supposed trail of the robber a few hours after the crime. The dogs went at once to the home of the defendant and attacked him in a savage manner.

All other evidence of guilt against the defendant was lacking. Judge Boarman held that the government should be required to prove that the tracks followed by the dogs were made by the man who robbed the postoffice. This could not be proved, so the charge against Martin was dismissed. The robbery was committed about two years ago, and Martin has been under bond since that time.

Saw Mill Burned.

Brewton, Ala.—Fire broke out in the Lindsey Lumber Company's saw mill in Pollard, destroying the entire plant, consisting of saw mill, planer, sheds, camps and shingle mill, together with about 350,000 feet of lumber and 100,000 shingles. Fire started near the center of the mill, presumably from sparks.

The plant gave employment to about 200 men, and was one of the largest in the county. It is a serious loss to Pollard, as the town is largely dependent upon it for support. The company will rebuild at once. A large part of the mill was new, two fine boilers being fired Saturday for the first time.

The loss is estimated at $125,000, with only small insurance. A local Louisville and Nashville passenger engine moved a number of box and flat cars from the mill siding, preventing their destruction.

Clayton Renominated.

Columbus, Ga.—In the Third Alabama district Henry D. Clayton was renominated for congress, defeating his opponent, the Rev. Harry L. Martin, by a heavy majority. Reports received here indicate Clayton carried all nine counties in the district. He carried Dale, Martin's home county, by 250 majority. He received a heavy majority in Lee and Russell counties.

In the Russell county, Alabama, primary Homer R. Dudley and W. J. Price were nominated for representatives, Dudley leading the ticket. P. M. Daniel was nominated for sheriff. There were three candidates for sheriff.

Farmer's Son Hurt.

Birmingham, Ala.—Virgie Downs, a 15-year-old boy, who resides near Lewisburg, was dangerously injured by being kicked by a horse. He was out plowing in a field, when the horse, which had always been regarded as a particularly gentle animal, became excited for some reason and kicked the youth on the forehead.

Shot to Death.

Gadsden, Ala.—Amos Phillips, a young man about 20 years old, was shot and killed by unknown parties near the Rome and Decatur depot about 11 o'clock Thursday night. Bert and Charlie Water, both young men, have been arrested and held on the charge.

Coroner Woodliff is holding an inquest, but so far absolutely no evidence to throw light on who did the murder has been brought out. Reefe Nelson reported the killing to the police. The men were heard passing there. Five shots were fired, and two men ran away. Phillips was shot in the neck and lived about twenty minutes.

Medical Association.

Birmingham, Ala.—The thirty-third annual convention of the Medical Association of the State of Alabama adjourned Friday afternoon shortly before 5 o'clock, after a four days' session, to meet in Mobile next year. The large attendance which had marked the success of the previous sessions was at the meeting Friday, and so much interest was shown by the delegates that an adjournment for dinner was not taken.

Friday was devoted to the business of the association. In the morning the report of the board of censors was read and discussed, and immediately after that the proposed constitution was presented to the convention by Senior Censor W. H. Sanders. Every section of the new law was read and discussed. It was accepted with a few amendments.

The election of officers began at 3 o'clock and lasted for nearly two hours. The following officers were elected and installed:

President—Dr. George T. McWhorter, of Riverton.

Vice-president—Dr. Andrew J. Coley, of Alexander City.

Secretary—D. J. N. Baker, of Montgomery, re-elected.

Censors to fill vacancies—Drs. D. F. Talley, of Birmingham, and J. R. D. Howell, of Dothan.

Orator—Dr. Toulman Gaines, of Mobile.

Alternate orator—Dr. J. B. Killebrew, of Mobile.

College council—Dr. W. R. Jackson, of Mobile; Dr. E. B. Ward, of Selma; Dr. A. A. Green, of Anniston; Dr. J. D. S. Davis, of Birmingham; Dr. E. J. Conyngton, of Decatur, and Dr. J. M. Ray, of Woodstock.

The terms of the senior vice-president and the treasurer do not expire for two years.

Grand Jury Report Returned.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The United States court, which has been in session here during the whole of the week, has disposed of a number of cases and is still in session. The report of the grand jury has been returned, and in this the members of that body express great appreciation of the character of Judge Jones' charge to them. They especially referred to the historical part of his charge and his interesting refernces to the occasion of the meeting of this court here about sixty years ago. The number of true bills found by the grand jury was small, possibly due to the fact that there has been no United States commissioner here for some time to aid in the detection and investigation of offenses.

New Decatur Chautauqua.

New Decatur, Ala.—The Chautauqua which began here last Thursday has continued to grow more in attendance and enthusiasm till the prospects are bright for a very successful session. The prominent feature of the program Saturday was the address by Prof. Edwin S. Wiley, of the Vanderbilt University, Nashville, and the piano recital by the child artist, Theresa Wallen, of this city. On Sunday Dr. Stagg, D. D., of Birmingham, conducted services in the regular Chautauqua course. Senator Tillman delivered a lecture on Monday.

Southern Depot Burns.

Sheffield, Ala.—The Southern railroad depot at Florence, with all its contents and seven freight cars, burned Friday morning. Telegraphic wires are down and details cannot be learned.

Arm Cut Off by Saw.

Columbiana, Ala.—Willie Blackerly, an 18-year-old boy, had his arm cut off while working in a saw mill twelve miles north of this place Thursday afternoon.

While working on the roof of a house Tolliver Taylor fell and broke his ankle Monday afternoon.

Half Million in Securities Stolen.

Montgomery, Ala.—J. D. Hand, mill operator of Baldwin couty, resident of Bay Minette, was robbed in Montgomery of securities which he says are valued at approximately $500,000, and the Montgomery police are searching the country for a tall white man, wearing a slouch hat, who is believed to have taken a leather satchel containing the securities from the hall of W. A. Collier at 414 Bibb street while Mr. Hand was at supper with Mr. Collier.

Postmasters Appointed.

SCIENCE NOTES.

It has been discovered that by the use of acetylene gas in a blowpipe much higher temperatures can be obtained than are available with the ordinary oxyhydrogen blowpipe. The latter gives from 3600 to 4500 degrees; the former more than 7000 degrees.

In an alloy of gold and copper, copper distils first. In an alloy of gold and tin, the tin distils more abundantly than the gold, and when a large quantity of these mixed vapors is taken, the tin burns on contact with the oxygen of the air, forming oxid of tin, colored purple by a fine dust of condensed gold. This is an unexpected method of preparing the color known as "purple of Cassius."

Near to Umtali, in Rhodesia, the remains of a buried city, supposed to be the ancient Agysimba of Ptolemy, have been discovered. There are ancient forts and altars near by, and evidently the forgotten city was built by some race other than the one now dwelling near the ruins. The stones of houses, walls and altars are laid without cement, and resemble the "cyclopean" structure found in Central America.

Limestone island is the center of the New Zealand cement industry. It is about 100 square miles in area, and is wholly composed of hydraulic limestones. It was reported on originally by Sir James Hector for the New Zealand government as an island of hydraulic limestone of a quantity practically unlimited, and estimated to contain over 30,000,000 tons above water level. Beneath the limestone there is believed to be coal, and for this borings are now going on.

A scientist says of a waterspout that passed over a certain district in France last summer: "Its passage was accompanied with a sound which is described as resembling that of a battery of artillery drawn on the gallop over a paved street. At the base of an extended nimbus hung the reversed cone characteristic of phenomena of this kind. A strong wind was then blowing from the south-southwest. The waterspout was preceded by a storm and followed by a shower."

The Paris municipal authorities are extending their street-lighting trials with "lusol," a hydrocarbon recovered as a by-product in making blast-furnace coke. The light is said to be even softer than that from alcohol; and a 100-candle lamp of the type hitherto employed costs only a farthing per hour, while the domestic lusol lamp gives double the light at half the cost of a good paraffin lamp. One great use of the new illuminant will be to form a reserve in case of unforeseen gas or electric light extinction.

Scientists are again on the trail of the "missing link." Two years ago certain marks were found on a block of sandstone near Warrnambool, in Australia, which were thought to be the imprints of the footsteps of a prehistoric man. At the time this idea was ridiculed; but a plaster cast was sent to Germany, and the inevitable German savant went out to investigate the matter. He now reports that, in his opinion, they were genuine human imprints, and this, taken in conjunction with the extraordinary human skulls to be seen in the Warrnambool Museum, is supposed to show that a link between humanity and the ape has been discovered.

The modern yellow magazine is yet lower than the old "yellowback" ever was.

LITTLE THINGS Worth Knowing

A Wilkesbarre (Pa.) man has carried a one-inch nail in his neck for twenty-six years.

Hereafter British members of Parliament will be able to get a twenty-five cent dinner in the House restaurant if they don't wish to pay more.

Dainty little india-rubber boots are now offered for sale in London for the "feet" of toy terriers or other dogs that may be the pets or wealthy mistresses. These are tied round the legs with silk cords

The report of the proceedings of the House of Lords used to be considered a breach of privilege, but in 1831 galleries were erected for the use of reporters, although it was not until 1835 that they were erected in the House of Commons.

Ballarat, Australia, has just celebrated the golden jubilee of its municipal existence. In the course of the jubilee banquet it was stated that in the half century gold of the value of $360,000,000 had been taken out within a radius of three miles around the Ballarat city hall.

The extent of New Bedford's interest in the whaleships that are believed to be caught in the Arctic ice trap, between Baille Island and Point Barrow, can be measured by the fact that of the 440 men on the whalers about 100 live in New Bedford and neighboring towns.

At one time the London Zoo had a standing offer of $5000 for a good adult male giraffe. Not only are the animals scarce in Africa, but the work of transporting them oversea is the despair of every wild beast importer. And even when after infinite solicitude and care they landed safely in New York, Hamburg or London, they are apt to die.

It is a curious coincidence in connection with the re-election of Mr. Lloyd-George for the Carnarven District that when the returning officer ascertained the figures the illuminated clock outside the Town Hall, where the counting took place, gave by its time the exact majority to the thousands of people who were waiting outside—viz., 12.24 p. m., the majority being 1224.

Sometimes it pays a man to keep his wife posted as to his business. "A Coffeeville man," says the Journal of that Kansas town, "advertised in a local paper that he would like to buy a second-hand lawn mower. He received an answer which struck him favorably, and after corresponding some time found out that his wife was trying to sell him their old lawn mower to get money for Christmas presents."

A "Supermarine" Boat.

A novel form of high-speed boat has recently been devised by a French engineer, M. de Lambert, which involves a radical departure from all previous designs of hull. It is termed a "skating," or "supermarine," boat, for it is constructed to glide along the surface of the water rather than experience resistance by being immersed and passing through. This is accomplished by means of five inclined planes which are fixed on the the bottom of the hull, and which, when the boat is at rest, are a few inches in the water. When the engine is started the hull is raised, so that the boat runs with less resistance on the inclined planes, which then rest on a mixture of air and water.

With a twelve horse-power petroleum motor it is reported that a speed of from twenty-six to twenty-eight knots an hour can be made, a rate not always attained by motor-boats with eighty horse-power engines. The new boat is also capable of being handled with considerable facility and stopped readily.

The attainment of high speed by motor-boats which run on the surface of the water, rather than through it, has attracted some attention lately, and an English high-speed boat was built where this idea was considered in designing the hull, but the use of the inclined planes to diminish the resistance as carried out is quite novel, and will doubtless be tried further.—Harper's Weekly.

Private Island in the Pacific.

Off the southern coast of California out in the Pacific Ocean is a string of interesting islands, the chief of which are nine in number. The principal island of the group is named Santa Catalina; it is twenty-two miles long and contains 55,000 acres. Practically the whole of the island is owned by the Banning Company, which has its headquarters at Los Angeles on the mainland of California. About forty lots, however, on the island are owned by private persons, each of whom has a right of way from the water's edge to his own piece of land. But he may not go to the right or left of his own land, for he would be trespassing on private property. He cannot even walk along the seashore, as the path was constructed by and belongs to the Banning Company. He cannot visit the town of Avalon, its shops, hotels, or restaurants, because to reach them he must trespass on the company's property. To get his letters he must row down to the postoffice and receive them from a window opening toward the ocean. As a result of this peculiar state of affairs and of the extremely hilly nature of the island some of the approaches to the houses call for strenuous exertion.—London Tatler.

...acres of public domain in ...olen by the cattle men and ...ave been restored to the ...main and thrown open to ...ment, and it is hoped by the Philadelphia Record that before Secretary Hitchcock gets through with his war on the illegal fences he will recover three million acres. These cattle men generally make some pretense of conformity with law; their hired men go through the forms of homesteading a piece of ground, and as soon as they get title they assign it to their employers. But sometimes the cattle men simply stretch their barbed wire fences over the ground they find it convenient to use. It was in Nebraska that a Federal Judge last fall sentenced two men who had confessed to fencing about 225,000 acres of public land to be committed to the custody of the Marshal for six hours, and he at once surrendered them to their own attorneys; but the Government is recovering its property.

Representing the world is rather a difficult and complex business, and the confusion of counsel is somewhat perplexing, but the enthusiasm of some young idealists is altogether admirable. Even mistaken and muddleheaded idealism is better than none at all, admits the New York World. We should not care much for a world that was peopled entirely by fishy-eyed, cold-blooded individualists of the type commonly described as "practical." The idealism of the Statesmen and Patriots is at least in refreshing contrast with the sordid complacency of a young John D. Rockefeller. Yet we may beseech them to leave something for posterity to do. If the world is too perfect and positively has nothing to struggle against it will become sloth-ful and well decay. Regeneration will have been in vain and society's last stage will be worse than the first.

Don't you fool yourself; there are many things Lee wants more than a wife, though as for that there are many girls longing for an opportunity to say "yes" to Lee. He is looking for a wife who will be worthy, but he'll have to hustle to find her. We need more such men as Lee in our vicinity, and it is "get him girls, who can," for he is all right.....Well, I know the editor is wearied and hopes that I'll remain silent for a while, but if he'll permit me I'll come again. Consider yourself invited. Editor Union.)

"ONE FORSAKEN."

MARS HILL.

Editor Union:

Here I am again after a short absence with a few of the happenings in this "neck of the woods." We are flourishing in almost every sense of the word. Our S. S. is doing nicely under the faithful management of Supt. J. M. Gothard. Our local Farmers' Union is working well and doing good to us "clod hoppers," and of course you know we all need help. Brethren of THE UNION, we need to get in the way of making our own stock feed and not depend on the northern farmer for our corn and hay. Let's follow Bro. Sorrell's advice and raise hay. The time is here when we as farmers (or pretended farmers) must farm in a business and practical way, and not go on the way of trying to make a success on "hope" alone. Our singing Sunday afternoon was a grand success. Frank Lowery, of Providence, was with us, and of course was one of our leaders, singing in his usual gentle way. Tom Matthews (the noted bass of this country) was here accompanied by his daughter, Miss Nettie. Misses Dora Clemens and Maudie Cost and younger sister were visitors to our singing. A. D. Gentry, our popular mail carrier, made a short but interesting talk to the old people as well as the boys and girls. Several leaders were on the floor, to-wit: G. W. Gothard, G. W. Scott and Preston Cofer and the singing was harmony itself. M. W. and C. W. Scott with their wives paid a visit to relatives in Bibb county Saturday and Sunday. Two weeks' pretty weather has got the most of us up with our work. Corn about all planted and pretty near all the cotton. I say Bessie is coming to the front. A telephone line is running from E. G. Cofer's to Randolph and brings us right in touch with town and they talk of extending it to Jemison, which would be still better. Watch out, Judge, the C—— boys are visiting up the road very often. Best wishes to THE UNION and its numerous readers.

"THE OLD MAN."

EAST BESSIE.

Nice weather and people well up with their work so far. Jim Pate reports seeing a "Bell buzzard" flying over at 10:30 a. m. Thursday. G. S. Rasberry happened to a bad accident on the 16th inst., his foot slipped off the hub of his wagon wheel and he fell on his broken leg. He's not able to walk now, but we all hope he will soon recover. A. D. Gentry, of Jemison, vsited his parents Saturday night and was at our singing on Sunday, and made us a nice talk which was highly appreciated and we want him to come again. J. F. Lowery, of Providence, was with us also, and led a nice lesson in singing, which was enjoyed by all, and we invite him to come again. J. P. Barrett and wife, of Thorsby, visited G. S. Rasberry's Saturday.

BRIGHT STAR.

PLEASANT GROVE.

Editor Union:

Here I am again with a few words about this community. Health is good, though we're having very cool weather for April. Mrs. J. L. Thomas, of Jemison, was a pleasant visitor to Albert Patterson's family Saturday and Sunday. A. Patterson and daughter, Miss Selma, visited friends and relatives near Clanton the past week. The letter in last week's Union from West Chilton was most interesting and I'll say come again, "Little J." Our mail carrier on Jemison route 1. says he's just received a letter from his Joseph S. Thomas, who lives in New York, and we know his people in Chilton would like to hear about him, as he has been away about 40 years. He is a steamboat pilot and has been for the past five years. He was proud ineed to hear that his mother, Mrs. Mary J. Thomas, was still living, and will write to her in a few days. Mr. Thomas lives at Hoboken, N. J., just across the Hudson river from New York city. Now, we have written this so that his people in Chilton that take THE UNION may be able to hear from him at once. Rev. J. H. Thomas filled his regular appointment here last Saturday and Sunday, with a large congregation present on Sunday. Old Pleasant Grove church is bound to have a new organ in a few weeks, one that all will be delighted to hear. A new organ will be so much help to our singers. The old one has outlived its usefulness. Now, let our S. S. go to work. Just say to yourselves, "We must have a new organ," and I'm sure you'll get it. J. A. Cobb, of Bessemer, was at home last Sunday on a visit and was at church. We all welcomed the young man, and would be glad indeed if he could be with us every Sunday in our S. S., which is growing better every Sunday. Success to THE UNION and its many readers.

"GREEN HORN."

JUST A VOTER.

Well, Mr. Editor, I've been so busy planting my crop that I could not write and as I've said I'm saving my ammunition for larger game, but I'm about to get overloaded, so I'll shoot a single barrel just for fun. I think I'll tell you about some of the great advantages that we have here in Clanton. You see, we are building up so fast here that no one can understand it, but when we come to think of what great advantages we have we can only wonder that we haven't built faster. Just think, we've Bibles and "speak easy's," Theologians and thieves, politicians and poverty, Christians and chain-gangs, money and misery, virtue and vice. Right here in Clanton we can get a good Bible for 15 cents and a drink of bad whisky for 5 cents; we have a newspaper that is paid for suppressing the truth, and makes money by telling a lie. Yes, we even have folks who want to pay the preacher to dodge the devil and tickle the ears of the fancy. This is the place where trust holds up and poverty holds down. Oh, what great privileges we have; our women can wear false hair and our men "dock" their horses' tails. This is the place where men vote for a thing one day and "cuss" it the next. Here we can take a fellow in the court house and convict him, and on the way to jail we can stop him at the church and give him religion with out going out of our way. Yes, to be honest here is to be called a crank No wonder our town looks more like New York every day. Say, boys, come to us, of course some of these advantages I speak of we have to pay license for, but the most important are free; you can sell all the whisky you want to without any license, and other things also. Say, what has become of politics? Is it possible that Bro. Hawthorn will have it all to himself this time? Where are the populists and republicans? I notice that Criton has said to call the democrats together and start the ball to rolling, and it made me sad to think what a mighty small ball it would be that Criton could start rolling. I really wonder if the demmies have any idea of running a ticket this year. Look here, what is the matter with Collins chapel? Have they gone democratic? I noticed when their school closed they had mostly democrats; of course, they kinder sideways invited some populists, but the special (?) invitations went to democrats. Well, I hear they had a nice time, and I'm glad to see the demmies have a nice time now, for when politics get started they won't have much to rejoice over. Then we populists and republicans will have everything coming our way and the demmies will have to hide out. Let me tell you, democrats, that it will take more than a few talks to children to represent this county in the Legislature. We've had the holy land racket and that failed, and the philanthropy racket will go under also. That old fellow in Coosa hit it about right when he said "too late."

Do you know I think there is a little fire in that district, but I'm looking out for a warm time this fall. You pops and republicans get your fighting clothes on, and "Keep your powder dry." Look out, Collins chapel don't let the wolves get in under cover of a sheep skin. Well, this will do for this. A little later I'll give you both barrels.

"JUST A VOTER."

Clanton, April 23, 1906.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

Editor Union:

Health in this community is good and our farmers are busy planting cotton, and hoping for a good shower. Our S. S. is in good condition. Miss Bessie Ellis, from Rockford, will teach our summer school. Rev. B. H. Vickers will preach here next Sunday at 11 a. m. Mrs. J. Wiley Foshee returned home Saturday from a week's visit to friends and relatives at Longview. W. J. Armstrong and E. H. Foshee visited here Sunday. Several of our young people attended the singing at New Salem Sunday evening and report an enjoyable time. Look out, Judge, don't let any of our boys take you by surprise, though when a young fellow gets left-handed and cross-eyed you know things are getting warm. Come on, ye writer from Pletcher, your letter was good. I'm in a hurry to read "Just a Voter's" piece next week. Success to THE UNION and its readers.

JUST A SUBSCRIBER.

CEDAR GROVE.

Our farmers are getting along nicely with their work at present. Rev. T. J. Ledbetter filled his regular appointment here Sunday and had a good audience. Our S. S. is getting along fine and we hope it will continue to prosper. J. P. Barrett and wife spent Saturday with the latter's parents, about 4 miles northwest of Jemison. J. M. Poole has gone to Marbury to do carpenter work for the mill there. We wish him good luck. J. W. Hays has completed his new house at last, and wants everybody in the county to pass by and take a peep at it. He says it "looks like a hypocrit, all diked up on the outside, and not so much on the inside," and to come up on the back side "it looks like a mustang pony with a $40 saddle on its back." W. A. Hays is following suit and has built an addition and painted it and it looks all O. K. Now, boys, a few words about THE UNION, there is so many good pieces in it that we all want to see Thursday come so as to get to read the news. Now about our other union we wish we could see the benefit of the organization as some do, though I don't know whether all are like ours or not, but we go to our union meeting and talk and talk and tell what we ought to do and how to do it, but still we want the other fellow to try it first, so if there is any loss he will be the one to get it. Now if any of us are guilty let's stop now, and all pull together and we'll do better.

"TOBY."

FALAKTO.

The health of our community is fairly good, but our farmers are badly behind with their crops. Tom Wilson said there was good preaching at Maple Spring Sunday and that it would do some of the bad boys good to go. J. D. Parker and wife visited Mr. and Mrs. John W. Harris' Sunday. Miss D. Wilson and mother visited Clanton Saturday. W. W. was with his best girl Sunday. I think the egg-hunting was enjoyed by all on Easter Sunday. John Mims is badly off with a mashed foot, but we all hope it will soon be better. Doc Brant, on his way to Cooper last week, says he shot at a turkey several times, but failed to get it. Well, I'd better pull out, as this is my first time, but if the people will read it I'll come again.

A BAD BOY.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

B. L. and J. N. Martin were pleasant visitors Thursday.

J. M. Mims and C. C. Burnett were in Clanton Thursday.

Judge Reynolds and Col. A. C. Smith went to Columbiana Friday to look over Shelby county's "marble hall."

Attorney W. M. Adams was in Montgomery Friday attending to the "habeas corpus" writ for Jeff Shelton, colored, before Chancellor Whitesides. The man's bail was reduced from $1,000 to $400, which was given and he is now at large.

Joseph Burnett and B. M. Maddox were welcome callers Saturday.

Rev. B. H. Vickers passed through Clanton Saturday on his way to preach at Poplar Springs. Little Miss Esther, who is getting on nicely now, was with him. Mr. Vickers preaches at Mount Pleasant this next Sunday (29th).

J. R. Robinson was in town Saturday.

Commissioner Moses Robinson was in Clanton Saturday. He is picking up fast after his recent severe illness.

J. E. Littlejohn, Sr., was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

T. J. Baxley was in Clanton Saturday. Mr. Baxley only recently moved here from Coosa county, and is settled near Mt. Pleasant school house.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Crumpton, of Jemison, were visitors Saturday and Sunday to their son here, Dr. J. P. Crumpton.

J. A. Campbell, of Beat 1, was in Clanton on business Tuesday and paid THE UNION office a pleasant call.

Judge L. H. Reynolds went to Montgomery Tuesday, where he will represent Chilton county in the state S. S. convention.

Prof. E. J. Calloway was in Clanton Sunday.

J. A. Boockholdt was in town Monday.

There was a very pleasant time had at Col. A. C. Smith's residence on last Saturday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock. The occasion was the celebration of little Miss Rilla Smith's natal day, she having arrived at the venerable age of ten years. There was a large number of her little friends present, and they were regaled with "cake and ambrosia." The Union wishes her "many happy returns of the day."

Prof. A. L. Grant was in Clanton Saturday on a visit to his father, J. J. Grant. The professor is on the waiting list of railroad telegraphers, having passed his examination last week with great credit.

A. C. Maddox and Bennie Taylor were in Clanton Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Best were in town Tuesday.

Newt Gentry was a pleasant visitor Tuesday and says he is piling up some good logs at his saw mill.

Elbert Littlejohn has just gotten in a fine assortment of glassware and is selling it fast.

Have you got your savings bank yet? If not, get one and put it to work.

C. O. Denton was tried in the county court last week for petit larceny;" pleaded guilty, sentence 10 days' hard labor for the county. He was also charged with "carrying concealed weapons;" plea of guilty, fine $50.00. The fine not being paid he will work for the T. C. and I. Co. some time.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Maddox on April 19th, a fine boy, weight 12 1-2 pounds. Dr. N. S. Johnson was in attendance and mother and child are doing well.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKee, a fine girl on April 23d. Dr. N. S. Johnson, who attended the case, says "mother and daughter both doing well."

F. E. & C. U. OF A. EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

To the Local and County Unions throughout Alabama—Greeting:

You are hereby called upon to meet either in delegated form or in mass meeting. Also to see that all men and women of your respective counties and communities are aroused, as this is an opportunity that may not come again. You will assemble at the following times and places and will be addressed by one or more of our state officers on the plans and purposes of the Farmers' Union. It is our intention to secure to the farmer the right to price the products of their labor. We now have ware houses in several counties and are building in a number of others, and expect before the products of the farm begin to be placed on the market to be ready to handle the entire crop of our membership, which, if properly done, will be sufficient to dictate an equitable price and secure the same to all our members, and we appeal to you as union men to insist upon your non-union neighbors to come out and hear these discussions.

The dates and places can not be changed, as this is a tremendous undertaking and can only be carried out by the hearty co-operation of the entire membership. The executive committee of each county is expected to do all in their power to make each meeting a success. Provide all the conveniences possible at each place and arrange to have a good time. If any county union should have a meeting already arranged near any of the following dates, they will at once see to it that their dates and places are changed, if they wish to enjoy the benefits to be derived by these rallies as questions of vital importance will be discussed and great questions will be brought before the public. There will also be an executive session held at each appointment for getting our plans before the membership. Remember that we can not under any circumstances change the dates, as they are arranged to follow each other in such a way as to cover the entire State at the very least possible expense. Our ablest speakers will be with you. Lay down your work for one day and come out.

F. E. AND C. U. OF A.

Dear Brothers:

We ask that every union man in the county turn out on May 17th at Thorsby to the public speaking in the interest of the F. E. and C. U. of A. Now, boys, as this meeting is to be at a place where we have no local union as yet, it is the duty of all to come prepared to supply the people with dinner. We hope the county will be fully represented, so boys don't fail to come. Let's make it the biggest day since the birth of the union in Chilton, and also be prepared to swell the day at 12 o'clock. Yours for that day,

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800: won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

Bank Your Saving's With a Safe Bank.

Every man, woman and child, no matter where they live, should have a savings account with the Citizens' Savings bank of Birmingham, for the following reasons:

It is the only bank of importance in the state which confines its banking business strictly to savings accounts and accepts no commercial business. The banking laws of Alabama provide that where a bank doing both a savings and general banking business becomes insolvent, the depositors who had not stipulated for interest (commercial) will have preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings—in other words, the savings depositors can't be paid a cent until the commercial depositors have been paid in full.

We take no trade risks; all our loans are made on first class improved real estate mortgages or other gilt-edge collateral security—our motto being "The strength of a bank is in its individual loans."

These things, backed up by our cash capital and responsibility of our board of directors and the long and successful experiences of our officers in the banking business, renders this bank as safe as United States bonds.

Bank with us by mail. It is easy and safe. Write for information.

EARTHQUAKE WRECKS SAN FRANCISCO

Terrible Loss of Life---Buildings Collapse---Water Mains Choked---Fires Break Out---Wide-spread Disaster.

Survivors Fled For Their Lives Save Those Who Heroically Cared For the Wounded and Dead---The City in an Indescribable State of Panic

San Francisco, Cal.—The greatest earthquake ever recorded in this country, followed by a fire which has swept over eight square miles of the very heart of San Francisco, caused the loss of from 500 to 1000 lives and swept away $100,000,0000 worth of the most valuable property in the city.

With San Francisco as its heart and centre, the earthquake has spread ruin and disaster through a region having a radius of nearly a hundred miles.

San Jose, nearly sixty miles to the south, has been wrecked, and villages even farther south have been partially destroyed, while inland for a hundred miles and ninety miles to the north loss of life and great property damage have been caused.

California's two great centres of learning, the University of California and the Leland Stanford University, have been wrecked. Great buildings of the Leland Stanford University are reported to have been toppled to the ground by three shocks of the earthquake, and the University of California has been partially ruined. The Insane Asylum at Agnews is a ruin and the inmates have escaped.

The loss of life outside of San Francisco has not even been estimated. Wires are down in all directions outside of the city, and only the most meagre details are to be obtained.

Nearly 100,000 people are homeless and many are huddled in the parks and public squares beside the household goods they were able to save.

The city is under martial law, and all the downtown streets are patrolled by cavalry and infantry. Details of troops are also guarding the banks. Almost all the principal buildings have been destroyed, and others are in imminent danger.

Over all the scene of desolation hangs a dense pall of smoke. In Oakland five persons were killed. San Jose and Sacramento, Berkeley, Alameda and other places heard from suffered severely, but report no loss of life.

It was 5.13 a. m. when a terrific earthquake shock shook the whole city and surrounding country. One shock apparently lasted two minutes, and there was almost immediate collapse of flimsy structures all over the city.

The water supply was cut off, and when fires started in various sections there was nothing to do but let the buildings burn. Telegraph and telephone communication was cut off for a time.

The Western Union was out completely out of business and the Postal Company was the only one that managed to get a wire out of the city. About 10 o'clock even the Postal was forced to suspend.

Electric power was stopped and street cars did not run, railroads and ferryboats also ceased operations. The various fires raged all day and the fire department has been powerless to do anything except dynamite buildings threatened. All day long explosions have shaken the city and added to the terror of the inhabitants.

Following the first shock there was another within five minutes, but not nearly so severe. Three hours later there was another slight quake.

Most of the people of San Francisco were asleep at 5.13 o'clock when the terrible earthquake came without warning.

The motion of the disturbance apparently was from east to west. At first the upheaval of the earth was gradual but in a few seconds it increased in intensity. Chimneys began to fall and buildings to crack, tottering on their foundations.

The people became panic-stricken, and rushed into the streets most of them in their night attire. They were met by showers of falling bricks, cornices and walls of buildings.

Many were crushed to death, while others were badly mangled. Those who remained indoors generally escaped with their lives, though scores were hit by detached plaster, pictures and articles thrown to the floor by the shock. It is believed that more or less loss was sustained by nearly every family in the city.

The tall, steel-frame structures stood the strain better than brick buildings, few of them being badly damaged. The big eleven-story Monadnock office building, in course of construction, adjoining the Palace Hotel, was an exception, however. Its rear wall collapsing and many cracks being made across its front.

Some of the docks and freight sheds along the water front slid into the bay. Deep fissures opened in the filled-in ground near the shore, and the Union Ferry Station was badly injured. Its high tower still stands, but will have to be torn down.

A portion of the new City Hall, which cost more than $7,000,000, collapsed, the roof sliding into the courtyard, and the smaller towers tumbling down. The great dome was moved, but did not fall.

The new Postoffice, one of the finest in the United States, was badly shattered.

The Valencia Hotel, a four-story wooden building, sank into the basement, a pile of splintered timbers, under which were pinned many dead and dying occupants of the house. The basement was full of water, and some of the helpless victims were drowned.

Scarcely had the earth ceased to shake when fires started simultaneously in many places. The Fire Department promptly responded to the first calls for aid, but it was found that the water mains had been rendered useless by the underground movement.

Fanned by a light breeze, the flames quickly spread, and soon many blocks were seen to be doomed. Then dynamite was resorted to, and the sound of frequent explosions added to the terror of the people. These efforts to stay the progress of the fire, however, proved futile.

The south side of Market street, from Ninth street to the bay, was soon ablaze, the fire covering a belt two blocks wide. On this, the main thoroughfare, were many of the finest edifices in the city, including the Grant, Parrott, Flood, Call, Examiner and Monadnock buildings, and the Palace and Grand hotels.

At the same time commercial establishments and banks north of Market street were burning. The burning district in this section of the city extended from Sansome street to the water front, and from Market street to Broadway.

Fires also started in the Mission, and the entire city seemed to be in flames.

The big wholesale grocery establishment of Weelman, Peck & Co. was on fire from cellar to roof, and the heat was so oppressive that passengers from the ferryboats were obliged to keep close to the water's edge in order to get past the burning structure.

It was impossible to reach the centre of the city from the bay without skirting the shore for a long distance so as to get entirely around the burning district.

About 8 o'clock the Southern Pacific officials refused to allow any more passengers from trans-bay points to land, and sent back those already on the boats.

There was little dynamite available in the city. The Southern Pacific soon brought some in. At 9 o'clock Mayor Schmitz sent a tug to Pinola for several cases of explosives. He sent also a telegram to Mayor Mott, of Oakland. At 10.30 he received this reply to his Oakland message:

"Three engines and hose companies leave here immediately. Will forward dynamite as soon as obtainable."

The town of San Rafael, despite its own needs, sent fire fighting apparatus here.

Mayor Schmitz gave orders to use dynamite wherever necessary, and the firemen and United States soldiers, who assisted them, blew down building after building. Their efforts, however, were useless, so far as checking the headway of the flames was concerned.

The shortage of water was due to the breaking of the mains of the Spring Valley Water Company at San Mateo. The water needed so badly in the city ran in a flood over San Mateo.

The fire swept down the streets so rapidly that it was practically impossible to save anything in its way. It reached the Grand Opera House, on Mission street, and in a moment had burned through the roof. The Metropolitan Opera Company, from New York, had just opened its season there, and all the expensive scenery and costumes were soon reduced to ashes.

From the opera house the fire leaped from building to building, develling them almost to the ground in quick succession.

The Call editorial and mechanical departments, in the handsome building at Third and Market streets, were totally destroyed in a few minutes, and the flames leaped across Stevenson Street toward the fine fifteen-story stone and iron building of Claus Spreckels, which, with its lofty dome, was the most notable structure in San Francisco. Two small wooden buildings furnished fuel to ignite the splendid pile.

Thousands of people watched the hungry tongues of flame licking the stone walls. At first no impression was made, but suddenly there was a crackling of glass and an entrance was effected. The inner furnishings of the fourth floor were the first to go. Then, as if by magic, smoke issued from the top of the dome.

This was followed by a most spectacular illumination. After a while, however, the light grew less intense, and the flames, finding nothing to consume, gradually went out, leaving the building standing, but completely gutted.

At California and Sansome streets stood the Mutual Life Building, a modern structure of architectural beauty, to which the flames were soon communicated. An attempt was made to save it, but the fire was irrepressible. The flames gained, and in a few moments the big building was beyond hope. The Anglo California Bank was swept by the flames and came down in a rush.

Time and again attempts were made with dynamite to clear a space which should prevent the flames from spreading to other buildings, but freely as the explosive was used the fire crept and climbed from one structure to another.

An unusually loud report showed that a gas house at Eighteenth and Market streets had blown up. The fire caused by the explosion quickly communicated in various directions. As the gas house exploded a feeling of despair overcame the men who were performing the rescue work.

The Parrott Building, in which was located the chambers of the State Supreme Court, the lower floors being devoted to an immense department store, was ruined, though its massive walls were not all destroyed.

A little further down Market street, the Academy of Sciences and the Jennie Flood Building and the History Building kindled and burned like so much tinder. Sparks carried across the wide street ignited the Phelan Building, and the army headquarters of California, General Funston commanding, were burned.

Still nearing the bay, the waters of which did the firemen good service along the docks, the fire took the Rialto Building, a handsome skyscraper, and converted scores of solid business blocks into smoldering piles of bricks.

Banks and commercial houses, supposed to be fireproof, though not of modern build, burned quickly, and the roar of the flames could be heard even on the hills, which were out of the danger zone. Here many thousands of people congregated and viewed the awful scene.

One of the first orders issued by Chief of Police Dinan was for the closing of every saloon in the city. This step is taken to prevent drink-crazed men from rioting in the streets.

Mayor Schmitz sent out word to the bakeries and milk stations throughout the city that their food supplies must be harbored for the homeless. Provisions were made to place tents in every park in the city, and those who have lost all will be given food and shelter.

Early in the morning the prisoners confined in the city prison on the fifth floor of the Hall of Justice were transferred in irons to the basement of the structure. Later they were removed to the Broadway jail.

The Mayor also established a base of rescue, and soon had forces out where they could accomplish most. Many men were sent down to the lodging house district near Market street. There it was found that many frame buildings, packed with people, had collapsed, burying their occupants in the ruins.

The rescuers jumped into the wrecks and pulled out the dead, the dying and the injured. Practically every physician in the city immediately volunteered his assistance, and soon there was a well equipped medical corps organized which began ministering to the injured.

For hours bodies were taken out in the lodging house district, and hundreds of men volunteered to go into the ruins to get more.

The pretentious City Hall, costing $7,000,000, bounded by Larkin and McAllister streets and City Hall avenue, was badly shattered by the earthquake, and the ruins later were burned. It took twenty years to build the City Hall, the pride of the coast. An alarm was turned in and the firemen responded. Chief Sullivan, awakened by the shock at his quarters in a firehouse, hastened to put on his clothes. As he reached for them the tower of the California Hotel dropped upon his building and crushing through the roof killed him.

The firemen arrived at the City Hall, but were helpless. They hitched their hose to the fire plugs, but there was no water supply.

Every possible precaution has been taken to guard property. Immediately after the destructive shocks the police turned out on guard, and the Governor and General Funston, commanding the Pacific Division of the United States Army, were asked to send troops.

A thousand men from the Presidio, sent by General Funston, arrived down town at 9 o'clock to patrol the streets. The Thirteenth Infantry, 1000 strong, arrived from Angel Island a little later and went on patrol duty at once.

The soldiers were ordered to shoot down vandals caught robbing the dead and to guard with their lives the millions of dollars' worth of property placed in the streets to escape the flames.

The city is under martial law, and all the downtown streets are patrolled by cavalry and infantry. Details of troops are also guarding the banks.

On Portsmouth square the panic was beyond description. This, the old Plaza about which the early city was built, is bordered now by Chinatown, by the Italian district and by the "Barbary Coast," a lower Tenderloin. A spur of the quake ran up the hill upon which Chinatown is situated and shook down part of the crazy little buildings on the southern edge. It tore down, too, some of the Italian tenements. The rush to Portsmouth square went on almost unchecked by the police, who had more business elsewhere.

The Chinese came out of their underground burrows like rats and tumbled into the square, beating such gongs and playing such noise instruments as they had snatched up. They were met on the other side by the refugees of the Italian quarter. The panic became a madness. Several Chinamen were taken to the morgue dead of knife wounds, given for no other reason, it seems, than the madness of panic. There are 10,000 Chinese in the quarter, and there are thousands of Italians, Spaniards and Mexicans on the other side. It seemed as though every one of these, with the riffraff of "Barbary Coast," made for that one block of open land. The two uncontrolled streams met in the centre of the square and piled up on the edges. There they fought all the morning, until the United States soldiers restored order with their bayonets.

Cabmen, drivers of express wagons and trucks, hired at enormous prices, carted away from the lower city the valuables of the hotels which saw their doom in the fires which were breaking out. Even the banks began to take out their bullion and securities, and, under guard of half dressed clerks, to send them to the hills, whence came the salvation of San Francisco. One old nighthawk cab, driven by a cabman white with terror, carried more than a million dollars in currency and securities. Men, pulling corpses or injured people from fallen buildings, stopped to curse these processions as they passed.

Then the vandals formed and went to work. Routed out from the dens along the wharves, the rats of the San Francisco waterfront, the drifters who have reached the back eddy of European civilization, crawled out and began to plunder. A policeman caught one of these men creeping through the window of a small bank on Montgomery street and shot him dead. But the police were keeping fire lines, beating back overzealous rescuers from the fallen houses and the burning blocks, and for a time the vandals plundered at will.

There was a report from the wreck of the Valencia Hotel that the ground fairly sucked it in. The basement was full of water, so that when the rescue corps got through the debris they found the bodies floating about, drowned or crushed. They tell of people thrown from windows and killed on the pavements below by the first great shake, of people crushed in the streets by the debris which fell from the upper stories of buildings. The people were so sickened by horror that they would believe anything.

As the day wore on and the wind changed the fire along the water front burned itself out and ran on further down south of Market street. This gave a comparatively clear passage to the Ferry buildings, and the troops permitted genuine refugees to pass to the Southern Pacific ferries, which were loaded down with people, many of them still half dressed. At nightfall the troops cut off this privilege, probably for fear of rioting and disorder. Then it was almost impossible to cross the street.

From Ingleside comes word that the Cliff House, the great pleasure resort and show place of the city, which stood upon a foundation of solid rock, has been swept into the sea. Not a thing stands to tell where the monster building once stood. It has been levelled to the foundation, and only the rock lining the coast remains intact.

The State Insane Asylum at Agnews is a total wreck. Many of the 600 or 700 inmates in the building were buried under the ruins. One hundred and twenty bodies have been taken out, and there are probably 150 more corpses in the ruins.

Hardly had the building fallen, before there issued forth a wild-eyed and dishevelled army of maniacs, the survivors of the calamity. They screamed and laughed and wept as they scattered over the country in all directions.

To them the earthquake rumbling under their feet meant nothing, and the fall of the building a mere triviality. With the superintendent of the asylum and his wife both killed, and many of the keepers injured, the horde of insane persons followed their own inclinations.

Many of them were rounded up and taken care of by the citizens, but scores are still wandering around the countryside to the great terror of the inhabitants.

Dr. Stone, superintendent of the Napa State Hospital, has telephoned to the Governor's office that an automobile arrived there with news that Santa Rosa is ruined and that between 200 and 300 persons have been killed.

As later details are learned it seems that 30,000 houses were either partially or wholly destroyed. Property loss is estimated as high as $200,000,000. It is estimated that there are 150,000 homeless.

Some believe the number of deaths will reach the appalling figures of 2000. General Funston places the number of dead at over a thousand.

Fire Commissioner E. Myron Wolf has announced that the fire insurance companies carrying risks here will pay dollar for dollar to every one insured with them, with no discrimination between fire and earthquake.

Every building in the triangular section between Market street, the Mission, and the waterfront, in San Francisco, has been destroyed. All the best theatres, including the Majestic, the Orpheum and the Grand Opera House, have been burned. Several of the great hotels, including the Palace Hotel and the Grand, are in ruins.

Whole Nation Tenders Aid.

New York City.—The multitude of horrors showered upon San Francisco instantly stirred the whole nation to proffers of money and other substantial aid for the homeless, the sick and injured and the impoverished. The Federal Government and every city of importance in the country spontaneously extended their help, and, without waiting for any response, some municipalities directed the Mayor of San Francisco or the Governor of California to draw upon them for substantial sums. Boston sent $25,000 at once and offered more later.

Dead From Manicuring Wound.

As the result of a slight wound made on a toe by a manicuring instrument, George C. Stevens, a prominent business man of Danbury, Conn., died in a private hospital in New York City.

Strikers' Wives Riot.

French strikers' wives at Lens engaged in a serious riot, attacking women whose husbands refused to join in the strike and stoning gendarmes and cavalry.

New York Prohibition Convention.

The New York State Prohibition Convention will be held in Binghamton during the first week in September. Efforts were made to have the convention held in Rochester, Elmira, Syracuse and other cities.

City Built Over a Cavern.

Charlestown, W. Va., was greatly excited by the discovery of a gigantic cave directly beneath the town, the top of which is near enough the surface to make the situation appear precarious.

China Suspects Japan.

Japan is suspected of secretly alienating the princes in Mongolia from their allegiance. Prince Su, who left Pekin a few days ago on a four months' inspection of conditions in Mongolia, will, it is said, be narrowly watched by both Japan and Russia. The Lama and the priests are aiding Russian interests.

Avalanches of Ashes.

A new terror is added to the eruption of Vesuvius by avalanches of ashes rolling down from the cone.

Squandered $500,000; Ends Life.

Despondency, the result of having squandered a fortune of $500,000, left to him by his father, caused the suicide of Henry H. Ackerman, forty-eight years old, a retired broker, at his home, South Brooklyn, N. Y.

San Francisco's Main Streets.

Market street, the principal business street, of San Francisco, extends southwesterly from the bay and divides the city into two sections. Kearney and portions of Market street constitute the fashionable promenades.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR APRIL 29.

Subject: The Parable of the Sower. Mark iv., 1-20—Golden Text, Luke viii., 11—Memory Verse, 20—Topic: How to Hear the Word.

I. The parable of the sower (vs. 1-8). 1. "Began again to teach." The summer passed in a succession of excitements and an unbroken recurrence of exhausting toil; He seems to have spent the months in successive circuits, from Capernaum as a centre, through all the villages of Galilee. "The sea side." The Sea of Galilee. "Great multitude." The Pharisees had been laboring by base calumnies to drive the people away from Jesus, but they still flocked after Him as much as ever. Christ will be glorified in spite of all opposition; He will be followed. "A ship." Jesus sat in a boat which had been prepared for Him. "In the sea." The boat was in the sea. "On the land." The multitude stood on the shore.

2. "Taught—by parables." A parable is an allegorical relation or representation of something real in life or nature, from which a moral is drawn for instruction. Christ's parables are a comparison of spiritual things with natural in order that the spiritual things may be better understood. "In His doctrine." That is, in His teaching. 3. "Behold—a sower." The animated introduction gives plausibility to the view that our Lord pointed to some distant sower in sight scattering his seed. 4. "The way side." There are four kinds of ground mentioned. The first is the wayside where no plow had broken it up.

5. "Stony ground." Luke says, "upon a rock." The rocks of Palestine and Syria are mostly limestones, with many flat stretches, covered with an inch or so of soil. This is the second kind of ground. "Sprang up." A thin surface of soil above a shelf of rock is like a hotbed; the stone keeps the heat and stimulates the growth. During the rainy season in Palestine the growth would be rapid. 6. "Withered away." Luke says "it lacked moisture." The hot sun dried up the moisture and scorched the grain. 7. "Among thorns." The third kind of soil was good, and there was hope of a harvest, but the ground was filled with pernicious seeds. Thorny shrubs and plants abound in Palestine. 8. "Good ground." The fourth kind of soil was rich and well prepared. "Some an hundred." This represents the highest degree of faithfulness.

II. Why Christ taught in parables (vs. 9-12).

9. "Hath ears," etc. This usually follows an important statement intimating that he who has the discernment to understand will find the deeper meaning. 10. "When—alone." Either this explanation to the disciples was made later, or he withdrew a short distance from the multitude so as to be alone. Christ evidently spoke further to the people on this same day.

11. "Unto you." To you, disciples, who inquire, and seek to know the truth; to you who are "within" in contrast to those who are "without." "To know the mystery." The true disciple has a knowledge of the "mystery of godliness"—the mystery of the atonement and the great plan of salvation, including repentance, faith, conversion.

12. "That seeing," etc. See Isa. 6:9. He did not speak in parables because He did not wish them to know the truth and see the light, but because they were in darkness and closed their eyes to the light.

III. The parable of the sower explained (vs. 13-20). 13. "Know ye not," etc. Jesus now proceeds to answer the second question (see note on v. 10). 14. "The sower." Consider the sower, the seed, the soil. 1. Whoever preacheth the word of God to the people is the sower; Jesus Christ, the apostles, every true minister of the gospel, all whose holy example illustrates and impresses gospel truths. "Soweth the word." 2. "The seed is the word of God" (Luke 8:11). The soil is the heart of man. The seed cannot grow without soil; but the life is in the seed, not in the soil. The results, however, depend largely upon the kind of soil in which the seed is sown. 15. "By the way side." The four kinds of soil represent four classes of individuals. The wayside hearers are those who do not understand because they do not pay proper attention. Sin has hardened the heart. Evil habits, profanity, unclean thoughts have tramped it solid. "Word is sown." In each case the seed was good. "Have heard." All hear; God speaks to every person; all might heed and become fruit-bearing Christians if they would. "Satan cometh." Matthew says "the wicked one," and Luke says "the devil."

17. "Have no root." He did not count the cost (Luke 14:25-33). His emotions were touched, but his soul was not deeply convinced of its righteousness. "Endure but for a time." While everything goes smoothly and they are surrounded by good influences.

18. "Among thorns." The soil was good, but was preoccupied. The thorny-ground hearers go farther than either of those mentioned in the former instances. They had root in themselves and were able to endure the tribulations, persecutions and temptations that came upon them; but still they allowed other things to cause them to become unfruitful.

20. "Good ground." Good and honest hearts. "Bring forth fruit." Who bring forth fruit to perfection? 1. Those who have heard and received the word. 2. Those who "keep it" (Luke 8:15); that is, obey the truth. 3. Those who have pure hearts (Acts 15:9)—hearts made free from sin (Rom. 6:22). 4. Those who bring forth fruit "with patience" (Luke 8:15).

CALLS AUTOMOBILIST CRAZY.

Insurance Company's Reason For Refusing to Pay a Death Claim.

New Orleans, La.—The Ocean Accident Insurance Company has refused to pay a large policy on the death of M. L. Hancock, who was killed in an automobile accident in Los Angeles, Cal., several months ago, on the ground that the company cannot pay a claim on an automobilist, as most of them are monomaniacs on the question of speeding their machines, and, therefore, the company is not responsible.

SAVED BABY LYONS

Awful Sight From That Dreadful Complaint, Infantile Eczema—Praises Cuticura Remedies.

"Our baby had that dreadful disease, Infantile Eczema, which afflicted him several months, commencing as a rash on his head, and at last covering his entire body. His sufferings were unutterable, constant misery, in fact, there was no sleep we would not have done to have given relief. We finally procured a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in three or four days he began to show signs of improvement, spirit and really laughed, for the first time in a year. In about ninety days he was fully recovered. Praise for the Cuticura Remedies has always been a pleasure, and there is nothing that we could say in their favor that would certainly saved our baby's life. He was the most awful sight that ever held prior to the treatment of the Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Maebelle Lyons, Appleton Ave., Parsons, Kan., July 11, 1904."

Gigantic Bottles.

In a window of a store in Mo., are four bottles which are believed to be the largest ever made from glass. The largest is 18 inches high and will actually hold the contents of 1,500 small perfume bottles. The smallest, however, is 5 feet in height and will hold 5 pints. To make the largest bottle less than fifty pounds of glass was required, which had to be blown into an immense bubble, which afterward cooled into the required shape. The blowing was done by three men, relieving the other as soon as one exhausted his strength.

Electric light baths will replace Turkish baths, in the opinion of H. J. Dowsing, the English electrician. They have none of the disagreeable features of the latter, but act as a tonic and lack most of the harmful results of the light. They may be used at home. The combined electric light treatment, applied under medical supervision, is proving of great benefit in certain diseased conditions, and promises to become popular.

In twenty-six of the principal cities of the United States last year there were taken out for the construction of buildings representing a cost of $186,000, or a gain of 40 per cent over the total in 1904.

A BUSY WOMAN.

Can Do the Work of 3 or 4 Ordinary Women.

An energetic young woman living just outside of N. Y. writes:

"I am at present doing all the work of a dairy farm, raising children, a vegetable and flower garden, a large number of fowls, and managing an extensive correspondence through the mails and by my regular avocation as a writer for several newspapers and magazines, besides doing fancy work for the market. I put all the energy and ability I possess to the credit I owe to Grape-Nuts food.

"It was not always so. Some years ago when the shock of my little baby's death utterly prostrated me and deranged my stomach to such a degree that I could not assimilate as much as a mouthful of food, and was even in worse condition mentally, he would have been a prophet who would have predicted it ever would be so.

"Prior to this great grief I suffered for years with indigestion, insomnia, agonizing cramps in the stomach, pain in the side, constipation and other bowel derangements. These were familiar to me. Medicines gave me no relief. I did, until a few months ago, at a friend's suggestion. I began the use of Grape-Nuts food, and soon gave up coffee entirely and used Postum Food Coffee at all meals.

"To-day I am free from all the troubles I have enumerated. My digestion is simply perfect. I assimilate my food without the least distress, enjoy restful sleep, and have a buoyancy of spirits and feeling of pleasure in my varied duties. In fact, I am a new woman, made over, and I repeat, I owe it all to Grape-Nuts and Postum Coffee, as given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

RU-NA WORKED LY MARVELOUS

Severely With Headaches— Unable to Work

Mrs. Lucy V. McGivney, 432 3rd Ave., N. Y., writes:

"For many months I suffered severely from headaches and pains in the head and back, sometimes being unable to attend to my daily work. I am better, now, thanks to Peruna. I am also active as ever and have no headaches. In every way Peruna worked for me it was simply marvelous."

We have in our files many grateful letters from women who have suffered with symptoms named above. Lack of space prevents our giving more than a few here.

It is impossible to even approximate the amount of suffering which Peruna has relieved, or the number of women who have been restored to health and strength by its faithful use.

SAVED BABY LYON'S LIFE

Awful Sight From That Dreadful Complaint, Infantile Eczema—Mother Praises Cuticura Remedies.

We finally procured a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about four or five days he began to show a change, spirit and really laughed, for the first time in a year. In about ninety days he was fully recovered. Praise for the Cuticura Remedies has always been our greatest pleasure, and there is nothing in this world that we could say in their favor, that would certainly saved our baby's life. He was the most awful sight that I ever held prior to the treatment of the Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Maebelle Lyon, Appleton Ave., Parsons, Kan., July 7, 1906."

Gigantic Bottles.

In a window of a store in St. Louis, Mo., are four bottles which are believed to be the largest ever blown from glass. The largest is 6 feet 6 inches high and will actually hold the contents of 1,500 small perfume bottles. The smallest, however, is only 5 feet in height and will hold 1,000 gallons. To make the largest bottle more than fifty pounds of liquid glass was required which had to be blown in an entrance bubble, which would cool into the receptacle. The blowing was done by three men, one relieving the other as soon as he was exhausted his strength.

Electric light baths will soon replace Turkish baths, in the opinion of H. J. Lawsing, the English electrician. They have none of the disadvantages of the latter, but act as a tonic, and lack most of the harmful rays of sunlight. They may be used at home. The combined electric heat and light treatment, applied under medical supervision, is proving of great value in certain diseased conditions, and promises to become popular.

In twenty-six of the principal cities of the United States last year there were taken out for the construction of buildings representing a cost of $186,000, or a gain of 40 per cent over the total in 1904.

A BUSY WOMAN.

Can Do the Work of 3 or 4 If Well Fed.

An energetic young woman just outside of N. Y. writes:

"I am at present doing all the work of a dairy farm, caring for children, a vegetable and flower garden, a large number of fowls, and managing an extensive exchange business through the mails and my regular avocation as a writer for several newspapers and magazines, and signing fancy work for the ladies. I owe all the energy and ability to do this to Grape-Nuts food.

"It was not always so, and a year ago When the shock of my little baby's death utterly prostrated me and deranged my stomach and nerves so that I could not assimilate much as a mouthful of food, and was even in worse condition mentally. He would have been a poor prophet who would have predicted that I could ever would be so.

"Prior to this great grief I had suffered for years with impaired digestion, insomnia, agonizing cramps in the stomach, pain in the side, constipation and other bowel derangements. All those were familiar to my daily life. Medicines gave me no relief. Coffee did, until a few months ago, at a friend's suggestion, I began the use of Grape-Nuts food, and soon after gave up coffee entirely and used Postum Food Coffee at all my meals.

"To-day I am free from all the troubles I have enumerated. My digestion is simply perfect. I assimilate my food without the least distress, enjoy restful sleep, and have a buoyancy of spirit and feeling of pleasure in my varied duties. In fact, I am a new woman, entirely over, and I repeat, I owe it all to Grape-Nuts and Postum Coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

WORTH QUOTING

The sturdy oak of the English language has attained its present overshadowing dimensions in the open sunlight and by natural processes of growth. The proposal to let a number of experimenters put it in a hothouse and prune and lop it as they will is not likely to commend itself to the English speaking world in general, laments the New York Tribune.

Modern machinery has made it possible to work profitably gold mines that were non-productive even five years ago. What machinery is doing for gold it is doing for other products, and especially for products of the mines. Judging from present conditions, the production of things out of the earth in America this year will break all records.

It was a grim joke for the workingmen of St. Petersburg to elect Rosa as their delegate to the National Assembly; the aforesaid Rosa being a four-footed creature of the canine species. The argument, declares the Philadelphia Record, of the voters was that the dog would cost only seven kopecks a day for its keep, and would be quite as useful a representative of their interests as any other candidate of theirs who would have a chance of election.

George Wyndham made after-dinner The short story is peculiarly an American institution, and we are as proud of it as we are of the "Bird of Freedom," declares H. M. Alden, in Harper's Magazine. To develop this species of literature has seemed always the most distinctive feature of a genuinely American magazine. To make the most of it, by giving as many examples as possible of the best of it, has seemed the one surest way of nourishing and gratifying a distinctively national instinct. While novels, of every degree of excellence, are readily accessible to everybody, yet for the current short story the reader must almost wholly depend upon his magazine.

In the proposed campaign against blindness, the best results will come from a larger education of the public in the treatment and prention of diseases that affect the eye; trachoma has been successfully fought in the public schools. The spirit of progress in Massachuetts, New York and other States observes the Boston Transcript, has been leading to the establishment of associations for promoting the interests of the blind, and the natural consequences of such conferences of physicians and laymen is a search for means, not only to occupy the present blind with self-supporting work, but to reach the causes which will give among the next generation a far lower percentage of blind persons.

There is no room for any difference of opinion as to the desirability of protecting young girls from the evils of objectionable dance halls. But it is an extremely difficult law to frame, and it is unfair to criticise too harshly the legislative committee that has to deal with the problem. Care must be taken that in eradicating an evil, what may be an innocent recreation is not made a statutory crime or misdemeanor. Misdirected zeal, declares the Boston Post, might easily develop a statute that would be a simply intolerable interference with personal liberty. Cannot something practical be done at the other end of the subject? No disreputable public dance halls should be permitted. The conditions of the dance hall licenses should be rigid, and they should not be too freely issued. Public dance halls should be under careful inspection, and any such place found to be detrimental to the moral interests of the community should be closed without delay.

Isaac Winder, negro, was confined in the jail of Baltimore county, Maryland. He had been found guilty of murder. About three weeks ago he broke out, and since then city and county policemen, sheriffs and posses of citizens have been hunting for him. There is a good deal of wild country in that region—irregular granite hills and wooded ravines. These conditions served Winder well as cover from his pursuers. It was not until Tuesday that he was found, when Chief of County Police Street, attracted by a film of smoke coming over a little hill, approached from the leeward side and got the drop on the fugitive. When the jail at Towson had recovered its own, Winder, well warmed and well fed, told the officials of his wanderings while keeping out of their way. He was asked how he managed to keep informed of what the searching parties were doing. That was easy, he said. Every morning he went to some rural free delivery mail-box and took out the Baltimore papers. He thus learned what had been done the day before and what was likely to be done that day and he made his plans accordingly. It was in this way, says the Baltimore Courant, that he learned bloodhounds were to be put on his track, and he eluded them by crossing and recrossing a river. Here's a use of the rural free delivery system that never entered the thoughts of its authors.

Under the leadership of Governor Cummins the State of Iowa has entered upon a campaign for the election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people.

HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS AND — OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or officinal names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name—" Syrup of Figs"—or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

Woman's Bad Days

Cardui Relieves Pain

caused by curable female diseases. It acts directly on woman's delicate organs, and restores their natural activity. By making the organs work normally, pain disappears, strength returns to the system, roses to the cheeks, and the frowns and wrinkles of suffering are seen no more. Mrs. Lucinda Johnson, of Walworth, Wis., writes: "I suffered agonies at every monthly period. Nothing helped me until I took Cardui. Now I can truly say I am cured." Try it.

Kidney Trouble Causes Weak Backs and Multitude of Pains and Aches.

Col. R. S. Harrison, Deputy Marshal, 716 Common St., Lake Charles, La., says: "A kick from a horse first weakened my back and affected my kidneys. I became very bad and had to go about on crutches. The doctors told me I had a case of chronic rheumatism, but I could not believe them, and finally began using Doan's Kidney Pills for my kidneys. First the kidney secretions came more freely, then the pain left my back. I went and got another box, and that completed a cure. I have been well for two years."

Experiments with meat in liquid air and vegetables in cold of less degree have shown effects very like those of cooking. Potatoes that had been frozen were found by Dr. Ephraim Cutter to be shrunken, limp, soft, elastic and sweet tasting, and he concludes that they might be safely eaten. Onions, cranberries and squashes were similarly changed. Tested with copper sulphate, the frozen vegetables gave the reaction for cooked food, but some of the starch grains polarized light, while cooking by heat destroys polarization.

Inoculation of Plants.

By W. S. Harwood.

About the Kansas station some years ago inoculation studies begun. It had long been known that certain plants, clovers, peas, beans and the like, formed small bunches odules upon their roots. It was later developed that the crescences, instead of being harmful, as had once been were the reverse—that they were the home of countless that these bacteria take the free nitrogen from the change it into nitrogen for plant food.

Four-fifths of the air is nitrogen, free nitrogen as it is called, combined with other substances. It is estimated that there are about five millions of pounds of this free nitrogen resting upon every acre of an inexhaustible storehouse of plant food.

When this nitrogen is turned into service it must be in compound some other substance, as in the form of decayed vegetable matter. be used by the plants in its free state. And here comes in the service bacteria—it is their function to convert the free nitrogen of the air for the plant. The Kansas station demonstrated that the process of ing under these nodule-bearing plants, the home of countless bacteria take the free nitrogen, and just how probably no one knows, convert plant food—the ploughing resulted in marked enrichment of the soil be shortened by simply adding to the soil the bacteria which nodules.

Soil known to contain the bacteria was brought from Massa placed in the worn-out Kansas soil, and restoration of fertility follo was proved beyond all question that the home soil once inoculated effective for further inoculation as the imported soil. The plan has immense practical significance, and it has already been proved of commercial value.—American Magazine.

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Pays Indebtedness of Boaz School.

Gadsden, Ala.—J. H. Snead, of Boaz, has paid the indebtedness of the Boaz Seminary, amounting to $41,000, and presented $2,500 additional for the building of another dormitory for the school. The name has been changed to "J. H. Snead College." The commencement exercises were held at the Girls' Home Friday night. A choice program of music and recitations was given after which refreshments were served a reception was given. The school was established a few years ago and is one of the most promising institutions in North Alabama.

Gray Case Arguments On.

Montgomery, Ala.—Judge Sayre, of the city court, is hearing arguments in the quo warranto proceedings brought by Henry B. Gray, of Birmingham, against the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company to know by what authority that road, a foreign corporation is operating the South and North road, whose franchise was granted to a domestic corporation. The arguments are now on additional pleas filed by the railroad company.

Birmingham Cases in Supreme Court.

Montgomery, Ala.—The supreme court has decided the following Birmingham cases:

Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company vs. Bettie Jones, administratrix, appeal from Birmingham city court; reversed and remanded.

Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company vs. Mary Moore, pro ami, appeal from Birmingham city court reversed and remanded.

Mary J. Thomas vs. Annie Thomas, appeal from Birmingham city court; reversed and remanded.

Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company vs. Jule E. Oden, pro ami, appeal from Jefferson county court, reversed and remanded.

Big Ore Deal Completed.

Talladega, Ala.—The iron ore deal in which Dr. J. W. Heacock and Mrs. A. O. Riser were interested, for 1,000 acres of land near the Emauhee mines was closed last week, the consideration being $31,000 for the mineral rights thereon. The property goes to Douglas H. Gordon and associates, of Baltimore, the same parties who dominated the Alabama Consolidated Coal and Iron Company, including the Emauhee mines. The property lies about ten miles southeast of this city, and lies between the Louisville and Nashville and Southern railroads, handy for either to handle the ore. As stated this is perhaps the largest supply of undeveloped iron property in the south, and the Talladega furnace is the legitimate outlet for it.

Richardson Renominated.

Decatur, Ala.—Judge William Richardson, of Huntsville, was nominated here for congress to succeed himself. The nomination was made by the congressional executive committee, there being no other candidate for nomination. Judge Richardson was present and made a short speech thanking the committee.

Russellville, Ala.—"Babe" Woods, an employe of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, was killed here Wednesday evening at the mines, one mile from town. He was riding on the dinkey and either jumped or was thrown from it, falling under the wheels. His body was cut into three pieces, his head being completely severed from his body. He leaves a wife and five children.

Mobile, Ala.—A special to the Register from Jackson, Miss., says that the state railroad commission has made an order fining the Mobile, Jackson and Kansas City railroad $500 for disobeying the order of the commission to run into Decatur, Miss. The road runs three miles from Decatur.

Approve Birmingham for 1908.

Montgomery, Ala.—A New Orleans special to Friday's Advertiser says:

"The reunion of 1908 will no doubt be held in Birmingham. In the convention of veterans Gen. George P. Harrison made a strong fight for the reunion at Birmingham, but it was a foregone conclusion that Richmond would get it and that was settled last year. After his fight had been ended and General Harrison was withdrawn in the name of Birmingham, he said: 'Our boys seem determined to go to Richmond next year. Go ahead if you want to, but the following year Birmingham wants you, and she is going to get you.' The answering shouts of the veterans showed their approval of the statement."

Found Dead.

Jasper, Ala.—A white man was found dead on the Frisco right of way almost at the exact spot where the negro was found on the morning of the 17th inst. There seems something very strange and mysterious about the two deaths. At the crossing of the Northern Alabama and Frisco roads there is a large heap of cinders that has been burning several weeks, and it is thought that these persons, coming there somewhat cold, sat down to warm, and were overcome by the gas before they were conscious of the fact that there was any gas there. The man found dead was rather an old man, having one cork leg. No papers could be found about his persons that would tend to show any identification.

Acquittal Causes Satisfaction.

Gadsden, Ala.—The acquittal of Mrs. Marion Standifer, who was on trial in Atlanta for the murder of her sister, gave universal satisfaction here, where all parties to the unfortunate affair formerly lived. The case attracted unusual attention and was closely watched. Young Standifer, husband of the woman, is supposed to have enlisted in the army. His whereabouts are kept a profound secret by relatives and friends here who are in a position to know. He was formerly in the army, and is said to have had a special fondness for army life.

Found Diamonds in Hotel.

San Francisco, Cal.—The guests who were in St. Francis Hotel on the day of the big fire were granted permission Friday to visit their former quarters in the big hostelry in order that they might ascertain what could be saved of their personal belongings. One lady found $1,000 worth of diamonds near her buried trunk. The gold settings were gone, but the stones were only slightly injured. Very few of the guests proved so fortunate.

Meets Horrible Death.

Hartselle, Ala.—Little Irene Eubanks, aged 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Eubanks, of Sanders Cove, twelve miles south of Hartselle, died Wednesday morning from a severe burn which happened on April 16. The child was standing before an open fireplace when her clothing caught fire. They were burned off and her body burned into a crisp before any one came to the rescue.

Big Fertilizer Plant.

Selma, Ala.—A project is said to be on foot to establish in Selma a heavily capitalized fertilizer factory. The man at the head of the movement does not want his name given out at present, nor is he a resident of Selma, although of a nearby county. He has had six years' experience in fertilizer matters; in fact, has made it a special study, and will be at liberty after January 1 next to take active charge of such a plant.

Seeks a Foreign Mission.

Washington, D. C.—George W. Craik, of Montgomery, who has been here his friend, Dr. J. B. Gaston, is understood to be seeking a foreign mission.

Coal Land Tract Purchased.

Pell City, Ala.—A large tract of land on the Southern railway between Eden and the tunnel has been purchased by parties from the east and from Birmingham. On this land there are four veins of coal, one of them four feet thick. Coal has been known on these lands for a long time, but no boring has been done till now.

Destroyed by Fire.

Gadsden, Ala.—The house of John Saules in Alabama City was burned Thursday night. The fire was discovered about 11 o'clock by a neighbor, and it was with difficulty that they succeeded in waking Mr. Saules and family. The house was entirely consumed.

Drank Kerosene.

Guin, Ala.—The sympathy of the entire community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Fry in the death of their little boy, Carl. The little fellow died under peculiar circumstances. It seems that he got a cup of coal oil, and thinking it was milk, drank a quantity of it and spilled the remainder of it on his head and face, and before medical aid could be procured the child was paralyzed and died.

Brings Golden Rose.

Madrid.—The Marquis of Tovar, the Spanish ambassador to the vatican, has arrived here bearing the golden rose and a letter from the pope to the Princess Ena, of Battenburg, who is to be married to King Alfonso June 1.

RELIEF FUND SMALL

Economy Must Be Rigid—Only $300,000 in Cash Comes From Government.

A SHOCK TO THE COMMITTEE.

Balance of Great Appropriation Expanded in East—Need of Continued Assistance of Army Recognized.

San Francisco, Cal.—The amount of money on hand for committee relief work and the continuance of the military control of the city, subordinate to civil authority, were two of the most important subjects discussed at the meeting of the Citizens' Committee of Fifty, which, headed by Mayor Schmitz, now administers the affairs of San Francisco.

Both developed some interesting phases and left in the minds of all those striving to relieve the somewhat chaotic affairs of the unfortunate city the necessity for two things—the strictest economy in the expenditure of the money now available and the urgent need of continued military assistance.

The statement of James D. Phelan, chairman of the finance committee of the Citizens' Relief and Red Cross funds, that he has been given to understand by Victor H. Metcalf, secretary of commerce and labor, the representative of President Roosevelt, that only $300,000 of the $2,500,000 appropriated by congress for the relief of San Francisco was available, and that this sum represented the extent of financial assistance that might be expected from that source, caused a decided sensation in the meeting. Mr. Phelan announced that Secretary of War Taft had transmitted to his order $300,000, which he said was the first recognition the secretary had made of the relief work.

He added that he had been informed by Mr. Metcalf that the secretary of war had expended the remainder of the relief fund for the purchase of supplies in the east. Upon corroboration of this statement by Mr. Metcalf, Mr. Phelan simply remarked that there was only $518,000 available cash to his order at the mint, and the strictest economy would be necessary.

"We need money," said Mr. Phelan, "and the country should not be led into the belief that millions are on hand to relieve the destitute people."

Both Mr. Metcalf and Dr. Devine indorsed Mr. Phelan's remarks, and volunteered to apprise Washington of the situation. The generous appropriation of congress had been counted upon by the finance committee, and the knowledge that only a small amount of this would be placed in their hands was somewhat of a shock.

The question of the use of the federal troops to assist in the preservation of the peace and good order of the city developed a unanimity of opinion among the civil and military authorities. A letter from General Greely, commanding the United States troops on duty here, to Mayor Schmitz, was read in the committee meeting. The general stated that the war department looked with doubt upon the continued use of the army in policing San Francisco, and added that while he personally was willing to continue any work of relief, sanitation or otherwise, he could not sanction the use of the army on non-military duties an hour beyond such obvious necessity, and asked for a written statement from the mayor in order that there might be no doubt or apprehension on his part as to the need of federal troops.

Edward Hurries Back.

Naples.—As a result of dispatches received here by King Edward from the home government in regard to a crisis at Turkey over the occupation of Taban by Turkish troops the British monarch has decided to hurry back to London by the overland ruote. The queen will follow by water.

Holmes Makes Plea.

Washington, D. C.—Edwin S. Holmes charged with profiting by inside crop information while connected with the department of agriculture, pleaded not guilty in the criminal court here. He has fifteen days to demur to the indictment.

Burned Children With Hot Pokers.

Chicago, Ill.—Charged with torturing their two children, 4 and 6 years old, with redhot iron pokers, Michael Janossek and his wife were held to the criminal court in bonds of $10,000 each. The children, with their bodies bruised and burned, were taken into court, where several neighbors testified to the brutality of the parents.

Shot Two Men at Close Range.

Woodburn, Ore.—Frank Smith, the alleged slayer of Policeman Hanlon, of Oregon City, and an escaped prisoner from the city jail at Portland, shot and fatally wounded Sheriff J. S. Shaver, of Clackamas county, and seriously injured Capt. O. D. Henderson, of Company D, Oregon National Guard.

The posse, which had been pursuing Smith for three days, surrounded him in the outskirts of Woodburn in a clump of bushes about dusk. During the early morning hours Smith made a sudden dash from the bushes and gained the railroad, where he ran almost headlong into a part of the posse, consisting of Captain Henderson, Sheriff Shaver, Sheriff Culver, of Marion, and two or three others.

Henderson commanded Smith to throw up his hands, and Smith responded by opening fire with a revolver at a distance of six feet. Henderson fell almost at the first shot, and Shaver a moment later.

Awaiting Sentence.

Nashville, Tenn.—In the United States district court Newton W. Hamilton and Thomas D. Lawson, of Tullahoma, Tenn., were convicted on an indictment charging them jointly with aiding and abetting Alan Parker, cashier, in misappropriating funds of the First National Bank of Tullahoma. The offense is defined as a misdemeanor, the minmum punishment for which is five years in prison. A motion for a new trial was entered.

Early in the week Parker pleaded guilty to the charge of misappropriation, and is now awaiting sentence. Parker's alleged shortage at one time approximated $40,000, but it is said that the bank has been reimbursed.

Russian Loan Popular.

Paris.—The Russian loan has proved even more successful than anticipated, although the Bank of France and other participants say that several days must elapse before the definite results are known. According to the first figures the allotments will be 1 1-2 per cent of the amounts asked for, showing the loan to have been subscribed many times over. The reason for the popularity of the loan was the small percentage of the subscriptions immediately payable and the excellent rate of interest. This induced all classes to make large subscriptions.

Departure a Mystery.

St. Petersburg.—The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Father Gapon, who has not been heard from since April 8, has been deepened by the arrival here, consigned to a solicitor named in the letter, containing some of the priest's effects. The letter came from Berlin, and enclosed was Gapon's pocketbook, 1,300 roubles in money and the key to Gapon's safe at the Credit Lyonnaise, with the request that the solicitor should act according to instructions. No instructions were included in the letter, however. The letter was directed in a woman's handwriting, an dthus has added to the mystery.

Hansen, Wife and Child Dead.

Washington, D. C.—Rear Admiral Goodrich wired the navy department that Boatswain Daniel C. Hansen, with his wife and child, were killed in the San Francisco earthquake. The remains were identified by Hansen's butler, and were buried at the naval cemetery in San Francisco. Hansen was 28 years old ,and was on leave of absence at the time of the disaster.

Over $4,000,000 Contributed.

San Francisco, Cal.—Chairman Phelan, of the finance committee of the relief committee and Red Cross funds, gave out a complete statement of money contributions received for the relief of San Francisco up to and including April 26. The list shows the grand total of $4,921,038, of which $213,950 was contributed locally.

Junior Order's Appeal.

Washington, D. C.—W. L. S. Gilcreast, national councilor of the Junior Order of American Mechanics, has sent an appeal to the 1,600 councils of the order, asking the members to make liberal contributions for the needy brothers in San Francisco.

Proceedings Against Standard Oil.

Toledo, O.—Ouster proceedings were filed in the circuit court here against the Standard Oil Company and seventeen affiliated companies, including oil and pipe line companies, Lake Shore railroad, Hocking Valley, Toledo and Ohio Central and the Pennsylvania Company. The court was asked to dissolve their franchises and appoint trustees for creditors and stockholders.

Prussian Minister Dead.

Berlin.—General Von Budde, the Prussian minister of public works, who has been suffering from cancer for some time past, died Saturday. He was born in 1851 and was appointed minister of public works in June, 1902.

EXPERIENCE.

I've shot the chutes and bumped the bumps,
And also signed some notes for chumps,
Experience;
And had the measles and the mumps,
Experience.

I've hit the pike and looped the loop,
And also floundered in the soup,
Experience;
And had bronchitis and the croup,
Experience.

To friends I've loaned my hard earned cash,
For breakfast I have eaten hash.
Experience;
I've had the hives, the grip and rash,
Experience.

In cable cars I've suffered jars,
And dodged a million autocars,
Experience;
And through a brick have witnessed stars,
Experience.

I've had a lot of dopey dreams,
Been up against great gold brick schemes,
Experience;
I've heard a cracked soprano's screams,
Experience.

I've heard a lot of vaudeville,
And smoked cigars that made me ill,
Experience;
I've written verse—am at it still,
Experience.

LIFE'S LITTLE PLEASANTRIES

When first I called on Bessie Gray
I took a seat
Three feet away.
But soon I saw things growing clearer,
A little nearer.
Now I'm engaged to marry Bess,
How close we sit

DIDN'T PAY.

Mary—They issued a hundred and fifty wedding invitations.

Jane—Did they get many valuable presents.

"No—they barely made expenses."

ANSWERED.

Mistress (severely)—How did it happen that I saw a policeman with you in the kitchen last night?

Maid—I suppose, madam, you must have looked through the keyhole.—Translated for Tales from Strekoza.

"FOUR YEARS UNDER MARSE ROBERT."

Col. Wm. Handy, an ex-confederate veteran, a native Mississippian, and an adopted Alabamian, residing at Birmingham and Bessemer since 1883, arrived in Clanton last Friday and is stopping at Mrs. Davis'. This gentleman is here in the interest of a book entitled "Four Years Under Marse Robert," which is in one volume of 368 large printed pages, and the colonel will give it to you for $2. Read what the New Orleans Picayune says editorially about this book: "There is not a confederate in this country but will welcome this book, nor the son of a confederate veteran if he has inherited anything of his father's spirit. And the same is true of the yankee veterans. It is a book that appeals to the heart of every military man who wore the gray or the blue during those dark days that tried men's souls." And more on that line which we don't reproduce. Col. Handy will speak at the Baptist church in Clanton Friday (4th) at 8 p. m. by special invitation of W. I. Mullins and others interested.

"STRAWBERRIES AND ICE CREAM"

The Ladies' Aid Society of the United Protestant church of Thorsby will give a strawberry and ice cream festival on Tuesday evening, May 8, at Normal hall in Thorsby. Lunch boxes will be sold to only gentlemen. Everybody is cordially invited. Come and have a good time. F. Merrill, of Chicago, will be the auctioneer for the occasion and a merry time is anticipated. Every lady is expected to bring a lunch box with lunch for two and put in a necktie or ribbon and wear a duplicate.

SCHOOL NOTICE.

The patrons of school district No. 40 are hereby called to meet at Jackson's chapel on Friday, May 4, at 2 p. m. It is necessary that each and every patron come, as there will be business of much importance.

A. A. JACKSON,
A. E. TEEL, Trustees.

S. S. CONVENTION.

The S. S. convention of beat 9 was held at Collins chapel Sunday last and was largely attended. Many comin was largely attended, many county people being there, among whom we noticed Judge and Mrs. Reynolds, Lee T. Vickers, W. H. Conway and numerous others from various communities.

The convention was ably presided over by Pres. J. Bice, who never let the discussion lag. Miss Rasco was elected district secretary, vice Mrs. G. W. Phalin, who has removed to Pearson, Ala. The schools represented were: Collins chapel, Cedar Grove, New Salem, Baptist of Thorsby, United Protestant of Thorsby and Pleasant Hill. The discussion of the various subjects was able, some of them notably so, as Miss Mary Carr Gibson (county secretary), Prof. H. L. Hicks, Dr. A. Horn, Judge Reynolds and Mrs. John L. Winslow. Dr. Horn's paper on Temperance was brimful of interesting statistics and information on the subject, and ought to be read in every S. S. The dinner was fine, well when you say dinner at Collins chapel that is always sure to be the case, and the good ladies of the community have our sincere thanks for their hospitality. The church was not large enough to seat the crowd, many remaining on the outside.

CLANTON.

Editor Union:

Please allow me a few words in The Union. I see so many letters from the different parts of the county that it makes me want to see something that I say in print. I'm not afraid of "Just a Voter," thought I like to read his letters. I noticed where he said that Criton wanted the Democrats called together to "start the ball to rolling." Now that was Democratic talk, and it is cheap, for if it wasn't the Democrats would have done been "busted" before now. I suppose that the man who has been running on wind and water, "subject to the action of the Democratic party of Chilton county," is in good heart yet. Hobson won out over in the Sixth district primary, but some Republican will make it hot for him in November. Will the Republicans and Populists let the Democrats have the Senator from this (the Fifteenth) Senatorial district, composed of Autauga, Chilton and Shelby counties? It can well be remembered that Hon. L. H. Reynolds was elected six years ago, instead of Walter R. Oliver, and was counted out by the honest (?) Democrats. Well, was surprised at Mr. Shaw making the Populist call in the Banner after Criton has said time after time that there was no such thing as a Populist party in existence. We are al subject to mistakes, but that was a big one. Let me tell you he may not be going to the Democrats, but I'll say to you that he is on a road looking that way. I don't think that any of our people ought to take the Banner, for it seeks to break the common people down and get the county under boss rule. Mr. Editor, I want to write some along in the future, for I know a lot of things that I think our people should hear.

A REPUBLICAN.

COLLINS' CHAPEL.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space to say a few words for the information of "Just a Voter," though he seems to be well posted in regard to the matter at Collins' Chapel. Well, you see that great (?) Moses from Bibb he led a couple off into the Democrats' wilderness. The great majority here talk like they were Pops and Republicans, but when it comes to school matters a lot of them seem to be stuck on getting a Democrat, and that naturally leads to such a Democratic gathering at the close of school. Hoping for better times,

A POPULIST.

HAPPY HOLLOW.

Editor Union:

Here I come for the first time with a few happenings. Several of our young folks attended the Sunday school convention at Collins' Chapel Sunday and report a nice time. Jim Parker and company visted Mims' saw mill Sunday. Josh Oldacre was also there, and M. H. Parker with his ticket punch. Succes to The Union and its many readers. SHORTY'S PET.

CENTER POINT.

Editor Union:

Here I come again, but I hardly know what to write, only we're having plenty of dry, warm weather and people generally are up with their work. Well, Mr. Editor, I tell you wasn't that letter in the last week's paper a scorcher (the one signed "Just a Voter")? And what I liked about it, he just exactly told the truth, and there is a lot more people in Chilton county besides him that know that what he wrote is the truth. Well, how we all love to read the letters in The Union from the different parts of our county. Don't you all, correspondents, forget to write and give us all the news. Well, as I'm tired, I'll ring off and came again. C. W. L.

THORSBY.

Mrs. Ensign, Miss Walker, Messrs. Walker and Dietrich, of Maplesville, were Thorsby visitors last week.....Mrs. Borden has gone north for an extended visit.....Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Simonton, former residents of this place, are now living in Chicago.....G. H. Gerald was in Birmingham Tuesday.....Misses Hannah Paulson and Clara Soberg were in Clanton Friday.....Emil Fors is on the sick list.....Dr. and Mrs. Stabler have been enjoying a visit from his brother, who is on his way home from school at Nashville.....Rev. Moses, of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., held services in the Norwegian church Sunday morning.....A number of the young people attended the Young People's Society at the home of Miss Mable Johnson Tuesday evening.....Messrs. W. Thorson and Larson were out at Mineral Springs Monday.....Mr. and Mrs. Olson, Mr. and Mrs. Stemman left Tuesday morning for Rockford, Ill.....J. J. Stanley made a trip to Montgomery last week.....Thorsby was well represented at the Sunday school convention at Collins chapel Sunday, there being about forty from here out there.....Rev. Turnipseed, the Methodist Episcopal minister from Clayton preached here Sunday evening.....Mesdames Norton and Horn, Misses Parnell and Gerald returned home from Montgomery Friday. A carload of strawberries was shipped from here Tuesday evening.....Rev. and Mrs. Bates, of Birmingham, are spending a few days here visiting friends.....Rev. Bates held services at the Normal building Sunday evening.....Miss Charlotte Turnquist returned from a visit at Calera Tuesday evening.....Mr. and Mrs. Feast are entertaining company from Birmingham.....Clyde Bazard, of Sigel, Pa., arrived in Thorsby Sunday and expects to remain here for some time.....In the ball game Saturday between Thorsby and Jemison the home team won, the score being 5 to 13.....Every one is wishing for rain.....Miss Gibson, of Verbena, was in town Sunday on her way to Collins chapel to attend the Sunday school convention.....A number of the friends of Miss Turina Paulson surprised her at her home last Thursday afternoon.....Rev. Moses and Mr. Dyrhood went to Montgomery Monday evening.....The ladies of the United Protestant church will hold a strawberry festival at the Normal building next Tuesday evening, May 8. Everybody is invited to come. It is desired that every lady bring a lunch box if possible, and to put in the box a bow of ribbon or necktie matching the one she wears. The boxes will be sold to the gentlemen. The ladies hope to see a great many of their friends present. The Sunshine Society will have charge of the boxes and the serving.

Della Blalock returned to her home in Maplesville Wednesday after making an extended visit here with relatives and friends.....Monroe Sorrell, of Birmingham, is spending a few days in Thorsby.

ANON.

WYLAM.

The Methodist protracted meeting here is beng well attended. Rev. and Mrs. Haynor are doing the preaching. On Sunday night eleven were baptized. The Ladies' Aid meets with Mrs. W. W. Holmes Thursday. Mrs. C. J. Sorrell and sisters spent Sunday with Mrs. Callie Teel, of East Brighton, and report a good time. Mrs. Parker, of Lomax, is visiting her daughter here, Mrs. M. J. Hayes. We're all glad to see people from dear old Chilton. We had a street meeting last night, and a large attendance. Oh, my, we sure are having some warm weather now. The florists are looking sweet with all kinds of blooming flowers. Yes, I believe I've met the "One Forsaken," if a guess right; blue eyes and fair, with light hair. Ha; Ha; What say you? Mr. and Mrs. V. H. Vines visited in Wylam Sunday. A. Riggins and family spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mitchel. Rev. and Mrs. Brabham dined Sunday with the Sawyers. A numbers of Mrs. G. W. Futrell's friends were with her Sunday afternoon. I'm glad to see so many writers in the dear Union. I like to read them all. With best wishes,

PAPA'S PET.

WEST CHILTON.

Well, Mr. Editor, here I come again. Health in this community is very good. We've had some very pretty weather for work and our farmers have put in good time. There are a few that haven't planted cotton yet, and those that have are wishing for rain to make it come up. The piece from "Just a Voter" last week was all right. Come again, brother. I like to read your letters. Our F. E. & C. U. of A. is growing right along in this county, and they are organizing new locals in Perry county. Brothers, stand fast together and we will gain the victory. The letter from Pleasant Grove was interesting. Come again, "Greenhorn." Yours for the best.

"LITTLE J."

COLLINS' CHAPEL.

Mr. Editor:

Please allow me a few words for the first time. Our people are all well and about done planting. Now, just a word in reply to "Just a Voter" about the closing exercises of our school here. Some call it a "big day." I call it a big dinner. Some call it a big-speaking. Well, you can guess what it was when I tell you it was all "exes;" that is, "has beens." Well, "Just a Voter" don't let that bother you. It will take somebody that can move mountains to move us Pops. We are as solid as a brick wall, all but R. and J. and two or three "bootlicks." That is all the dummies we have in our community. Now, Mr. Editor, a word about our big day last Sunday. We had a fine day and plenty of dinner, but our good women say it will be the last one that they are going to cook until the barkeepers from Calera and Clanton are stopped from bringing whisky up here and selling it like they were a retail grocery. Well, my good brethren, if we can't stop such doings we'll have to stop our gatherings. God knows it is a shame how some poor horses were drove around our church last Sunday. I saw one old man with his son in the buggy with him, and both most drunk. What a shame.

COLLINS' CHAPEL FARMER.

CEDAR GROVE.

Mr. Editor:

I'm still wondering what to do, as it stays so dry; I can't do what I want to do. Nothing new to write except little visiting. W. H. Wilson and wife are here spending a few days with the latter's parents. J. P. Barnett's mother, who lives near Dixie, is spending a few days with him. Prof. J. M. Burnett, of Tallapoosa county visited Tuesday of last week with his home folks. He was en route to the State Sunday school convention in Montgomery. J. W. Hays, J. W. Riggins and Lum Hays spent a part of last week on the river fishing, and had very good luck. C. R. Childress was in Clanton Saturday. T. W. Childress and family attended the Sunday school convention at Collins' Chapel last Sunday. J. W. Hays and wife and Prof. R. W. Scott and wife were visitors of J. R. Collins Sunday. J. L. Collins and family spent Saturday and Sunday with Wm. Caton's family. We are sorry to say that Mrs. A. F. Mims, who has been sick for some time, is not any better yet, but we hope she will recover soon. Miss Minnie Scott spent Sunday with Miss Mandie Barrett. Mr. J. Mack W. Pierce, who was born December 23, 1822, has made fifty-seven crops on his old home place, where R. W. Scott now lives. Mr. Pierce has partly lost the use of his right arm, but can shave himself all right with his left hand. He has never been outside of Alabama, but has hosts of friends here, where he has always lived. Good luck to Mr. Pierce in his old days, we all say. One more banner has lost out in our section, and the next one we lose we'll have no banner at all.

UNION READER.

LIBERTY HILL.

Health of this community is good with a few exceptions. Rev. Cox preached an excellent sermon here Sunday to a good congregation. There also was preaching at Mt. Pleasant at the same hour, which sort of divded the crowd. Our Sunday school at Liberty is progressing nicely. Some of our young people, among whom was W. G. Culp, our most efficient organist, went to Collins' Chapel, and report a nice time. Messrs. Jeff Ruffin and Sidney Weldon were at Collins' Chapel Sunday, but were in our community Sunday evening. They are hustling boys. R. A. S. and T. H. J are looking down the road every Sunday. They seem to be all smiles. J. W. G. still crosses the swamp. Rev. A. L. Foshee and family visited Newt Childress Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. John Jones visited Mt. Pleasant Sunday.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Hall of Clanton Lodge,
No. 423, A. F. & A. M.,
April 7, 1906.

To the W. M., Wardens and Brethren of Clanton Lodge No. 423, A. F. & A. M.:

We, your committee appointed to dratt and present suitable resolutions upon the death of our late friend and brother fellow craftsman, James J. Thompson, beg to submit the following:

Bro. Thompson was born in Coweta county, state of Georgia, on the 4th day of November, 1850, and moved to Coosa county, Alabama, when quite an infant. He joined the Presbyterian church at Unity when a young man, to which faith he adhered with Christian fidelity during the remainder of his life. On the 19th of December, 1872, he was married to Miss Mary Smith, whom he has left as his surviving widow. In December, 1886, Bro. Thompson came to Chilton county, where he resided until his death on the 17th day of February, 1906 at the age of 55 years, 3 months and 13 days.

Whereas, It having pleased the Grand Architect of the Universe to summon to a state of endless duration our worthy Brother Fellow Craft we, while bowing with humble submission to the inevitable decree, deeply deplore his having been called before reaching the point of his coveted desire in our fraternal order.

Therefore, be it resolved, That by the death of Bro. Thompson the community has lost a just, upright and valued citizen, his widow and children a kind and affectionate husband and father, and our lodge a faithful and consistent member.

Be it further resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and direct them for comfort and guidance to the unerring hand of him who doeth all things well.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be given to the widow of our deceased brother, and publish it in the county paper.

Respectfully submitted,
A. C. SMITH,
W. I. MULLINS,
E. B. DEASON,
Committee.

Berlin.—Several villages in Saxony experienced four earthquake shocks Saturday. No damage was done, but the inhabitants were greatly alarmed.

Bank Your Saving's With a Safe Bank.

Every man, woman and child, no matter where they live, should have a savings account with the Citizens' Savings bank of Birmingham, for the following reasons:

It is the only bank of importance in the state which confines its banking business strictly to savings accounts and accepts no commercial business. The banking laws of Alabama provide that where a bank doing both a savings and general banking business becomes insolvent, the depositors who had not segregated for interest (commercial) will have preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings—in other words, the savings depositors can't be paid a cent until the commercial depositors have been paid in full.

We take no trade risks; all our loans are made on first class improved real estate mortgages or other gilt-edge collateral security—our motto being "The strength of a bank is in its individual loans."

These things, backed up by our cash capital and responsibility of our board of directors and the long and successful experiences of our officers in the banking business, renders the bank as safe as United States bonds.

Bank with us by mail. It is easy and safe. Write for information.

Office hours from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. every day.

F. E. AND C. U. OF A.

Dear Brothers:

We ask that every union man in the county turn out on May 17th at Thorsby to the public speaking in the interest of the F. E. and C. U. of A. Now, boys, as this meeting is to be at a place where we have no local union as yet, it is the duty of all to come prepared to supply the people with dinner. We hope the county will be fully represented, so boys don't fail to come. Let's make it the biggest day since the birth of the union in Chilton, and also be prepared to swell the day at 12 o'clock. Yours for that day,

A. LITTLETON,

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1 50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

Views Showing the Devastating Effects of Earthquake and Fire in San Francisco.

THE RUINS OF THE STANFORD MEMORIAL CHURCH.

A SECTION OF THE CITY DURING THE FIRE.

It is now decided that the old lines of the city will not be followed, but that instead new thoroughfares will be traced, all streets made wider than formerly, and a uniform style of architecture adopted. For two years Daniel Burnham, an architect, had been agitating for a city beautiful. He had rallied many business men to his support, but his plans were abandoned by the city authorities only two months ago as beyond all reason in cost.

Now, the twin disaster of earthquake and fire has made possible the accomplishment of Burnham's dream, which it had been admitted by every one would transform San Francisco into the most beautiful city in the world. Work will begin at once in pushing Burnham's ideas to complete development, and all the municipal officials are enthusiastic over the outlook. Mayor Schmitz expressed his delight with the plan for the new San Francisco.

"The whole city will be remodeled," said Mayor Schmitz. "We will start work right at the water front. Even the ferry house, which survived the fire, will be torn down and replaced

The eastern section of the country is only now beginning to realize the widespread nature of the San Francisco disaster. The pictures of the wrecked and burning city now coming in tell the story as it was impossible to tell it in any other way.

The most tumbled and tangled district in the city is not the southern fringe of Market street, the area where the devastation was widest and the loss of life greatest, but on a little strip between Harrison and Valencia, Seventeenth and Nineteenth streets. It was in this area that the Valencia Hotel sank into the earth. The block between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets and Valencia is twisted out of all appearance of houses. The car tracks at one place run in a wavy line from one side of the curb to the other. The asphalt is broken as though great bubbles had forced their way through it.

At the corner of Eighteenth and Valencia there is a hole ten feet wide. The asphalt is turned up from the centre of this hole like the petals of a flower, and from it comes a stream of clear water. No one can tell whether this stream comes from a broken main or from a brook which used to run down Eighteenth street.

Valencia Hotel sank ten feet into the earth and pitched forward into the street. When the debris of the hotel was cleared away it was found that the asphalt pavement before it had bulged upward to make a mound four feet high. The hole into which the foundations sank is filled with water.

The big fire obliterated the old Chinatown forever. Mayor Schmitz has informed Chief of Police Dinan that all of the Chinese now in the city will be collected and placed in and near Fontana's Warehouses, near Fort Mason, and that the new Chinatown would be located at Hunter's Point, on the southern extremity of the county on the bay shore. It is several miles distant from the old Chinatown. All Chinese who have left the city and who return to it will be concentrated at the new point.

by a magnificent structure on the Burnham designs. In the water front section alone we will spend $25,000,000. New wharves and depot will be built, and market street from end to end will offer two unbroken lines of skyscrapers. Throughout the city improvement will be carried out exactly as Mr. Burnham has advocated for two years.

"We will have a great boulevard and terrace at Twin Peaks, and the several new parks and other beauty spots conceived by the architect now will be constructed. The changes will cost tens of millions, but the result will be that San Francisco will stand as the most beautiful of all cities. I predict that there will be nothing to compare to the new city in beauty and utility. We were too cramped in our business quarters. Now we are going to have plenty of elbow-room, and, besides, we will have a city that will delight the eye. All the old ugliness has gone forever.

"The new San Francisco will be better than the old, as was the case in Boston, Chicago, Seattle, Galveston and Baltimore, but on a much larger scale. Thirty days will see 50,000 men at work in the burned district."

Bells Weaken the Tower.

Another Italian campanile, only one degree lower in fame than that of Venice, is threatened. This is the great bell tower of the Cathedral of Lecce, one of the loftiest in Italy—about 250 feet. It is also of great antiquity. Its weakness is due to the daily ringing of its enormous bells.

New French Stamp.

The new French penny stamp will be printed in two colors, and will bear, like the other stamp of the Republic, a figure of a woman sowing seed in a field.

Benedictines in England.

The Benedictines from France, who have settled at Malvern, England, have merely come home again. King Edward, the Confessor, founded a hermitage at Malvern, and after the Norman conquest, in 1066, the hermitage became a Benedictine priory.

The Nation's Drink Bill.

An eighth of the nation's expenditure for food for the fiscal year ending in June, 1905, went into stimulating drinks, including tea and coffee. We drank up approximately $1,543,000,000, or $275,000,000 more than in 1901. More of the increase went into malt beverages, tea and coffee than into spirituous liquors. The figures are compiled by the American Grocer. They do not disturb the average of per capita indulgence in alcoholic drinks which we have maintained for twenty years. Germany's wine, beer and liquor bill for 1905 was $672,588,000, or $37.36 for every male inhabitant over 15 years of age. Than such as these no statistics are capable of doing harder service on both sides of a mooted question.

Miss Una Dell Berry, daughter of Mrs. Helen M. Berry, of West Lafayette, Ind., has been ordained a minister in the Christian church. From early girlhood she has taken deep interest in church work, and, possessed of a fine voice, she has led revivals. Although still in her teens, she has a remarkable knowledge of the Bible. She has been made assistant pastor of the First Christian church in Lafayette.

The delivery of telegraphic messages to persons in San Francisco was an impossibility. The messenger service of both the big companies was paralyzed.

Boers in Mexico.

The Boer colony, established in the State of Chihuahua, Mexico, two years ago, is doing well. The colonists are laying up money. They have dispensed with Mexican labor and are doing their own work.

The Country's Orange Crop.

Last year's production of oranges in this country was 10,000,000 boxes, or probably 1,000,000,000 oranges. That is an allowance of twenty to each inhabitant.

Backache, "The Blues"

Both Symptoms of Organic Derangement in Women—Thousands of Sufferers Find Relief.

How often do we hear women say: "It seems as though my back would break," or "Don't speak to me, I am all out of sorts"? These significant remarks prove that the system requires attention.

Backache and "the blues" are direct symptoms of an inward trouble which will sooner or later declare itself. It may be caused by diseased kidneys or some derangement of the organs. Nature requires assistance and at once, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound instantly asserts its curative powers in all those peculiar ailments of women. It has been the standby of intelligent American women for twenty years, and the best judges agree that it is the most universally successful remedy for woman's ills known to medicine.

Read the convincing testimonials of Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Cotrely.

Mrs. J. C. Holmes, of Larimore, North Dakota, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"I have suffered everything with backache and female trouble—I let the trouble run on until my system was in such a condition that I was unable to be about, and then it was I commenced to use Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If I had only known how much suffering I would have saved I should have taken it months sooner—for a few weeks' treatment made me well and strong. My backaches and headaches are all gone and I suffer no pain at my monthly periods, whereas before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered intense pain."

Mrs. Emma Cotrely, 109 East 12th Street, New York City, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—
"I feel it my duty to tell all suffering women of the relief I have found in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When I commenced taking the Compound I was everything with backaches, headaches, female troubles. I am completely cured, enjoy the best of health, and I owe it to you."

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful periods, weakness, displacements or ulceration, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the female organs, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, extreme ability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. Refuse to buy any substitute.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN

Remember, every woman is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham. If there is anything about her symptoms she does not understand. Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, her assistant before her decease, and for twenty-five years all her advice has been freely and gratefully given to every ailing woman who asks for it. Her advice and medicine have restored to health innumerable women. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Marvels of Concrete.

Sky-scrapers, sidewalks, bridges, fence posts, dams, roofings, tiles, telegraph poles, railroad ties, residences, piles, chimneys—these are a few of the uses to which concrete has been successfully put within the last few years, writes D. N. Harper in Technical World for May. In 1890 the total production of Portland cement in the United States was 335,000 barrels. Last year over 30,000,000 barrels were produced—an increase of nearly 9,000 per cent in fifteen years. That marks the growth of the concrete industry for the same period—for cement is the essential element in concrete.

Yet, least modern constructing engineers take too much credit to themselves for the miracles they have accomplished, it may be well to remind them that the ancient Romans, in 200 B. C., built of concrete the famous Pantheon, which is still one of the wonders of the Imperial City, and the splendid dome of which is practically a huge concrete shell. Surely no building material could hope for better demonstration of its durability than that.

THE PULPIT.

SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. DAVID J. BURRELL, D. D.

Subject: A King in the Pillory.

New York City.—"A King in the Pillory" was the subject of a strong sermon preached by the Rev. David James Burrell, D. D., LL. D., Sunday in the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth avenue. The text was from I Kings xii:2: "And it came to pass when Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, heard of it (for he was in Egypt), that they sent and called him." Dr. Burrell said:

"In reading the chronicles of the Kings of Israel we come upon the name of Jeroboam, and it is almost always mentioned in these terms, "Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin." This is repeated no less than eighteen times with weary reiteration. Jeroboam has stood in the pillory three thousand years, with that placard over him. Why is he thus branded and disgraced?

"At the time of our context he was living in Egypt. He did not belong there. He was a Jew; a widow's son. Distinguished as a civil engineer. He had begun at the foot of the ladder, taking a hand with pick and shovel in repairing of the fortifications of Milo. The eyes of King Solomon rested upon the tall, broad-shouldered youth, and, admiring his industry and earnestness, he promoted him step by step, until he was made superintendent of public works, and placed in charge of forty thousand men. His ambition grew with his advancement; and thus, little by little, temptation overcame him, as it has like many others of whom we read. They cannot bear prosperity. At this time in Israel there was much discontent, owing to royal luxury and extravagance, and to excessive taxes and governmental impositions. The young overseer was approached by the malcontents, and became involved in a conspiracy. Solomon got wind of it, the conspiracy collapsed, and Jeroboam fled to Egypt, where he was now living in impatient exile.

"At the death of Solomon the smoldering fire burst into a flame. His son Rehoboam refused to listen to the complaints of the people, saying: "My father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions." The ten tribes assembled and resolved on secession. The cry was raised: "To your tents, O Israel!" And we should be slow to find fault with them, for the state of affairs was much as it was when our forefathers came together in Independence Hall, and drew up a notable protest beginning, "When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another," etc. Then the question arose as to who should be the leader of the ten tribes. They turned to Egypt; and Jeroboam was sent for.

"They had longed for that message, and were prepared to answer it. He was probably not more than a fortnight on the way. The Israelites had consumed forty years in the same journey, when they came up "out of the house of bondage," but Jeroboam's feet were winged with ambition as theirs were not. What dreams and visions must have filled him! The crown beckoned him.

"He met the assembled people at Shechem and was formally inaugurated. "God save the King!" The ambitious youth were real at last. What an opportunity was before him! What an outlook, if he would reign in the fear of God! Alas, he began in the wrong way. Thinking only of personal advancement, he left God out of the reckoning. That was a desperate blunder. His reign of two and twenty years is briefly summed up in three words, all of them due to what Spenser calls the sacred hunger of an ambitious conscience."

"The first sin was against God. In order to set up the golden calves. From the standpoint of a godless king this was good policy. He reasoned thus: "The Scriptures that the people shall go up to Jerusalem to attend the three annual festivals. If they do this, however, it will be a question of time when they will return to their former allegiance. We must therefore, have our own centres of worship; and where better than at Dan in the north and Bethel in the south consecrated by sacred associations? As we cannot have the ark of the covenant, we must devise some other visible symbols of the presence of God. And what better than two golden calves, sent his wife in disguise to the prophet at Shiloh. As she reached the prophet's door he called out, "Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam. Why feignest thou thyself to be another? I have heavy tidings for thee. Go tell Jeroboam, Thou hast done evil above all that were before thee, therefore, I will bring evil upon the house, for the Lord hath spoken it.

"These warnings were lost upon this king. God did the best He could for him, as He does for every inveterate sinner. He warns, promises, entreats.

THE PULPIT.

SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. DAVID J. BURRELL, D. D.

Subject: A King in the Pillory.

New York City.—"A King in the Pillory" was the subject of a strong sermon preached by the Rev. David James Burrell, D. D., LL. D., Sunday in the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth avenue. The text was from I Kings xii:2: "And it came to pass when Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, heard of it (for he was in Egypt), that they sent and called him." Dr. Burrell said:

In reading the chronicles of the Kings of Israel we come upon the name of Jeroboam, and it is almost always mentioned in these terms, "Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin." This is repeated no less than eighteen times with weary reiteration. Jeroboam has stood in the pillory three thousand years, with that placard over him. Why is he thus branded and disgraced?

At the time of our context he was living in Egypt. He did not belong there. He was a Jew; a widow's son, distinguished as a civil engineer. He had begun at the foot of the ladder, having a hand with pick and shovel in the repairing of the fortifications of Millo. The eyes of King Solomon rested upon the tall, broad-shouldered young man, admiring his industry and address, he promoted him step by step till he was made superintendent of public works and placed in charge of thirty thousand men. His ambition grew with his advancement; and thus, through temptation overcame him as it has many others of whom we say, "They cannot bear prosperity." At this time in Israel there was much discontent, owing to royal luxury and extravagance, and to excessive taxes and governmental impositions. The young engineer was approached by the malcontents, and became involved in a conspiracy. Solomon got wind of it, the conspiracy collapsed, and Jeroboam fled to Egypt, where he was now living in impatient exile.

At the death of Solomon the smoldering fire burst into a flame. His son Rehoboam refused to listen to the complaints of the people, saying: "My father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions." The ten tribes assembled and resolved in session. The cry was raised: "To your tents, O Israel!" And we should be the last to find fault with them, for the state of affairs was much as it was when our forefathers came together in Independence Hall, and drew up a notable protest beginning, "When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another," etc. Then the question arose as to who should be the leader of the ten tribes who returned to Egypt; and Jeroboam was sent for.

They had longed for that message, and were prepared to answer it. He was probably not more than a fortnight on the way.

The Israelites had consumed forty years in the same journey, when they came up "out of the house of bondage," but Jeroboam's feet were winged with ambition as theirs were not. What dreams and visions dazzled him! The crown beckoned before him.

And the assembled people at Shechem did and was formally inaugurated. "God save the King!" The hopes of the ambitious youth were realized at last. What an opportunity was now before him! What an outlook, if he would reign in the fear of God! Alas, he began in the wrong way. Thinking only of personal advancement, he left God out of the account. That was a desperate blunder. His reign of two and twenty years is briefly summed up in three words, all of them due to what Spenser calls "the sacred hunger of an ambitious mind."

His first sin was against God, in setting up the golden calves. From the point of a godless king this was perfectly logical. He reasoned thus: "The law requires that the people shall go to Jerusalem to attend the three annual festivals. If they do this, however, it is a question of time when they will return to their former allegiance. We must therefore have our own centres of worship, and where better than at Dan in the north and Bethel in the south, both consecrated by sacred associations? As we cannot have the ark of the covenant, we must devise some other visible symbols of the presence of God. And what better than two golden calves, with faces like those of mystical figures over the ark?" Two shrines were dedicated accordingly, and the royal proclamation went forth: "These be your gods, O Israel!" From the standpoint of mere statesmanship this may have been "good politics," but it was bad religion. Any form of idolatry is offensive to God. It is not necessary to set up a golden calf. We may make an idol out of wealth or pleasure or honor. We may make an idol out of our imagination. Ideals are false except the One who has revealed Himself in His word as the true God. And anything is an idol which is served or honored more than God or honor Him.

The second sin of Jeroboam was against himself. He was warned of God, but refused to heed it. On one occasion, as he stood beside the altar about to burn incense there, an unknown and unnamed prophet stood before him crying, "O altar, altar! thus saith the Lord: A child shall be born unto the house of David, Josiah by name, which shall destroy the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and burn men's bones upon thee." And when Jeroboam stretched forth his hand and cried, "Lay hold on him!" his hand was palsied, so that he must needs entreat the Lord to restore it.

On another occasion his son, the heir-apparent, being desperately ill, the mother, knowing the futility of praying before the golden calves, sent his wife in disguise to the prophet at Shiloh. As she approached the prophet's door he cried: "Come in, thou wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? I have heavy tidings for thee. Go tell Jeroboam, Thus hast thou done: therefore, I will bring evil upon his house, for the Lord hath spoken it."

All warnings were lost upon this man. God did the best He could for him, as He does for every inveterate sinner. He warns, promises, entreats in vain. He sends blessings innumerable, then chastisements, sorrow, adversity to no purpose. Like Jeroboam, being wedded to his sins, they "run upon the bosses of the shield of God."

The third sin of this man was against the people. His influence was like the upas tree; and they sat under it. He "made Israel to sin." He issued a proclamation requiring them to bow at the idolatrous shrines; and during all the subsequent history of the ten tribes his baneful shadow was over them. They had fourteen kings before they were led away into exile, and there was not a godly man among them. One after another they took their places in the pillory beside him, being characterized on this wise, "Who followed in the steps of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin."

But why do we have the record of these sins? Would it not have been kinder to pass over them in silence? In the Assembly Hall of the Military Academy at West Point you may see the portraits of the various captains who have commanded there. One place, however, is left blank; it is the place that should have been occupied by Benedict Arnold, the traitor. The picture of Jeroboam might in like manner have been turned to the wall, but for the fact that the reiteration of his sin carries a great lesson with it, namely, the perpetuity of influence. "No man liveth unto himself and no man dieth unto himself." There are three kinds of influence which every man exerts; and we may wisely consider them.

The first is voluntary. The sins of Jeroboam were not inadvertant; he meant to have the people worship the golden calves. He did wrong deliberately. There are others who do likewise; thieves, rum sellers, dive keepers, managers of Sunday theatres, purveyors of unclean literature and authors of infidel books; these do evil with malice aforethought. Not content with ruining themselves, they plan to ruin others. To all such the word of the Master applies: "It must needs be that offenses come; but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh. It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."

But there are multitudes who do good and intend to do it. The world is full of them; teachers of truth, "sisters of mercy," life savers and philanthropists; who speak the seasonable word "which is like apples of gold in baskets of silver," and who eagerly stretch forth the helping hand. To such the word of the Master applies, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto Me."

The second kind of influence is automatic. And this is by far the largest force in life. For influence does not wait to be exerted, it exerts itself whether we will or not. I used to go fishing for trout in a clear stream among the Pocono Hills; but when I was last there the waters were dull and dark, and my errand was vain. The man who had built a paper mill up above did not mean to kill the fish; nevertheless, the refuse had effectually accomplished it. John Mills, who translated Chambers Encyclopedia into French in 1743, was moved by nothing worse than the thought of personal gain. But when, with that end in view, he enlisted the services of Voltaire, Rousseau, Diderot and others of that infidel group, he set in operation forces which fifty years later brought on the Reign of Terror. It is thus that men do evil without intending it.

The third kind of influence is posthumous. A man who had lived an evil life said on his deathbed, "I wish you could gather up my influence and bury it with me." Alas! that could not be. His body might lie in the sepulcher and his name be forgotten, but "the evil a man does lives after him." Of all the things that followed Jeroboam not one was so alive as Jeroboam himself, though he had been "gathered unto his fathers;" for through Nadab and Baasha and Ela and Zimri and the others he was still "making Israel to sin."

And the influence of right-living men is likewise immortal; "they do rest from their labors, but their works do follow them." The odor of the spikenard, with which an unknown woman once anointed the feet of Jesus, has come down through the centuries, her deed being told "as a memorial of her." So the dead are really the living. We are guided by the memory of those whom we have "loved and lost awhile." Goodness is "proof against the tooth of time and the raisure of oblivion." If a fixed star were to be extinguished in the distant heavens, it would be a million years before the people of this world would discover it—its light would still be shining on—,

So when a good man dies,
For years beyond our ken
The light he leaves behind him lies
Upon the paths of men.

The lesson is plain. Let us look to our influence. But how? The secret of doing good is being good. Can men gather grapes of thorns or figs of thistles? "A good man out of the treasure of his heart bringeth forth good fruit." Our influence is never better than our character, and character has its seat and centre in the heart. If we would set ourselves right in the matter, the first thing to do is to come to Christ, that we may rid ourselves of sin; and all the rest is following Him—that is, to believe His teaching, to do His work and to be like Him. Light cannot help shining. It sounds no trumpets, waves no banners, makes no announcement of its coming, but just comes. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify God."

O may I join the choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence; live
In pulses stirred to generosity,
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search
To vaster issues.

The Bud and the Blossom.

There is not such a great difference between grace and glory after all. Grace is the bud and glory is the blossom. Grace is glory begun, and glory is grace perfected. It will not come hard to people that are serving God down here to do it when they go up yonder. They will change places, but they won't change employments.—D. L. Moody.

SKIN ERUPTIONS 35 YEARS.

Suffered Severely With Eczema All Over Body—A Thousand Thanks to Cuticura Remedies.

"For over thirty-five years I was a severe sufferer from eczema. The eruption was not confined to any one place. It was all over my body, limbs, and even on my head. I am sixty years old and an old soldier, and have been examined by the Government Board over fifteen times, and they said there was no cure for me. I have taken all kinds of medicine and have spent large sums of money for doctors, without avail. A short time ago I decided to try the Cuticura Remedies, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, two treatments in all, I am now well and completely cured. A thousand thanks to Cuticura. I cannot speak too highly of the Cuticura Remedies. John T. Roach, Richmondale, Ross Co., Ohio, July 17, 1905."

A lighted match touched to the thread of a fabric will show at once whether one is of cotton, for if it is it will roll up in smoke before the silken one has fairly started to burn. This same test applied to wool will show quite as quickly whether there are any cotton threads, for they will burn rapidly and leave the worsted or wool ones burning slowly and making a black charred ash that has an unmistakable odor of burning wool.

Dancing Men in England.

Men who can dance are apt to be viewed with suspicion by their own sex and at public schools—the nursery of so many of our insular foibles and prejudices—a dancing boy is almost as much "rotted" as a boy who speaks French with a Parian accent. I have met many a man who can jump seventeen feet, dance a "shuffle" or a cake-walk, run a three mile race, play with twenty pound dumbbells, vault, walk, ride and swim, but who cannot dance a waltz and doesn't seem to want to. The Englishman regards dancing as effeminate and "footling"—and foots it accordingly, and the girls he meets at dances have to dance to his humor. —London Observer.

F. E. & C. U. OF A. EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

To the Local and County Unions throughout Alabama—Greeting:

You are hereby called upon to meet either in delegated form or in mass meeting. Also to see that all men and women of your respective counties and communities are aroused, as this is an opportunity that may not come again. You will assemble at the following times and places and will be addressed by one or more of our state officers on the plans and purposes of the Farmers' Union. It is our intention to secure to the farmer the right to price the products of their labor. We now have ware houses in several counties and are building in a number of others, and expect before the products of the farm begin to be placed on the market to be ready to handle the entire crop of our membership, which, if properly done, will be sufficient to dictate an equitable price and secure the same to all our members, and we appeal to you as union men to insist upon your non-union neighbors to come out and hear these discussions.

The dates and places can not be changed, as this is a tremendous undertaking and can only be carried out by the hearty co-operation of the entire membership. The executive committee of each county is expected to do all in their power to make each meeting a success. Provide all the conveniences possible at each place and arrange to have a good time. If any county union should have a meeting already arranged near any of the following dates, they will at once see to it that their dates and places are changed, if they wish to enjoy the benefits to be derived by these rallies as questions of vital importance will be discussed and great questions will be brought before the public. There will also be an executive session held at each appointment for getting our plans before the membership. Remember that we can not under any circumstances change the dates, as they are arranged to follow each other in such a way as to cover the entire State at the very least possible expense. Our ablest speakers will be with you. Lay down your work for one day and come out.

GUARDIAN'S SALE.

Under and by virtue of an order and decree, rendered by the Hon. L. H. Reynolds, judge of the probate court of Chilton county, on the 2d day of April, 1906, I, as guardian of Belle Cooley, will proceed to sell to the highest bidder for cash at public outcry on the premises

SATURDAY THE 5TH DAY OF MAY, 1905, between the hours of 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., the following described land, to-wit: E 1-2 of S W 1-4 and S W 1-4 of S E 1-4, Section 2, Township 23, Range 15, Chilton county, Alabama, which said land belongs to Belle Cooley, a minor, and is to be sold under the decree of said court for the purpose of reinvestment in other lands.

J. T. COOLEY,
4-12-06-4w Guardian Aforesaid.

Notice No. 20706.
NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Department of the Interior, Land Office at Montgomery, Ala., April 3, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before clerk of circuit court at Clanton, Ala., on May 19, 1906, viz.: Isaac J. Dennis, homestead entry No. 36411, for the S W 1-4 of S W 1-4 of Section 36, Tp 21 N of R 16 east.

He names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz.: Edwin L. Todd, J. L. Bryant Long, Thomas G. Lake, Oscar Glenn, all of Mountain Creek, Ala.

ROBERT BARBER, Register.

NOTICE TO NON-RESIDENT.

State of Alabama, Chilton County. Chancery Court, Seventh District Northeastern Division—Della Brown, Complainant, vs. Robert E. Brown, Defendant.

In this cause it is made to appear to the Register, by the affidavit on file of J. Osmond Middleton, that the defendant, Robert, E. Brown, is a non-resident of the State of Alabama, and further there that, in the belief of said affiant, the defendant, Robert E. Brown, is over the age of twenty-one years. It is therefore ordered by the Register that publication be made in The Union, a newspaper published in Chilton county, Alabama, once a week for four consecutive weeks, requiring him, the said Robert E. Brown, to answer, plead or demur to the bill of complaint in the above cause on or before the 10th day of May, 1906, and failing so to do within thirty days after the service of this summons a decree pro confesso may be taken against him in said cause.

Witness my hand this 9th day of April, 1906. S. A. STEWART,
Register in Chancery.

OBITUARY.

To the W. M., Wardens and Brethren of Aman Lodge No. 250:

The scythe of time has removed from our midst our beloved brother, F. M. Connell, whose faith and fidelity in Masonry held out faithful to the end, and he no doubt has gone up higher to dwell with the Grand Architect above, the supreme Ruler of all. While our loss is his gain, our loss should remind us with a never dying faith that we too, sooner or later, must be lain as low as he, and that we should do the work of Him who gave us life while it is day, for as the time came to our brother to forever leave the lodge below, so it will come to us. To his wife and children: As husband and father has paid the last great debt in faith, we beg you in God's name to emulate him as a veteran of war and a veteran of his lodge and church, a soldier of the cross. You all can give him up with that grand consolation that he is gone to receive that blessed pension that our Savior has gone to prepare for those who kept the faith. He is ready; he is waiting on the other shore; do not neglect to meet him there. Born February 14, 1822. Died April 7, 1906. United with his lodge November 23, 1863. Made an honorary member May 23, 1896. We desire a copy be sent to his family and a page in the minutes of this lodge be dedicated to his memory. Sleep on, sleep on, dear brother, husband and father, until the last great roll call and Jesus comes to make up His jewels. Respectfully submitted,

P. C. DENNIS.

BETHEL.

Dear Editor:

Here I come for the first time. I've been a silent reader of The Union for some time, and think it one of the best weekly papers published. Prof. H. A. Harris' school here is progressing nicely. He'll have seven or eight students ready to pass the State examination in July. Messrs. Roberts and McSwain will soon be ready to saw lumber at Falakto, having bought two new mills since they burned out. Ellis Mims and Willie Ray are putting a nice chance of logs on the yard at Falakto. Our Sunday school at Maple Springs is doing nicely. We have a good attendance every Sunday. May God help us to carry a good thing along. Most of our people are chopping cotton ready for more 10-cent cotton this fall. Uncle Dick Jones visited Miss Julia Elland last Sunday and reported a pleasant visit. Some young man is going up the road towards Poplar Springs every Sunday. I think the judge will have to fill out a license pretty soon. Success to The Union and its many readers.

A YOUNGSTER.

CENTER HILL.

Editor Union:

Health is good in thi scommunity at present. Mrs. Martha McGraw, who has been visiting her son, has returned home. Mrs. Jane Martin, who has been on the sick list at T. J. Cobb's, has gone to live with her daughter at Thorsby. The farmers are all smiles after the nice rain. You know the old saying, "Early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise." Success to The Union and its many readers.

PECK'S BAD BOY.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Dear Union:

We welcome the refreshing season of the past few wdays, causing farms and gardens to take on new life. Well, The Union just comes to us full and overflowing, and we never before witnessed such increasing interest in the correspondence of a home paper. Why we can easily read between the lines the universal eagerness all over the county, and outside as well, to see what is written each week in The Union. Indeed it is a batch of letters from friend to friend. Just let it grow. Sad to think of the death of Mr. Gresham, the father of the Farmers' Union. Another friend to the agriculturist is gone. The Farmers' Alliance produced many friends to the farmer's cause. A certain writer has recently said the Alliance movement was gotten up by Northern sharpers to burst the solid South. Oh, my! The solid South is already bursted to a certain extent. We need the fetters of the long past broken and let progress and truth take possession, as it is bound to do, and then by the people ruling we will not need the politician's cry of "Nigger, Nigger" no more forever in the Southland. Elder Waldrop preached here Sunday to a good audience. Subject, "Moses coming down the mount to Israel typical of earth's Redeemer coming to judgment." The Wylam correspondent is a good one. We welcome "Little J.," of West Chilton. The boys here are ready to march in one solid phalanx to the people's support when the Republican and Populist committees say the word.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

MULLINS HILL.

Editor Union:

Here I come for the first time. Sunday school is dead at this place, but I hope it will start up again and last longer and be better than ever before. Bennett Bearden and wife visited their father and mother Sunday and report a nice time. Many friends and relatives visited Mulberry Church and got caught out in a heavy rain. Well, we farmers are having a fat time this rainy week setting up in the house eating and sleeping until the sun is up, but just wait until it quits raining and we will have to live poor a while. We will hit the floor about 4 o'clock in the morning and work until the sun is sinking in the golden west. Dear friends, some have been talking about uncle around this neighborhood, but let me give you a little of my long tongue. Our dear uncle is one man who attends to his own business, and that is all a man ought to do. Our dear uncle has a good religion and a soft, tender heart for all. He attends Sunday school at Macedonia every Sunday evening and has a nice crowd. There is a nice school at Macedonia, with two teachers and about sixty scholars. You know it ought to be a good school. Well, as this is my first attempt to write I will ring off for this time, trusting that this won't go to the waste basket. Yours sincerely,

RABBIT HUNTER.

Editor Union:

Here I am again. I see in your last issue our community was left blank. Now that will never do. I may wear out my welcome, but I will just ask our kind editor to let me know just before hand. Haven't very much news, only the people are generally up with their work, and of course all were made glad on last Thursday by a fine rain, followed by another on Friday. We were all in need of rain. A telephone line will be erected as soon as possible from E. G. Cofer's to Jemison, making connection with the line from Randolph. When I begin to think of R. F. D. routes and free telephones erected by the people, as this one will be, controlled by trustees or a board of directors, it makes me feel glad I live out in the country and in the country that I do live in. We of Mars Hill are figuring on buying us an organ for our church and Sunday school—something I claim we have needed for many years. The majority of the people are in favor of an organ, and will buy one very soon. Bro. J. H. Thomas filled his regular appointment Saturday and Sunday to a large congregation. Mr. Charley Glasscock and family were visiting in our settlement Saturday, night and Sunday, and led a splendid lesson of music just after Sabbath school. We cordially invite Mr. Glasscock back with us again, for he is a noted singer, and of course it is natural with him. We are interested in hearing from "Music Lover" from Rehobath, and of course we insist that The Union correspondents give us all the news and fail not, and let us make our county paper the best of its kind, and not forget our subscriptions and not let them expire. I am in accord with one of the writers about the Banner—just let her drop.

THE OLD MAN.

MAPLESVILLE MELANGE.

Mesdames Ensign and Saportas have recently been to Stanton looking at Miss Dyer's beautiful millinery, since the "Easter hat" is now out of vogue. Miss Ricketts was the guest of Mrs. Dr. Walker, of Birmingham, last week. Mr. Mitchell has returned from a business (?) trip to Selma. Mrs. Garner has returned to Selma after a pleasant visit to her mother here. Hon. E. M. Bishop, of Blocton, has visited our city lately, and some do say that "cupid is tangled in the case." Mrs. Davidson has returned home after an extended trip to Hazlehurst, Miss. Miss D. Blalock is with the "old folks at home." We are now quite an "up-to-date" town since the handsome Mr. Deadrick is riding his young lady friends in his automobile. We were well represented at the Sunday school convention at Valley Creek by some of our most intelligent citizens and our wide-awake president, T. W. Crumpton. We sorely miss our friend, Mr. Snow, in our Sunday school, who is gifted in drawing Biblical illustrations and explaining for the benefit of all. Miss Mary Adams and Mr. Peagler were quietly married at the bride's home on last Wednesday afternoon. Only a few select friends were invited. The happy couple left immediately after the ceremony for their future home in Selma. Dr. Dunlap, of Lawley, is doing dental work at the Martin Hotel. Mr. Ed Ensign is in Montgomery on a business trip. Mrs. Berry, of Orrville, has been the guest of Mrs. Crumpton. Mr. Earnest Cobern, of Mulberry, was shaking hands with his many friends here last week. Success to The Union.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

Hello! Let me in, it's raining. The long wished for shower has come at last, but if it keeps on the way it looks this morning (Monday) about all the crops our farmers can bet on is our hay crop. But our Allwise Master knoweth best, and He will provide. Then, again, as the old darkey said, "More rain, more rest." Rev. Lowery filled his appointment here Sunday and delivered a good sermon to a large and attentive congregation. Rev. S. Simtherman will preach here the second Sunday at 7:30 p. m. The Misses Neoma Williams, Cynthia Littlejohn and Nora Childress were the welcome guests of Miss Abbie Lowery Sunday. The singing at B. F. Massey's home Sunday afternoon was well attended and proved a success. R. W. Littlejohn visited in Salem community Sunday evening. A. A. Jackson, the Lomax merchant, attended preaching here Sunday. Success to The Union and its numerous readers.

REHOBOTH.

Dear Editor:

Health still keeps good. Aleck Langston, Monroe Scott and Cleveland Langston paid a couple of days' visit to O. P. Scott a short time ago, and killed 9 squirrels. Columbus Scott and wife and her charming little sister, Hattie, have been visitors of O. P. and J. D. Scott. That's right, come on, Chilton county people. We love to see your faces. Come again this fall sure, if you can't get here any sooner, and we'll catch that red fox that J. D. S. jumped in his field the other day. Well, the singing at J. D. Scott's last Saturday night a week ago was a good one; also the one at W. B. Green's Sunday night following. Our S. S. is getting along fine, and the report of Henry Held and Noah Moore, who went to the State S. S. convention at Montgomery as delegates, was very good. Rehoboth S. S. has ordered an organ (with 18 stops). There will be a lecture on music with chart and black board illustration at Rehoboth this coming Sunday at 3 p. m. given by J. D. C. Scott. He invites all to come that will and hear what he has to say. The Farmers' Union here is doing fine, 4 new members last meeting and "more on the string." I've noticed every now and then in your valuable paper where some one expresses his thoughts on music. I say talk on, good brother, there is nothing that cheers me more than to talk or hear some one else discourse on music. I would not dislike it if THE UNION (the best paper Chilton county ever had) was fully half a musical journal, as I am such a lover of music, and I hope that all of us will think: "That God sent his singers upon earth with songs of gladness, songs of mirth, that they might touch the hearts of men and bring them back to heaven again."

A MUSIC LOVER.

MARS HILL CHIPS.

Mr. Editor:

It has been some time since I've said anything. Health of our community is fairly good at present. Our S. S. is progressing nicely. Rev. J. H. Thomas filled his regular appointment here Sunday and had a large and attentive congregation. Our farmers are very well up with their work, and were glad to see it rain last week. I've been watching the political question, and I see that the republican and populist committees have called for a meeting next Saturday (12th). Now, brother republicans and brother populists, I want to say a few words about these office seekers. Look out for them. We have them in both parties. We have some important officers to elect this time. I want to say I am as strong a reformer as Chilton has ever had. I have always stood for the right thing in our county. We want to send a man to the Legislature who will look after things for us and see that no special laws are forced on the county against the will of the majority in the county. Well, a few words about the various letters from all over the county. "Just a Voter," "Collins Chapel" and many others I could read more still. And Criton says the populist party is dead. Just wait till the roll is called and we'll be there.

REFORMER.

ROCK MOUNT.

There will be a public working for the purpose of fencing the cemetery at this place on Saturday, May 26, beginning at 7:30 a. m. Everybody that's interested will please be on hand.

This is to notify you to appear before the Probate Court of said county at the next term thereof, commencing Monday, the 14th day of May, 1906, then and there to show cause, if any you have, why a decree for the sale of said real estate should not be made for the payment of the taxes assessed and for fees and costs. This 11th day of April, 1906.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

WHO'S AFRAID?

Maid of six and youth of seven
Underneath the sunny skies
Digging in the mud and gravel,
Much absorbed in making pies.

Bulldog comes to interview them,
Maiden hollers, much dismayed.
Youth puts chubby arm around her
With a manly, "Who's afraid?"

Maid of nineteen, youth of twenty,
Selfsame couple meet again;
Occupied in tender parting
At the witching hour of ten.

Bulldog waits outside the portal
Youth appears in need of aid.
Maid puts slender arm around him
With a blushing, "Who's afraid?"
—McLandburgh Wilson, in the Sun.

RIPPLES OF MIRTH

Casey—"An' whoi did ye name th' baby after th' Czar?" Corrigan—"Well, he don't know a thing about annythin' an' shtill he's th' boss."—Puck.

"Did you ever know Bilkins to keep his word?" "Once." "When was that?" "I lent him $5, and he said he'd be eternally indebted to me."—Cleveland Leader.

"You say your first speech made several converts?" "Yes," answered Senator Sorghum regretfully; "from my side of the question to the opposition."—Washington Star.

"Isn't this climate changeable?" asked the man who worries about his health. And the man who suffers with the heat merely answered: "I hope so."—Washington Star.

Husband—"You know, my dear, my devotion to you is unremitting." Wife—"Yes, I've noticed that when I've been away and wrote to you for money."—Baltimore American.

This earth, upon its axis set,
Spins on. We scarce can time it,
And every time it turns we get
A different kind of climate.
—Washington Star.

"Two things make my wife awful mad." "What are they?" "To get ready for company that don't come, and to have company come when she isn't ready."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY

Dr. Piorkowski, a German bacteriologist, says he has discovered not only the microbe of distemper in dogs, but also an effective serum having curative as well as preventive qualities.

The strength of hair has been found by a German experimenter to vary greatly with color. A single black hair supported four ounces; one of very dark brown three and one-half ounces; brown, three ounces; but yellow scarcely held up two ounces without breaking.

"Lusol" is the name of a new hydrocarbon oil—a by-product from the manufacture of coke—which is being used for illuminating purposes in Paris. The city authorities are experimenting with it and it gives a large amount of light at minimum cost.

In a hot fire the union of the carbon of the fuel with the oxygen of the air produces carbonic acid gas, which surrounds the paper and prevents it from blazing, for carbonic acid does not blaze. But if you give the paper a little draft by blowing upon it, you dissipate the carbonic acid and fan the paper into flame.

A concern at Baldwinsville, Mass., recently had to instal new boilers in its plant and the question was how to secure power while the work was going on. At length a locomotive was hired from the railroad, and this being switched alongside the mill and connected up with the engine inside furnished all the steam needed.

A novel use of compressed air is made by some railway companies in the Southern States of America, says the Railway News. When the loads of cotton for export are being taken to the coast there is always some danger of such highly inflammable material becoming damaged through sparks from the locomotives. To prevent this the locomotive boilers are filled with compressed air. A train load of several thousand bales of cotton can be hauled by these locomotives at a rate of twelve miles an hour, although no fire whatever is used in working them.

The Dreadnought, the largest and most powerful battleship of the world's navies, was launched at Portsmouth, England, February 10. The vessel is the first of a new class, in which the constructors have embodied the lessons obtained from close observation of naval operations in the recent war in the Far East. When ready for sea, the ship will displace 18,500 tons, and will have the heaviest armament ever carried by a ship. She will be able to discharge every minute ten projectiles weighing 8500 pounds, with sufficient velocity to send them twenty-five miles, or to penetrate sixteen inches of armor at a distance of two miles.

Comic Horror.

The two infinities of Kant did not chill or hurt him, but his fearlessness is shared by few. Only for a short instant, at best, will most persons consent to look open-eyed at any clear image of fate or of infinity. Scarcely a friend of mine will look steadily at the clear midnight sky for a minute in silence. The freezing of the heart follows; the appalling shudder at the dread contemplation of infinity, which may be called cosmic horror, is more than can be endured. If those stars are absolutely and positively infinite then there is no up or down, and they knew no beginning, will have no ending. With any such staring gorgon of fatalism the surcharged attention is shaken, and the chemistry of common life seizes upon the liquid crystals with avid hunger.—George M. Gould, M. D., in Atlantic.

Birds as Helpers.

German farmers are trying to induce the smaller birds to return to their old haunts about the fields, and for this purpose are setting out boxes and other artificial devices to serve the birds for homes. The farmers need the birds to destroy the insects, but the birds are disappearing not only because of their direct slaughter, but also because old trees in the decayed hollows of which they built their nests, the old copses which they haunted, and both of which were prolific in insects, together with the stagnant pools which yielded them food in abundance, are all disappearing before the closer cultivation of the present time. American farmers can well follow suit, for there are no better aids to agriculture than our native birds. It certainly pays to be on good terms with these feathered friends.

To the Pacific.

A grand highway, boulevard or concourse, is a probability between New York and San Francisco. In an air line the distance is 2600 miles. The shortest railroad line, I believe, is 3370 miles. Locomotives must have cuts as well as tunnels and embankments, their powers of mounting grades being extremely limited. A fifty per cent. grade is fun to an auto car. The Great Wall of China was built in five years. We could construct this ocean-to-ocean boulevard in less time. And what a superb drive it would be!—New York Press.

IT SURE IS.

The following article was clipped from Sunday's Age-Herald, which, by producing the article, tacitly admits its truth. We thank the Age-Herald in the name of the Republicans of this section for its graceful admission of the merits of a political opponent:

A Safe Party to Trust.

From Leslie's Weekly.

The abolition of the treasury deficit and the appearance of a surplus, which has recently taken place, is a conspicuous triumph in republican financiering. For several years past there had been a deficit. It was $42,000,000 in 1904 and $24,000,000 in 1905. Secretary Shaw, in his report to congress last December, estimated that the deficit would be down to $18,000,000 for the fiscal year 1906, which closes on June 30. But the deficit has disappeared and a surplus has come. The surplus at the beginning of April was $6,000,00. There is a chance that at the end of the year on June 30 there may be a surplus of $8,000,000 or $10,000,000.

Brilliant triumphs in governmental financiering have been gained by the republican party. It met the outlay of a great war in 1861-65 and of a small war in 1898, the former costing thousands of millions of dollars and the latter hundreds of millions. After the conclusion of each war the republicans reduced taxation. They funded the bonds at a lower rate of interest and thus reduced the people's burdens. Of the $895,000,000 of the government's bonded debt, two-thirds, or $595,000,000, is at 2 per cent interest.

No other great nation in the world has so small a debt as that of the United States. The debt of no other great country bears such a low rate of interest. In the world's money markets the credit of no other country is as high as ours. Many of the republican treasury chiefs—Chase, McCulloch, Sherman, Windom and Shaw—are among the greatest finance ministers whom the world has seen. In addition to the exploits already mentioned, the republicans, by their resumption act, raised all the country's currency to the specie level in 1879, and by their act of March 14, 1900, they made specie mean gold.

A STATEMENT BY JUDGE REYNOLDS.

Editor of The Union:

I have just noticed a piece in the "Banner" where some one seems to be very much hurt about the county convicts being contracted to the T. C. I. & R. R. Co. Now, I don't know who wrote this article, but I'm going to be charitable to him, and say that he does not know anything about the law applying to convicts. Yes, I believe it was ignorance on his part, for I don't believe there is any one in the county that wants to make statements about any official that are not true, and especially in the manner in which this letter is written, for any one can read it and see what the writer intended. Now, I am sorry it is necessary for me to appear in print to make any statement about this matter, but when such statements appear as are in that letter I think it my duty to let the public know what the facts are. When I came into office the county was getting $4.50 per month for its convicts from the Hand Lumber Company, which was located near Mobile, and as soon as I got settled I began to look around and see what I could do with the convicts(and the Sheriff helped me all he could, as the officers and witnesses were not getting 50 cents in the dollar for their work. I succeeded in getting a contract with Freeman, Hall & Co., who were located near Centerville, Ala., but about ago this company sold out their business and moved back to Georgia, and could not use the convicts any longer, so I had to look around and see where I could place them. I only found two parties that wanted convicts—the Sloss Iron and Steel Company (this is the company that Mobile had the trouble with) and the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company. I let the convicts out to the T. C. I. & R. R. Co. at $35 per month. This is where the State keeps its convicts, and all the State officials boast of what the great Democratic party is doing for the convicts. Dr. Cunningham is making his race for Governor mostly on this issue, and yet I am a bad man for sending the county convicts to the same place and where they get the same treatment that the State's men get. I feel assured that the "Citizen" that wrote that article was ignorant of the real state of affairs. Now, I will make a comparison and take the first case I have had under this latest contract and the first man I have sent to the T. C. & I R. R. Co.—James Branch, a negro who got drunk and started out with a shotgun to kill Mr. Culbreth, and he (Culbreth) did like all law-abiding citizens ought to do—let the law take its course, and not take his shotgun and settle it. James Branch was fined $50, and the costs amounted to $23.55. He could not pay out, so I sentenced him (as the law prescribes) —twenty days to pay the fine and seventy-eight days to pay the costs. Under the present contract each officer got his full fee, viz: Sheriff, $4.50; solicitor, $7.50; witnesses, $4.80; fees paid into the county treasury, $6.75, and the county will receive $90.89 if he serves his time out. Now, let's see what would have been the results under the former contract before I went into office: The Sheriff would have gotten $2.25, solicitor $3.75, witnesses $2.40, the county on its fees $3.37 1-2 and the county would have gotten $3 on the fine. So if you will figure it out the county will receive $91.35 more in this case under my contract than it would under the old contract. And remember that the negro would have to work the same number of days at either place, but at Hand's he would have to work fourteen hours per day, while at the T. C. I. & R. R. Co.'s he only has to work eight hours in each day. Now this "Citizen" says it goes into the pockets of officers and that I am speculating on the poor unfortunates for the benefit of the magnates. Just figure this out and see where the profits would go under the two contracts; one paid $4.50 per month and the other paid $35, and I think you can see which magnate got the most profit out of the poor unfortunate negro's work. Under my contract the profits go into the county treasury; under the former contract the profits went into the pockets of a corporation. Now, let's see for a moment who gets the benefit of my contract. In the first place the Sheriff, the solicitor, the witnesses and the county are paid their fees in full, dollar for dollar, and don't you think it is right that these officers should get what the law has provided they shall have? Then the balance goes into the fine and forfeiture fund, which fund is used to pay the witnesses that are summoned to court and have to stand round and then get a warrant for $1 a day, and they sell it for less than half its face value. Which do youthink is the best of the two ways—to put the money into the pockets of a corporation or to put it in the pockets of the witnesses? Now, it may be that Citizen wants the fine and forfeiture fund to stay where it is now, so that when a man is compelled to come to court as a witness he'll have to sell his "scrip" for half price. Now, I want you to take note of these points: I have hired the county convicts to the same firm that has the State's convicts. The profits do not go into the pockets of any officer, but do go into the county treasury to pay the witnesses that have been summoned to court by the State. That it makes no difference in my pay whether the price paid for the convicts is $4.50 or $35 per month. I don't get any benefit from the high price, but the county treasury does. * * * Now I saw a statement some time ago in the Banner were some one said I had told some overseer that he was not responsible for the condition of his road. This is too unreasonable to mention, and I'm sure there is no person in the county with so little sense as to believe it. I am trying to do my duty as I see it, and manage my part of the county's affairs as I would any other business; but I've found out that it does not suit some people to deal with them as you would in private business. "Citizen" says that bushes are growing in the county roads, and the labor of these men is needed here. I'll say to "Citizen" that I always give every one convicted in my court time to pay out or get some one to confess with him, and sometimes I've waited longer than the law intends, and so run the risk of having a writ sued out and the criminal turned loose. "Citizen" need only ask the Sheriff and solicitor, and they will corroborate this statement. Now, I want to be fair about this contract business. Times are btter now than when the $4.50 contract was made and labor is higher. So all credit is not due me for the high price obtained in the last contract. As "Citizen" is such a religious man, I feel sure he will correct his statement and have the Banner publish it, so that those that have seen his article will see the correct statement. Respectfully,

L. H. REYNOLDS.

Clanton, Ala., May 4, 1906.

Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. Law Department. Walker Percy, General Counsel. Birmingham, Ala., May 5, 1906.

"The Banner,"

Clanton, Ala.

I am in receipt of a copy of your paper containing an article signed "Citizen" of date April 29, 1906, referring to the contract entered into between Judge Reynolds and the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. in which the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. agreed to pay $35.00 for county convicts. In the course of this article "Citizen" states that Mobile county had hired its convicts to the coal mining company and upon learning that they were not being properly cared for the Board of Revenue ordered the County Physician to make a personal inspection of the condition of their convicts, which was done, and Citizen in his article quotes a part of the report of the County Physician as to the treatment which the Mobile county convicts were receiving at the hands of the coal mining company, from which it would appear that these convicts were badly fed and cruelly and inhumanely treated. The article referred to is incorrect and misleading and unintentionally does a serious injustice. From the article it would appear that the Chilton county convicts are leased to the same company which had previously leased the Mobile county convicts and which had been guilty of inhumanity in the treatment of these convicts. As a matter of fact the Mobile county convicts were leased to the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company. The Chilton county convicts are leased to the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, an entirely distinct and competing organization. I do not wish to cast any reflection whatever upon the Sloss company; I know nothing whatsoever as to the correctness of the report made as to the treatment of convicts by that company. The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. wishes to be judged by its own record. It has been engaged approximately twenty years in mining coal in part with convict labor. During this time it has had in its custody and care thousands of convicts leased to it by the state of Alabama,and thousands of convicts leased to it by the various counties in the State. During this entire time not one single complaint has ever been made against the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. on account of the treatment of its convicts. The convicts are well fed, properly clad and humanely treated. The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. is proud of its record on this point. I state without hesitation that the State Board of Convict Inspectors and all of the county officials with whom the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. has had any business will affirm the correctness of what I have said as to the treatment which the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Co. has accorded the convicts under its care.

Very truly yours,

WALKER PERCY,

General Counsel Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company.

The above is a copy of letter sent to the Banner for publication, and should be read by our people in connection with Judge Reynolds' statement in this paper.

MAPLE SPRING.

Health is good here, and our farmers are about up with their crops. We've had rain and cotton chopping is all the go. Well, I hope we'll have plenty of rain and make good crops, as farming is the life of the world. What is the matter with Mt. Pleasant and Toby, boys? Nothing in last week's paper. I guess they've forgotten how to write, but it will give some other good fellow room to write a good piece. Boys, don't stand back; pull off your hats and jower for THE UNION. Let us all go to the F. E. and C. U. of A. speaking at Thorsby on May 7th and learn all we can. Boys, stick to the farm, it is your best place. Well, I'll pinch off this time and try to do better next time. Good wishes to THE UNION.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Miss Angie Smith visited near Thorsby Saturday.....William Terry was down on the south side Sunday visiting at L. G. Posey's.....The charming Misses Lily Pate and Omer Smith attended service at the Freeman school house Sunday.....James DuBoze, of Jemison, was here Sunday. His daughter, Mrs. Bell Waldrup, of Maplesville, accompanied him home....We are having such lovely weather, while fair "Luna" makes the night beautiful, and the evening star adds luster to the silent scene. The forest is clothed with a dense foliage of green, the early dawn is greeted with the song of the beautiful blue bird, while the other feathered songsters blend their voices in a symphony of praise. Chas. E. Orr has appropriately said: "All nature smiles as soft and sweet, I'm thinking, Lord, of Thee." Then the beautiful blue sky, the bright sunshine. People busy and thus passes another sweet spring day, and the sombre night again shows us beautiful worlds of light.

"Ye starry lights, ye twinkling flames, Shine to your maker's praise."

The boys here are ready to march in one solid phalanx to support the people's cause when the republican and populist committees say the word. ....We have noticed for a long time how true our people are to those who remain loyal and true. There was R. M. Honeycutt elected probate judge and was not permitted to fill the office, but just wait six years and the people gave him a land slide. Neither did they forget the faithful E. G. Rollins. Judge Reynolds elected state senator, but was kept out of the office, but just as soon as the people needed a representative in the constitutional convention, why Reynolds was the battle cry of the campaign.....Some thought Assessor Pounds should have held office long ago, but in the last election the time was here, and Pounds was overwhelmingly elected. Several others could be mentioned but enough has been said to prove the people's loyalty to those who remain true. Say, all ye correspondents of THE UNION, tell your neighbors about the UNION, the people's paper, the friend of the great common people. Show it to them and all fall into line.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

This letter arrived one day too late for last week's paper, but the larger part of it is "good gospel" at any time.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper, as it is my first time. Health of this community is fine. We've been getting plenty of rain. Rev. J. H. Thomas filled his regular appointment at Mars Hill Sunday. J. N. Terry was a visitor at J. D. H. Terry's Sunday. Martin Langston visited E. G. Cofer Saturday. The telephone line is going up between Cofer's and Jemison. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the faithful care of Rev. J. M. Gothard. H. G. Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words, as I've not seen a piece in your paper from our community yet. To the brethren of the F. E. & C. U. of A.: We have about sixty members and are getting along nicely. We've ordered nineteen bushels of millet seed, besides about $150 worth of other stuff, and it does look like our farmers are going to plant something to feed on besides cotton seed this year. I don't think I ever saw farmers trying to improve any faster than at the present time. Do you know what causes this? It is the union, boys. I'm glad the people are finding out that there is redemption for them. We have a good Sabbath school also. As I'm a new writer I'll stop now. Hoping to hear from some one else of our lodge soon, yours for The Union,

Bank Your Saving's With a Safe Bank.

Every man, woman and child, no matter where they live, should have a savings account with the Citizens' Savings bank of Birmingham, for the following reasons:

It is the only bank of importance in the state which confines its banking business strictly to savings accounts and accounts of a commercial business. The banking laws of Alabama provide that where a bank doing both a savings and general banking business becomes insolvent, the depositors who had money accumulated for interest (commercial) will have preference over those who had their money in the bank for savings—in other words, the savings depositors can't be paid a cent until all commercial depositors have been paid in full.

We take no trade risks; all our loans are made on first class improved real estate mortgages or other gilt-edge collateral security—our motto being "The strength of a bank is in its individual loans."

These things, backed up by our cash capital and responsibility of our board of directors and the long and successful experiences of our officers in the banking business, render this bank as safe as United States bonds.

Lee Hayes was in Clanton Thursday.

Rev. B. H. Vickers was in town Thursday.

J. J. Headley was a pleasant visitor Friday. He is quite a baseball player, as shown by his record in this paper. Our national game is good, healthy sport for young men to engage in, and they should be encouraged.

W. H. Bean was a welcome caller Friday. He is one of the kind of subscribers that are like jewels in an editor's sight. He pays strictly in advance.

C. J. and R. J. Elland were in Clanton Friday.

Wiley Gore was in town Friday.

The S. C. A. held its monthly meeting Saturday and called off the "barbecue" that has been talked of so long. We hear that the feature of Saturday's meeting was a talk by Rev. W. M. Wood.

Miss Daly Childress and little brother, Herman, went to Birmingham Saturday on a visit to their sister, Mrs. J. W. Littlejohn.

Geo. W. and J. H. Williams were in Clanton Saturday.

J. N. Dennis was in town Saturday.

W. F. Littlejohn was a pleasant visitor Saturday.

H. T. Littlejohn, H. W. Devaughan M. C. Williams, J. P. Rushing, C. C. Burkhalter and James A. Mims were Clanton visitors Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Folmer have a 10-pound boy at their house.

T. J. and J. W. Collins, K. R. Burnett and son, all of Collins chapel, were in town Monday.

R. C. Riggins was in Clanton Monday.

J. B. Northcutt was in Clanton Monday. He says he intends starting a good singing class soon.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Ben Trawick on May 5th a fine girl. Dr. J. P. Hayes was in attendance and "mother and child are doing well."

W. N. Childress was in Clanton Tuesday.

W. A. Downs was in town Tuesday.

Assessor L. B. Pounds has finished his tax book and turned it over to the Judge of Probate. This is in accordance with the "code" and much sooner than has been the custom heretofore. Mr. Pounds has done all the work himself, and says he alone is responsible for errors, if any there be. Those who have looked at the book speak very highly of the excellent style in which it is filled out.

A. M. Mims was in Clanton Tuesday.

Mrs. Sam W. Collins, the wife of our genial circuit clerk, was in Clanton Tuesday visiting her father, former Sheriff J. T. Cooley.

J. M. Waller, formerly of Thorsby, who has been living in Birmingham for some time, is in hard luck at present. His wife is very seriously ill and is at the Hillman hospital under the care of Dr. Jordan. All hope that she will speedily recover.

Judge Reynolds and Tax Com. J. P. Vanderveer went to Prattville Wednesday to attend circuit court at that town.

G. T. McElderry was in Clanton Tuesday. He is making quite a canvass for railroad commissioner, visiting about every county in the state.

Dr. Hair was in town Sunday. He intends setting up here as a dentist.

IN MEMORIAM.

Near the close of the day on May 1, 1906, the white soul of Miss Sallie Knight was freed from its earthly tenement of clay and took its flight for the Home above not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Through the nine weary months of suffering she has passed through great sorrow, but she never murmured against the dear Master's will. She bowed with meek submission and accepted the cross with angelic patience, and with unwavering faith carried her burden to Jesus, the source of all strength. For two long weary days and nights she called "Mamma" and "Papa," who had crossed over some months ago; but God with His wonderful eye of love saw that she had suffered long enough, and when at 3 o'clock she was called to meet death's warning she did not shrink or dread to go. She raised her hands towards heaven and said "Mamma" and "Papa," and then her sweet spirit passed away, the tired body and weary heart sank into a deep, peaceful sleep, with a look of sweet peace on her face, as if it were the shadow of angel's wings. Her tired eyes were closed, to open again upon the beauties of the heavenly land. Oh, dear weeping friends, how sweet it is to know that she is now with mama and papa. They can never be taken from her again. A soul has accomplished the great mission of this life when it has gained life eternal. God in His infinite love wants all his children to come home. We have nothing of this world's consolation to offer; we can only deeply, sincerely and most affectionately sympathize with those in their afflictive bereavements. We do not feel that we could speak any words that would ease your aching hearts or fill the vacancy of this one, but in the beautiful spirit of the Christian theology we do say that He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb looks down with infinite compassion upon the fatherless in the hour of their desolation, and that the same benevolent Saviour who wept tears of sympathy at the grave in Bethany will fold the arms of His love and protection around those who put their trust in Him. Why should we grieve at death's alarms; 'tis only the voice of Jesus calling us to His arms.

LUCY JONES.

GONE HOME TO GLORY.

The death angel visited our midst and called home to glory Miss Sallie Knight, who died Tuesday evening, May 1, 1906. Our sympathy is with the bereaved ones. She leaves four sisters, five brothers and a host of friends to mourn her loss, but our loss is heaven's gain. Miss Sallie lived a true Christian life. She has been in bad health for a long time. Her father died July 15, 1905. She said that she was ready to go at any time that her Lord saw best for her. We know that no one can fill her vacant place, but weep not, for she is with the angels. All that knew her loved her. She was laid to rest at New Salem Church on May 2. Dr. J. P. Hayes made great efforts to save her, but God saw fit to call her home, where pain and sickness never come. She will be greatly missed, but we trust to meet her where parting never comes. She cannot come back to us, but we can go to her. ONE THAT LOVED HER.

A 1905 BASEBALL RECORD.

Ball games that J J. Headley played in during the year 1905. The first club named is the one he played with, and the score is to be read in the same way: Fairview vs. Mulberry, 12 to 2; Fairview vs. Mulberry, 10 to 6; Clanton vs. Wetumpka, 9 to 10; Clanton vs. Wetumpka, 1 to 15; Blue Darters vs. Carwile's, 19 to 8; Clanton vs. Calera, 14 to 5; Clanton vs. Calera, 2 to 1; Clanton vs. Calera, 15 to 0; Blue Darters vs. Center Point, 13 to 5; Clanton vs. Prattville, 2 to 0; Clanto vs. Prattville, forfeited, 3 to 3; Blue Darters vs. Center Point, 13 to 10; Rough Riders vs. Mulberry, 17 to 9; Rough Riders vs. Waddy, 7 to 2; Rough Riders vs. Waddy, 17 to 6; Blue Darters vs. Center Point, 13 to 4; Blue Darters vs. B. and G., 6 to 2; Yellow Jackets vs. Red Rippers, 4 to 10; Blue Darters vs. Clanton, 16 to 3; Blue Darters vs. Vine Hill, forfeited, 6 to 4; Mulberry vs. Center Point, 18 to 2; Blue Darters vs. Cooper, 4 to 3; Mulberry vs. Scott's Hill, 5 to 3; Clanton vs. Thorsby, 13 to 3; Rough Riders vs. Waddy, 11 to 5. You will see that there were only three games lost, and out of the twenty-five games played I pitched 91 innings, and thirty-two scores were made on me. I struck out three times during the entire games—once by Henry Taylor, once by J. J. Burkhalter and once by Billy May. I want to say to the ball players (now if this is not a good record of 1905) I will try to make it better this season. So all you boys that aim to play ball this season had better start in time and try to get in practice, for we, the Blue Darters, aim to organize our team in a few days and get a good start. So you may look out for the Blue Darters this season. Best wishes to The Union and good luck to you ball players. J. J. H.

BALL GAME.

The Thorsby and Clanton ball teams will give each other a few points on how to play the game here Saturday evening. The Thorsby boys have been playing for several weeks and have already beat Clanton once, and are anxious to come down and give the second dose. As this is the first game the Thorsby boys have ever played here, the home team will most likely try to impress them favorably. The game will be called promptly at 3 o'clock.

F. E. AND C. U. OF A.

Dear Brothers:

We ask that every union man in the county turn out on May 17th at Thorsby to the public speaking in the interest of the F. E. and C. U. of A. Now, boys, as this meeting is to be at a place where we have no local union as yet, it is the duty of all to come prepared to supply the people with dinner. We hope the county will be fully represented, so boys don't fail to come. Let's make it the biggest day since the birth of the union in Chilton, and also be prepared to swell the day at 12 o'clock. Yours for that day,

A. LITTLETON,

WATSON'S MAGAZINE.

The leading exponent of Jeffersonian Democracy, edited by Hon. Thos. E. Watson, of Georgia, theFather of Rural Free Delivery; author of "The Story of France," "Life of Napoleon," "Life and Times of Thomas Jefferson," "Bethany" and other books. Mr. Watson was the People's party nominee for Vice-President in 1896, and for President in 1904. He is today heading a middle-class reform movement which is bound to sweep the country in a short time.

Watson's Magazine is not a Socialist publication. It does not stand for collective ownership of all the means of production. Mr. Watson believes in public or government ownership of railroads, telegraphs and telephones; in municipal ownership of street railways, gas electric lights, water works, etc.; and he believes in private ownership of all industries not natural monopolies.

The middle class—the home owners, farmers, small business men and property owners—won Jefferson's victory in 1800; won Jackson's victory over Nick Biddle's money power in 1832; won Lincoln's victory in 1860. But each time after the flush of victory had died away they became careless of their rights and went to sleep. They have slept a good portion of the time since 1865, but—

Watson's Magazine is waking them up. Another great victory is in the air. Keep in touch with the movement.

THE NEW YORK WORLD

Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World hopes to be in 1906 a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made its arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only paper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 each, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1.00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequaled newspaper and THE UNION together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.00. tf

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY BISHOP C. C. M'CABE.

Subject: The Preacher's Commission.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The New York Avenue M. E. Church was crowded to its utmost capacity Sunday morning when Bishop McCabe preached the Conference sermon. Bishop McCabe preached for nearly an hour. His sermon was a typical, old-style Methodist oration, and evidently pleased his hearers immensely, for his remarks were punctuated from start to finish with cries of "Amen," "Hallelujah!" "Yes, yes," and frequent laughter.

Bishop McCabe's subject was "The Preacher's Commission," and he took for his text the passage in Haggai: "And the desire of all nations shall come." He said:

Haggai was one of the prophets who went to the captive Israelites to help to rebuild the walls of the ruined temple and of their destroyed city. Zechariah was the other one. They were both men of vast hope and mighty faith, and God gave them vision to read the future, and, because they saw the future, they were optimistic men. They did not believe that anything was too good to be true. We need such men. We have enough men who tell us how much better the past was than the present, and who discourage us, and we need men who talk hopefully; men who speak of the future with delight, because they know that the Lord's prayer—that the will of God shall be done on earth as it is in Heaven—will some day be fulfilled. These two prophets went to the Israelites, to Jerusalem, and struggled to rebuild the temple, and they were greatly needed. Cyrus, the King of Persia, allowed them to go. Cyrus was the conqueror of Babylon, and these Jews had fallen into his hands and he treated them finely. Cyrus was a man who believed in religious liberty. It is strange that 2500 years ago there was a man in a high on earth position who believed that every man had a right to worship God according to the dictates of his conscience. I know Cyrus believed in religious liberty because he was not a Jew, and yet he allowed these Jews to go and rebuild their temple and ruined city. I think God loved Cyrus on this account. I know He did, because He sent him a message by Isaiah, "I will go before thee and make thy way straight before thee." Cyrus would have made a great Czar of Russia; there would be no more massacres of the Jews. And what a great Sultan of Turkey he would have made! There would be no more massacres of Armenians simply because they were Christians. I trust in God that the time will come when a great man like Cyrus will occupy every throne on earth, and when the idea that one man can control the conscience of another shall pass away forever. I have myself seen 580 instruments of torture which were used by men and devils—for I think the devil inspired men to use such instruments of torture—to make all men think alike. I looked with amazed interest at the "Maid of Nuremberg," a terrible instrument called by that name. It consists of great, wide doors, in which I counted nine spikes, several inches long. When the victim was asked for the last time "Will you repent?" if he said "No," these doors were slammed, and the victim quivering on these spikes would suffer more anguish than Jesus Christ did on the cross. Men and women to-day would rather die than give up this old Bible, or surrender the right to worship God according to the dictates of conscience. We enjoy liberty to-day because such men and women have lived in the world. Let us prize the boon which they purchased with suffering and blood.

These Israelites had been in captivity for seven years; 42,360 of them went to build the temple. Some were old and some young. The young men shouted for joy, for they did not remember Solomon's Temple, but the old men did, and they wept. They wept, first, because of the contrast between the amount of money which David gave Solomon to build the temple with and the sum they had now. Secondly, because of the contrast between the number of men—Solomon had 80,000, and now there were but 42,360. Solomon had 3600 overseers to keep the people at work—walking delegates, if you please. I wish all walking delegates were for that purpose. I wonder if they ever had a strike among them. I wonder if 16,000 of these 80,000 said to the other eighty-four per cent.: "Unless you join our society you cannot work at all." It would not have been allowed in Solomon's time. I had a letter yesterday from a prominent man in this city, asking me if the church was the friend of labor. I want to state publicly the creed of the M. E. Church. We are the friends of labor; we are the friends of all labor—of every man and woman who has to earn a living by the sweat of the face. We are the friends, not only of the sixteen per cent., but of the 80,000; of 100 per cent. of labor, and anybody who is not a friend of 100 per cent. is not a true friend of labor. That is the creed of the M. E. Church, and I state it for them because they do not seem disposed to state it for themselves. And I believe I state the creed of all Protestant churches in this country.

Then, again, I think the old men wept because of the contrast in the plans of the two temples.

"The Desire of All Nations." That is one of the names of Christ. He had over 300 different appellations. Jacob called Him "Shiloh;" Job, "The Deliverer;" David, "The Shepherd;" Isaiah, "Wonderful," "Counselor," "Mighty God," "Everlasting Father" and "Prince of Peace;" John the Baptist, "The Lamb of God;" Paul, the "Forerunner;" at the Isle of Patmos, Jesus said: "I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last, the bright and morning star," and John called Him "King of Kings and Lord of Lords." But the sweetest name of all is Jesus. O, what a sweet name it is. He is my Saviour. It took an angel to bring that name. Gabriel said: "His name shall be called Jesus"—that is the sweetest name of all—"His name shall be above all names." "At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow."

Jesus, my Saviour, to Bethlehem came,
Born in a manger in sorrow and shame;
O, it is wonderful, blest be His name,
Calling for me! Calling for me!

He did come, "and His own received Him not." The Jews are still looking for Him. That is the most pathetic thing in human history. A great Hebrew scholar has translated the New Testament into Hebrew as a literary venture, and a rich man in London is spending a large fortune in circulating it. I hope it will fly around the earth. Let us get the Jews converted, for that is the quickest way to convert the world. Do you know that there are 500,000 converted Jews? Let the glorious work go on.

Now, "what think ye of Christ?" Is the wearer of all these glorious names divine or human or an angel? Some think He was a good man, a typical man, the best man in the world, but say He was not divine. They do not even admit that He was an angelic being. Some think He was God-man. "God manifest in the flesh." Jesus is divine. Peter believed that. Paul believed it. He said: "By Him all things created that are in Heaven and in earth, visible and invisible; all things were made by Him." Such things cannot be said about an angel or a human being. I think the epistle to the Hebrews was written by Paul to prove the divinity of Jesus. Some scholars say Apollos wrote it, and not Paul, but Paul wrote it. There was not anybody else great enough to write it. We must have a divine Saviour. No angel or human being could do what we need. He must be an Almighty Saviour, One who is "mighty to save and strong to deliver." Our sorrows are too great for human consolation; our sins are too mighty for the power of any man or angel. We must have a divine Saviour—and we have Him. Do you believe Jesus Christ can save a soul in an instant? I know it; I have seen Him do it a thousand times. He can do it. He stands ready. Will you have Him? Do you desire Him?

Brethren in the ministry, it is your business to preach Christ's Gospel to the world. Hurry with the Gospel. This is a sad world. There is one religion that teaches that sorrow is so inescapable, that the best thing that can be done is to be blown out like a candle, and 500,000,000 Buddhists believe it. Hurry with the Gospel. Read John xiv: "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in Me." The presence of sorrow affects me strangely. I have never got used to it. It ought to awaken the sympathy of every human heart. I read a story of a Pullman car when, in the night, all was quiet except a baby's voice. One man called out, angrily: "Where is the mother of that child? I wish she would keep it quiet." The father of the child answered: "The mother of my babe is in her coffin in the baggage car. I hope the passengers will excuse me; I am doing the best I can." The other man rushed out and said: "Sir, forgive me. I did not understand. I would not have said it if I had known. Let me take that babe. I will keep it all night and you shall rest; you must be tired." His heart was changed and full of sympathy.

Oh, the world is full of sorrow and sin; but we have the remedy. Let your feet be like the roe's upon the mountains. God grant the commission anew to-day to preach the Gospel.

The Time is Short.

Ah, my dear friends, you who are letting miserable misunderstandings run on from year to year; you who are keeping wretched quarrels alive because you cannot quite make up your mind that now is the day to sacrifice your pride and kill them; you who are passing men sullenly on the street, not speaking to them out of some silly spite, and yet knowing that it would fill you with shame and remorse if you heard that one of those men were dead to-morrow morning; you who are letting your neighbor starve till you hear that he is dying of starvation, or letting your friend's heart ache for a word of appreciation or sympathy which you mean to give some day—if you could know, and see, and feel all of a sudden that "the time is short," how it would break the spell! how you would go instantly, and do the thing which you might never have another chance to do!—Phillips Brooks.

Responsibility For Possessions.

Do you wish more strength? But if you had more and misused it your condemnation would be greater than is your reproach now for work undone. Do you wish more money? But if you had more its rust would the more surely eat your flesh as fire, while the responsibility for its proper use would burden the soul. Do you crave a larger field of work and influence? But what if, when gained, the field were untilled and the influence that of an evil star?

A young minister had few to hear his best sermons; he complained to John Brown, of Haddington, and this was the reply: "You have as many hearers every time you preach as you will care to answer for at the day of judgment."—Pacific Baptist.

Nearer Heaven.

Bless God for the wilderness; thank God for long nights; be thankful that you have been in the school of poverty and have undergone the searching and testing of much discipline. Take the right view of your trials. You are nearer Heaven for the graves you have dug, if you have accepted bereavements in the right spirit; you are wiser for the losses you have bravely borne, but you are nobler for all the sacrifices you have willingly completed.—Dr. Joseph Parker.

Live Holiness.

It is better to live a good life than to be talking about it, better to live holiness than to proclaim that one lives it. If the sun makes a noise we do not hear it. The brilliant electric lights blaze forth without crackling. The lighthouses flame out their rays over the perilous seas without the proclamation of bells or the firing of cannon. So the truest, purest and best lives simply let their light shine, as the blessed Saviour commanded.

Need of Backbone.

A contemporary suggests that one thing which Christians as well as others need at the present day is backbone. Not a backbone like a ramrod, that cannot yield or bend, but a well articulated spinal column, which is strong enough to hold a man upright, and keep him from being crushed beneath the burdens that press upon him. These are days of easy going piety; and men are too often ruled by compromise rather than by conscience.

STANDARD OIL FLAYED IN PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Secret Rebates and Huge Unlawful Profits Vigorously Attacked by Roosevelt and Prosecutions Promised.

COMMISSIONER GARFIELD'S FINDINGS

Monopoly Built Up by Railroads—Trust Benefits Enormously From "Unjust and Illegal Rates," and Has Advantage Over Independents Even in Open Rates—Passage of Rate Bill and Correction of Humphrey Decision Urged.

Washington, D. C.—Flagrant and persistent violation of the law by the Standard Oil Company, its enormous profits from unlawful secret rates by which it has been enabled to bleed the public of still greater profits, and the connivance of railroads in violation of the law, are laid bare by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress, based on the report of James R. Garfield, Commissioner of Corporations, of his investigation of Standard Oil, which is transmitted with the message.

In the message the President renews his suggestion for Governmental supervision and control of railroads. He declares it necessary not only for the protection of the public, but for the protection of the railroads themselves.

The investigation disclosed, as the President points out, that up to the time when it was begun the Standard Oil Trust profited to the extent of at least $750,000 a year from secret rebates from railroads. In addition it was favored by open rates in all competitive fields.

President Roosevelt declares in effect that the great corporations known as trusts have the railroads at their mercy.

In the President's message and the Garfield report the officials of the Standard Oil Company are accused of lying, of crushing out competition by unlawful means, of obtaining monopolies by secret understandings with railroads, and of practically all of the crimes that have been alleged against the great trust.

The President's only recommendations in his message are that the immunity law be corrected, that the free alcohol bill be passed, which would be a set-back for the Standard, and that the further exploitation by the trusts of coal and oil lands owned by the Government be prevented.

The message is, in part, as follows:

"A very striking result of the investigation has been that shortly after the discovery of these secret rates by the Commissioner of Corporations the major portion of them were promptly corrected by the railroads, so that the most of them have now been done away with. This immediate correction, partial or complete, of the evil of the secret rates is, of course, on the one hand an acknowledgement that they were wrong, and yet were persevered in until exposed; and on the other hand a proof of the efficiency of the work that has been done by the Bureau of Corporations.

"The Department of Justice will take up the question of instituting prosecutions in at least certain of the cases. But it is most desirable to enact into law the bill introduced by Senator Knox to correct the interpretation of the immunity provision rendered in Judge Humphrey's decision. The hands of the Government have been greatly strengthened in securing an effective remedy by the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the case instituted by the Government against the Tobacco Trust, which decision permits the Government to examine the books and records of any corporation engaged in interstate commerce; and by the recent conviction and punishment of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad and certain of its officers.

"But in addition to these secret rates the Standard Oil profits immensely by open rates, which are so arranged as to give it an overwhelming advantage over its independent competitors. The refusal of the railroads in certain cases to pro-rate produces analogous effects. Thus in New England the refusal of certain railway systems to pro-rate has resulted in keeping the Standard Oil in absolute monopolistic control of the field, enabling it to charge from three to four hundred thousand dollars a year more to the consumers of oil in New England than they would have had to pay had the price paid been that obtaining in the competitive fields."

The message continues:

"It is not possible to put into figures the exact amount by which the Standard profits through the gross favoritism shown it by the railroads in connection with the open rates. The profit, of course, comes not merely by the saving in the rate itself as compared with its competitors, but by the higher prices it is able to charge, and (even without reference to these higher prices) by the complete control of the market which it secures, thereby getting the profit on the whole consumption.

"It is unfortunately not true," states the President, "that the Standard Oil is the only great corporation which is benefiting in wholly improper fashion. The Attorney-General's investigation tends to show that the Sugar Trust rarely, if ever, pays the lawful rate."

On the subject of curbing monopolies, the message says:

"The argument is sometimes advanced against conferring upon some Governmental body the power of supervision and control over interstate commerce that to do so tends to weaken individual initiative. Investigations such as this conclusively disprove any such allegation. On the contrary, the proper play for individual initiative can only be secured by such Governmental supervision as will curb those monopolies which crush out all individual initiative. The railroad itself cannot without such Government aid protect the interests of its own stockholders as against one of these great corporations loosely known as trusts.

"The Government should have power by its agents," the President maintains, "to examine into the conduct of the railways—that is, the examiners, under the direction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, should be able to examine as thoroughly into the affairs of the railroad as bank examiners now examine into the affairs of banks."

In conclusion the President writes:

"Though not bearing upon the question of railroad rates, there are two measures of consideration of which is imperatively suggested by the submission of this report. The Standard Oil Company has, largely by unfair, or unlawful methods, crushed out home competition. It is highly desirable that an element of competition should be introduced by the passage of some such law as that which has already passed the House, putting alcohol used in the arts and manufactures upon the free list. Furthermore, the time has come when no oil or coal lands held by the Government, either upon the public domain proper or in territory owned by the Indian tribes, should be alienated. The fee to such lands should be kept in the United States Government, whether or not the profits arising from it are to be given to any Indian tribe, and the lands should be leased only on such terms and for such periods as will enable the Government keep entire control thereof.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

Commissioner Garfield's Report.

Commissioner Garfield, in his report, classes the more important forms of discrimination in favor of the Standard by the railroads, under the heads of secret and semi-secret rates, discriminations in the open arrangement of rates, discriminations in classifications and rules of shipment and discriminations in treatment of private tank cars. He says:

Not only has this resulted in great pecuniary advantage in transportation cost to the Standard, but it has had the far more important effect of giving that company practically unassailable monopolistic control of the oil market throughout large sections of the country.

The manufacture of refined oil, commonly known as kerosene, is about 26,000,000 barrels annually, of which the Standard Oil Company directly and indirectly controls about 23,000,000. It also controls approximately the same proportion of the other finished products of petroleum.

In the full report submitted the commission reaches these conclusions:

"The general result of the investigation has been to disclose the existence of numerous and flagrant discriminations by the railroads in behalf of the Standard Oil Company and its affiliated corporations. With comparatively few exceptions, mainly of other large concerns in California, the Standard has been the sole beneficiary of such discriminations. In almost every section of the country that company has been found to enjoy some unfair advantages over its competitors, and some of these discriminations affect enormous areas."

Many of the secret rates discovered by the Bureau of Corporations have applied only on shipments of oil wholly within single States. Standard Oil which controls refineries in twelve States, is obviously in a position to make extensive use of such intrastate rates, or as they are ordinarily designed, State rates.

For the purpose of more effectively concealing the secret rates given to the Standard Oil, railroads in several important cases, Mr. Garfield finds, have used peculiar methods of billing

A most careful review of the facts and the explanations leads to the following conclusion:

The Standard Oil Company has habitually received from the railroads and is now receiving secret rates and other unjust and illegal discriminations.

Oil is from two to five cents higher in non-competitive than in competitive fields.

The monopolistic control extends from the well of the producer to the doorstep of the consumer.

The New York Central alone of the railroads refused to give access to its records of State rates.

These discriminations have been so long continued, so secret, so ingeniously applied to new conditions of trade, and so large in amount as to make it certain that they were due to concerted action by the Standard and the railroads.

The Standard Oil Company is receiving unjust discrimination in open rates.

The New England territory has been in control of the Standard Oil by reason of the refusal of the New Haven and Boston and Maine to pro-rate—i. e., to join in through rates—on oil shipped from west of the Hudson, and by means of the adjustment of published rates.

The Standard Oil has maintained absolute control of almost the whole section of the country south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi by means of secret rates and open discriminations.

Case after case is cited in Commissioner Garfield's report to prove that the Standard is still receiving secret and unlawful rebates and rates, although the officials of the trust declared at the beginning of the investigation that the Standard was not receiving such discriminations.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MAY 3.

Subject: A Fierce Demoniac Healed, Mark v., 1-20—Golden Text, Mark v. 19—Memory Verse, 15—Topic: Gros, Facts Respecting Salvation.

I. The fierce demoniac (vs. 1-5). 1. "They." Jesus and the disciples. "The other side." They crossed the Sea of Galilee from Capernaum to the Eastern shore. "Gadarenes." This name in Matthew is Gergesenes, and in the Revised Version is Gerasenes.

2. "The tombs." These tombs were either natural caves or recesses hewn out of the rock, with cells upon their sides for the reception of the dead. "A man." Matthew mentions two men, Mark and Luke speak only of one, probably the fiercer of the two, without denying that two were healed. "Unclean spirit." Called unclean because the spirit defiled both body and soul, the outward filth being a type of the inward defilement.

3. "Could bind him." Attempts had been made to bind him because he was exceedingly fierce (Matt. 8:28). Luke tells us that he was naked. 4. "Fetters and chains." Fetters were for the feet; chains for any other part of the body. "Tame him." It was impossible to bring his wild, savage nature under restraint.

5. "Night and day." He was deprived of sleep. "Mountains—tombs." Here the demoniac had his home; for all maniacs were outcast as soon as they became violent, for that age had no provision for taking care of them. Institutions of pity for the unfortunate are among the gifts of Christ; antiquity knew nothing of them, or of the spirit that would produce them. "Crying." Probably with hideous yells. "Cutting himself." Here is an impressive picture of what all men would become under the absolute dominion of Satan.

II. The demoniac goes to Christ and is delivered (vs. 6-13). 6. "Ran and worshiped." As a man he is attracted toward Christ, but when under the influence of the demons he desires to withdraw from Christ. 7. "And cried," etc. It is impossible to account for his strange consciousness of a wonderful power in Jesus, or for the utterance of language which comes, as it were, from a being within the man on any other hypothesis than the existence of beings superinduced upon men. "To do with Thee." Literally, What is there between Thee and me? What have we in common? Why interferest Thou with us? The devils at once recognize their great enemy with divine power. "Torment me not." Herein the true devilish spirit speaks out, which counts it a torment not to be suffered to torment others, and an injury done to itself when it is no more permitted to be injurious to others. 9. "What is thy name?" Christ asked the man (not the demon) his name in order to get his attention and bring him to a consciousness of his own personality. "Legion." The demon answered, speaking through the man. The Roman legion consisted of about six thousand men. The word has come to mean any large number—a host.

10. "Besought." The demon knew who was in authority over him. "Out of the country." This is explained in Luke 8:31. They did not wish to be sent "into the deep;" that is, the abyss of hell, into the bottomless pit (Rev. 20:3). Send us anywhere, anywhere but to perdition. Send us to the most shattered man; send us to the lowest creature, into man or beast, bird or reptile; anywhere but into hell. 11. "Great herd." Though the Jews did not eat pork the Roman soldiers did and the swine may have been kept to supply their wants. 12. "Into the swine." How could demons enter swine? We do not know. But we see many things quite as difficult to understand. The connection of mind and body in us is an equally great mystery. 13. "Gave them leave." The devil cannot so much as trouble swine without leave from God. "Were choked." Cavilers have charged our Lord with wrong doing in "sending" the demons into the swine and thus causing such a great loss to the owners; but it should be noted that what Jesus did was to drive them out of the man and then permit them to go where they wished.

III. The effect of the cure (vs. 14-17). 14. "Fled." Their occupation was gone. "In the city." Gergesa, near the sea. "Went out." The quickness with which intelligence flies in the East. Matthew says, "Behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus."

15. "See him—sitting." There is a marvelous contrast between the man's former and his present condition. Instead of wandering among tombs, in nakedness, and filling the people with terror by his wild, maniacal ravings, he is now sitting at the feet of Jesus, clothed and in his right mind. Those who come to Christ and take Him as their Savior always come into their right mind. "Were afraid." They knew they were in the presence of one who had great power, and perhaps they feared Jesus might send upon them the punishment they knew they deserved on account of their sins. When Christ comes into a place there is either deadly fear or great rejoicing. 16. "They saw it." Those who fed the swine and others who may have been there when Jesus landed. Then, too, the disciples may have told the story. 17. "To depart." They no doubt feared greater losses. They preferred swine to Christ.

IV. The saved man at work for Christ (vs. 18-20). 18. "Be with Him." How different is this grateful man from what he was before he met the Savior. He loved Jesus now and desired to join himself to Christ.

19. "Go home—tell." We owe our first duty to our home and friends. 20. "Decapolis." From deka—ten, and polis—city, meaning ten cities.

CLEAN RUGS AND CARPETS
Perhaps no task is more dis-the average housekeeper than for floor" coverings. Since very unsanitary.

"PE-RU-NA WORKED SIMPLY MARVELOUS"

Suffered Severely
With Headaches—
Unable to Work.

Miss Lucy V. McGivney, 452 3rd Ave., Troy, N. Y., writes:
"For many months I suffered severely from headaches and pains in side and back, sometimes being unable to attend to my daily work. I am better, now, thanks to Peruna, and am as active as ever and have no more headaches.
The way Peruna worked in my case was simply marvelous."
We have in our files many grateful letters from women who have suffered with the symptoms named above. Lack of space prevents our giving more than one testimonial here.
It is impossible to even approximate the amount of suffering which Peruna has relieved, or the number of women who have been restored to health and strength by its faithful use.

Revised Formula.
For a number of years requests have come to me from a multitude of grateful friends, urging that Peruna be given a more laxative quality. I have been experimenting with a laxative addition for a length of time, and now feel grateful to announce to the friends of Peruna that I have incorporated such a quality in the medicine which, in my opinion, can enhance its well-known beneficial effects.

REPAIRING BRAIN.
A Certain Way By Food.

Every minister, lawyer, journalist, physician, author or business man is tried under pressure of modern conditions to the active and sometimes over-active use of the brain.
Analysis of the excreta thrown out by the pores shows that brain work breaks down the phosphate of potash, separating it from its heavier companions, albumen, and plain common sense teaches that this elemental principle must be introduced into the body anew each day, if we would replace the loss and rebuild the brain tissue.
We know that the phosphate of potash, as presented in certain field grain, has an affinity for albumen and that is the only way gray matter in the brain can be built. It will not answer to take the crude phosphate of potash of the drug shop, for nature rejects it. The elemental mineral must be presented through food directly from nature's laboratory.
These facts have been made use of in the manufacture of Grape-Nuts, and any brain worker can prove the value of the proper selection of food by making free use of Grape-Nuts for ten days or two weeks. Sold by grocers everywhere and in immense quantities. Manufactured by the Postum Cereal Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Origin of Familiar Sea Terms.
There is hardly a language which has not been called upon to provide at least one of the curious sea terms which are in constant use and whose origin is so obscure.
For instance, says the Marine Journal, the word "admiral" is not of English origin, but is from the Arabic "Emil el Bagh," or Lord of the Sea. Captain comes from the Latin caput, but mate is from Icelandic, and means a companion or equal. Coxswain is a word whose derivation would never be guessed. The coxswain was originally the man who pulled the after oar in the captain's boat, which was known as the cockboat. This in turn is a corruption of the word coracle, a small round boat used on the Wye and Usk rivers. So coxswain comes to us from the Welsh.
Commodore is not so difficult to trace to its beginning. It is simply the Italian commandatore, meaning commander. No such person as Davy Jones ever existed, though we often hear of him and his locker. One should speak of "Duffy Jonah's locker," for that was the original. Duffy is the West Indian name for spirit or ghost, while Jonah refers, of course, to the prophet.
Another curious case of a term gradually corrupted out of its original form is the dog watch. It was originally the "dodge watch," because it lasted only two hours instead of four, and this makes it possible that the same men shall not be on duty every day during the same hours.
Then there is the "sheet anchor," the name given to the largest anchor carried by a vessel. It is really "shote anchor," and is so called because of its great weight, which makes it easy to shoot out in case of emergency.
